PASTOR NEWTON DENIES KILLING OF MRS. KELLY

In Testimony at Pittsfield, Ill., Tries to Shift Blame to 'Adopted Daughter,' Miss Myra Hanan.

SAYS HE WAS THROWN INTO AUTO AND TIED

Repudiates Confession, Already in Evidence, and Implicates Leading State Witness.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

PITTSFIELD, Ill., Nov. 20. — Rev. Colonel Ellsworth Newton, his confession repudiated, left the witness stand after six hours of direct examination today. His trial for the murder of Mrs. Maybelle Kelly will be resumed Monday. He left with the jury, the unmistakable implication that it was not he, but his "adopted daughter," Miss Myra Hanan, who beat Mrs. Kelly to death with a hammer last July, and threw her body into the Mississippi River. Miss Hanan, 37 years old, has been a member of the Newton household for 14 years and is known as the pastor's adopted daughter.

It was Miss Hanan who gave investigators the evidence that led them to file the murder charge against him. It was her statement that caused the 51-year-old minister to change his denials to a calm account of the crime and his reason for committing it. This confession to the police, previously admitted in evidence, the Rev. Mr. Newton repudiated in its essential details today.

Changes His Story.

The reference to Miss Hanan came, when in low pitched voice Newton reached the point of the killing of Mrs. Kelly. In his signed confession, he had described it as a tussle with the 45-year-old wife of a rural mail carrier, whose infatuation for her former pastor led her to hysterical insistence that he join her in flight from her husband.

He had stopped his automobile on the highway, he testified today. Another machine pulled in front. He heard a woman's voice: "Is that you, daddy?" Mrs. Kelly said: "Isn't that Myra?" Then, as a figure advanced from the other machine Mrs. Kelly added: "It is." He said he was thrown into another car and bound when he stepped out of his automobile. Later he said, he was released and put in another car. There he said he found Myra Hanan at the wheel, evading his questions about Mrs. Kelly and saying: "It had to be done."

Throughout the bizzare narrative, Newton's voice was low, but distinct, until he reached the passages which differed vitally from his previous account. Then, Judge A. Clay Williams told him to speak at least loud enough for the Court to hear a few feet away. At times, the defendant almost appeared to be talking to himself. He did not fidget in his seat; his eyes and hands were steady.

Explaining the Money.

Early in his testimony, he explained that a $10 bill, bearing the same serial number as some paid to Mrs. Kelly the day she disappeared, when she drew $1950 from the bank, had been received by him from her that day. A package containing the rest of the money, later was turned over to authorities by Miss Hanan. She said Newton gave it to her. It was placed in his machine by Mrs. Kelly, the pastor said.

Newton admitted he had a loaded revolver in the car; he failed to mention the pint of whisky, he ahd spoken of before and agreed that he had placed Mrs. Kelly's luggage, packed in suitcases he had bought for her in Moberly, in the car. He told how he drove, without lights to pick her up at an early hour, July 13, after she left a note pinned to her pillow, informing her husband she was "going west" with friends.

Identifies Iron Dumbbell.

Newton identified as his, an iron dumbbell which State witnesses have said was found wrapped in his clothing at a spot to which he directed them after confessing the killing. He said he had found it, and "just carried it in his car." He said he never before had seen the rope which witnesses testified was found in his machine.

Thus far his testimony was much like his confession.

The hammer which the State contends he used to beat Mrs. Kelly to death, was in his car with other tools, he calmly admitted.

"I don't think there's any question that it's mine. It was going to exchange it for a new one."

FIRST HARD FREEZE OF YEAR IN SOUTH, FROM TEXAS EAST

Snow as Far Down as Atlanta, Ga., and "Worst Is Yet to Come."

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 20.—The first hard freeze of the year nipped southern states from Texas to the Atlantic Seaboard today in the wake of cold rains. Temperatures ranging from 22 in Atlanta to 14 in Kansas City were recorded.

Snow sifted over the Upper Mississippi Valley southward to St. Louis and eastward to New York and Pennsylvania. Light snows fell as far south as Atlanta with the heaviest fall in the south, 5 inches at Flat Top, W. Va.

Temperatures in the east generally still were above freezing early today but a cold rain had set in and the Weather Bureau said this would drive the mercury downward rapidly. Forecasters said the "worst is yet to come" in the South.

Minimum temperatures reported over the United States included Chicago, 18; Kansas City, 14; Memphis, Tenn., 24; New York, 36; Boston, 34; Washington, 34; Savannah, Ga., 34; Macon, Ga., 28.

JAPAN MERGES TWO FLEETS TO BLOCKADE CHINA'S COAST

Admiral Hasegawa Adds Second Navy, or Cruiser Scouting Force, to His Active War Unit.

TOKIO, Nov. 20.—The Japanese Navy established today the China Sea Fleet, charged with the coastal blockade to Chinese shipping.

Vice-Admiral Kioyshi Hasegawa, who hitherto has been commander-in-chief of Japan's Third Fleet, largely concentrated about Shanghai waters, was named commander of the unit.

His new command will include besides the Third Fleet, largely composed of small cruisers and destroyers, the Second Fleet, or cruiser scouting force of Japan's main naval force.

The First Fleet, the battleship unit, will remain under separate command.

WINTER WEATHER FILLS MUNICIPAL LODGING HOUSE

Shelter Given to 521 Transients With 40 Others Being Housed in District Stations.

The arrival of the coldest weather so far recorded this fall saw the Municipal Lodging House at 2207 Chestnut street filled to capacity by 8 o'clock last night.

At that hour there were 521 transients in the place, and officials said they would be unable to accommodate any more for 48 hours, the period for which a guest is granted shelter.

Police, seeking to provide quarters for the overflow, housed 40 men in the various district stations. The temperature stood at 21 degrees from 2 to 9 p. m.

Too Cold, D'Annunzio Stays Home.

ROME, Nov. 20. — Italy's poet-warrior, Gabriele D'Annunuzio, decided today against attending his own installation as president of the Italian Royal Academy tomorrow. Because the weather turned cold, D'Annunzio will stay at his Lake Garda retreat, in Northern Italy. He will send a letter to be read at the Rome ceremonies, which will include a memorial service for his predecessor, the late Guglielmo Marconi, inventor of the wireless.

LOYALIST FLYERS BOMB ZARAGOZA; MANY CASUALTIES

WEATHER IS BAD ON 200-MILE LINE

Fighting in Northeast Spain Confined to Artillery Units—Insurgents Make Slight Gains Near Madrid

By the Associated Press.

MADRID, Nov. 20. — The rebel stronghold, Zaragoza, was bombed by 35 Government airplanes today in retaliation for recent air raids on Government cities by insurgents.

The fleet of Government planes, after raiding Zaragoza, attacked Fuentes de Ebro, 15 miles southeast of Zaragoza, which Government dispatches said was the new location of the insurgent army's general headquarters.

Flyers said they caused heavy damage and many casualties in the insurgent cities on the Aragon front.

300 Killed Three Weeks Ago.

The Air Ministry said nearly 300 persons were killed three weeks ago when nine insurgent planes raided Lerida, a much smaller town than Zaragoza, which has a population of about 250,000.

Insurgents on the front here, taking advantage of clearing weather yesterday, struck at outlying Government positions in the Brunete sector, about 15 miles west of Madrid, forcing Government soldiers to abandon positions recently occupied at Quijorna.

The Air Ministry reports here also included an announcement that 16 persons had been killed and 37 wounded in an insurgent air raid on Bujaraloz, 37 miles southeast of Zaragoza.

Valencia was hit by a Mediterranean hurricane, which caused considerable property damage. No casualties were reported, but shipping was endangered, buildings were uproofed and trees were blown over.

Artillery Fight in Aragon.

Reports from Hendaye on the French-Spanish frontier said that bad weather prevented any important movements of troops on the Aragon front, although Government and insurgent artillerymen fought all along the line from Sabinanigo to Teruel.

Insurgent dispatches quoted deserters as reporting that the Government was evacuating a number of Aragon villages in the face of artillery operations.

A Barcelona communique said the principal attack by insurgent artillery was in the Zuera sector north of Zaragoza. Catalan gunners broke up insurgent concentrations at Casa Batanero in the Sabinanigo

A dispatch from Salamanca, insurgent general headquarters, predicted that "certain Powers" in Europe and the Americas soon would announce recognition of Generalissimo Francisco Franco's insurgent administration. Only Poland and Yugoslavia were named.

Msg. Ildebrando Antoniutti, the Vatican's representative in Insurgent Spain, arrived in San Sebastian from Pamplona on an inspection tour of Northern church dioceses. He was expected to proceed to Bilbao, Santander and Gijon.

ITALY TO CLOSE 5 CONSULATES IN RUSSIA BY SOVIET REQUEST

Action Will Bring to 13 the Number of Foreign Offices to Be Closed Under Reciprocity Policy.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Nov. 20.—Five Italian consulates in Russia will be closed Jan. 20 at the request of the Soviet Government, it was announced today, bringing to 13 the number of foreign consulates shut down within a few months.

The Italian consulates to be abandoned after diplomatic negotiations are at Leningrad, Kiev, Tiflis, Novosibirsk and Batum, leaving only one Italian consular post, at Odessa.

Diplomatic circles said that Russia tried to effect closing of the Odessa consulate too, acting under a reciprocity agreement which provides for recognition of equal numbers of diplomatic representatives by the two nations.

Russia has no consulate in Italy except in Rome. To equalize the situation Italy offered to receive a Russian consul in Naples.

Consulates of Germany, Poland and Japan have been cut down recently by Russian action under the reciprocity agreement.

TEXTILE MAN HELD IN FRENCH INQUIRY INTO FASCIST PLOT

MORE CACHES OF ARMS DISCOVERED

Some of Seized Munitions of German and Italian Make — Public Buildings Guarded.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—(Sunday.) — Surete Nationale agents disclosed today the arrest of Jean Dominique Moreau de la Meuse, wealthy textile manufacturer and president of the Societe Textile Ardennaise, on charges of "association with malefactors."

The agents, seeking "higher ups" of a secret revolutionary organization, Sais de la Meuse refused to discuss whether he was implicated in any plot.

He was arrested yesterday after a lengthy questioning. Surete officials said they seized documents in a raid on De la Meuse's Paris apartment.

New caches of arms and munitions were confiscated in raids at Caen and Toulouse.

Late last night the Surete Nationale announced it had seized seven machine guns and 37 cases which contained, in addition to arms, hand grenades and rifle cartridges.

The cache was found in a villa near Noisy-le-Sec, northeastern suburb of Paris. The villa, owned by the Noisy-le-Sec municipality, has been uninhabited for several years. Several officials of the suburb were questioned.

Squads of mobile guardsmen were posted on highways leading out of Paris to watch the traffic for cars owned by individuals the Surete listed as suspects.

Detectives were searching for "two foreign agents" in the Government's drive to unmask leaders of what appeared to be a plot to overthrow the Republic.

Surete officials said the hunted men were employed by "one or two foreign Governments the names of which were not hard to imagine."

Police raids were made in nearly every section of the country in the search for additional arms and munitions caches of the rightist revolutionary group.

Enough stores of arms and ammunition to equip a small army were uncovered in previous raids growing out of the Government's investigation of "Les Cagoulards," or "The Hooded Ones," which was believed to be one section of the revolutionary movement. Police said many of the arms were of German and Italian make.

Marx Dormoy, Minister of the Interior and head of the Surete Nationale, said the movement was directed by a secret revolutionary committee organized to seize power by force.

Surete officials stated the investigation would continue indefinitely. Premier Camille Chautemps told the Chamber of Deputies yesterday it had already disclosed a situation of "terrible gravity."

The investigation, they said, would be concentrated on the "men behind the plot and the origin of the money used to buy the guns."

Detachments of mobile guards were placed about Government buildings and streets nearby were watched closely. Police were reported to have surprised four men inside the Ministry of War Wednesday night. Only officials or persons with passes were permitted to enter the Ministry buildings after 9 p. m.

LOYALIST OFFICIAL PLEDGES AID IN REOPENING CHURCH

Would Be First in Government Territory; Basques Appeal to Minister of Justice.

BARCELONA, Nov. 20. — A spokesman for Manuel Irujo said today the Republican Minister of Justice had pledged his aid toward opening the first Catholic church in Government Spain since the civil war began.

Irujo received a delegation of Basque refugees who asked him to help them obtain a church to be known as the church of the Basques. His representative said the Minister, a Catholic, agreed to be their spokesman and would ask Cabinet approval for a church all Catholics could attend.

Religious services were restored in Government-held Spain this year at Irjuo's request, but masses have had to be held in private. The Cabinet postponed opening churches until "a more opportune time."

MILITIA HELD READY TO GO TO AKRON, O.

Goodyear Plant, Closed by Sitdown Strike, Expects to Reopen Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

AKRON, O., Nov. 20.—Two thousand Ohio National Guardsmen were ordered to stand by today for possible duty at the Akron plants of Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.

Leaders of the CIO United Rubber Workers reported nearly all the 300 to 600 workers who started a sit-down strike Friday in protest against a lay-off plan had left the plants. This, the union leaders said, was in obedience to their orders and to the union's constitution, which forbids sit-down strikes.

The strikers had occupied part of the company's three plants for 24 hours. The entire factory closed as a result, making 12,000 workers idle. Goodyear officers said the plants would reopen Monday. Union officers announced they would be picketed.

Adjutant-General Emil F. Marx ordered the National Guard units to remain "on notice" until next week.

John D. House, president of Goodyear Local No. 2 of the United Rubber Workers, indicated a formal strike vote—possibly affecting all the Goodyear workers—would be taken at a mass meeting tomorrow.

CAPE TOWN-LONDON ROUND TRIP FLIGHT IN 5 DAYS, 17 HOURS

Mrs. Betty Kirby-Green and Flying Officer Break Records of Amy Johnson Mollison.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—A night club hostess, whose friends raffled bottles of champagne to finance a round trip Cape Town-London flight, came home today the coholder of three air records. Mrs. Betty Kirby-Green and her pilot, Flying Officer A. E. Clouston, landed at Croydon airfield five days, 17 hours and 28 minutes from the time they left.

Besides bettering Amy Johnson Mollison's record of seven days, 22 hours and 42 minutes for the round trip, they set one-way records in both directions. They flew to Cape Town in 45 hours and two minutes. Miss Johnson's time was three days, six hours and 26 minutes. Returning in 57 hours and 23 minutes, they topped H. L. Brooks' time of four days and 20 minutes.

BRITISH SHIP WITH ARMS HALTED IN SPANISH WATERS

English Warship Sends It Under Escort of Destroyer to Gibraltar.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—(Sunday).—Malta dispatches report today that the British freighter Euphorbia has been stopped in Spanish waters by a British warship and ordered to Gibraltar under escort of the British destroyer Hasty. An Admiralty spokesman said the freighter was ordered to Gibraltar under the act whereby British ships are prohibited from carrying munitions to Spain.

Yesterday the British steamer African Mariner was unloaded at Valetta, Malta, under the eyes of a British police guard because it was suspected of carrying Russian arms to the Spanish Government. The searchers found no contraband.

SOVIET SCIENTISTS END SIXTH MONTH ON FLOE IN ARCTIC

They Report Solving Riddle of Drift of Ice From North Pole.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Nov. 20.—Four Soviet scientists, cruising down from the top of the world on an ice floe at the whim of Arctic currents, today celebrated the passing of a half-year of their adventure.

Pyotr Shirsov, hydrobiologist, wirelessed Moscow that the party had solved "the riddle of the (ice) drift from the North Pole to the Atlantic," which by moving "millions of kilometers of thick, strong ice" is "one of the grandest phenomena of nature."

The party landed by plane within a few miles of the North Pole last May 21. Since then, the ice field has been moving in a zig-zag course, but generally in the direction of Northeast Greenland. Today the distance of the drift measured 450 miles.

"If the speed of the drift is not reduced, we may expect to reach 80 degrees latitude (which embraces Northern Greenland) by Jan. 3," today's message said. At that point the drift would enter the so-called Eastern Greenland current, which flows south.

"An icebreaker could easily approach the ice floe in May or June," the message said. The expedition's director, Dr. Otto Schmidt, has indicated the party might be taken off the floe in January.

The temperature at the camp today was 20 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit.

ROOSEVELT FEELS BETTER; SEES BUDGET DIRECTOR

Temperature Is Back to Normal and Swelling From Tooth Extraction Has Subsided.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—President Roosevelt, confined to bed most of this week by a tooth infection, felt so much better today that he went over plans for next year's Government expenditures with Daniel Bell, Acting Director of the Budget.

Stephen T. Early, one of the President's secretaries, said Mr. Roosevelt's temperature had returned to normal and that the swelling of his face which followed the extraction of the infected tooth Thursday, had greatly subsided.

When the President's dentist and personal physician visited him this morning, Early said, they found him in "grand shape." They decided, however, that it would be best for him not to try to go to the executive offices yet, so he will see Bell in his study.

Early said the President now is almost certain to carry out his plan to go to Warm Springs, Ga., for Thanksgiving.

Asked what happened to the extracted tooth, which was a lower right molar, Early smiled and said that so far as he is concerned that is and shall remain a mystery.

RUSSIANS SENTENCE 7 TO DIE

Men Are Convicted of Counter Revolutionary Charges in Uzbek.

MOSCOW, Nov. 20.—Seven men were sentenced to death today in the Uzbek Soviet Socialist republic on charges of counter revolutionary wrecking in agriculture. Today's death sentences brought the total for the week to 18.

TWO KILLED, 53 HURT IN DERAILED TRAIN

Passenger Coaches Wrecked in Snowstorm Near Bluefield, West Virginia.

By the Associated Press.

BLUEFIELD, W. Va., Nov. 20.—Two passengers were killed, 53 persons were seriously hurt and 20 others were slightly injured today in the wreck in a snowstorm of a Norfolk & Western passenger train near here. Recovery of three of the injured was doubtful.

Frank Booker, 35 years old, a Negro, of Williamson, W. Va., was thrown from a coach as it overturned and was killed outright. Miss Georgia Clyburn, 61, of Branwell, died of her injuries several hours later.

Those in the most serious condition are Irene Dunman, 15, of Elkhorn, W. Va.; Dora Lee Gammon, 29, school teacher at Kimball, W. Va., and J. W. Dickenson, railroad employe at Bluestone, who was pinned under a coach for two hours.

One coach, bearing a group of women and children, tumbled down an embankment to the edge of the Bluestone River, twice overturning.

Cause Not Determined.

Another passenger coach of the all-steel train and two baggage cars were sprawled atop the tracks. The cause of the accident was not determined.

Rescuers worked in swirling snow on icy embankments for two hours to extricate the injured.

Locking hands, stretcher bearers toiled up icy inclines, carrying their burdens to ambulances and volunteer passenger cars on the nearby highway.

The train, en route from Columbus, O., to Norfolk, Va., had left the Bluestone powerhouse of the Norfolk & Western 10 miles west of here. Many of the injured were workmen returning from the plant's night shift.

Freed After Two Hours.

Dickenson was pinned beneath one of the coaches. Three doctors stood by and administered opiates while trainmen toiled two hours before he was freed. At a hospital later, doctors said one leg would have to be amputated.

All but six of the injured were taken to Bluefield Sanitarium. Many suffered broken bones, all were badly bruised and suffered from shock.

Stephen Shupe of Freeman, W. Va., traveling with his wife and two children to Roanoke, Va., said: "The first thing I knew was feeling the car rumbling over the ties. Then it started turning over, and I didn't know anything more. I never was more scared in my life."

Rebel General Says Most Victims of Accident at Andalusia Were War Captives.

By the Associated Press.

HENDAYE, French-Spanish Frontier, Nov. 20.—Gen. Gonzalo Queipo de Llano, second in command in the Spanish insurgent army, announced in a radio broadcast tonight that 40 persons were killed and 150 injured in a train wreck at Andalusia near Seville.

Most of the dead and injured, he said, were war prisoners from the Asturias on their way to concentration camps in Andalusia.

CHINESE FALL BACK TO NEW LINES WEST OF SOOCHOW

130,000 Entrench East of Nanking as Three Japanese Columns Sweep 40,000 Retreating Troops Before Them.

FOUR-DAY CAMPAIGN WINS YANGTZE FORTS

Invaders Walk Into Key Defense City, Finding Nationalist Rear Guard Too Dazed to Fight After Air Bombardment.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 21.—(Sunday) —Japanese troops continued their westward advance today, following the fall of Soochow, key-point of China's former defense, while the Chinese strove to form a new defense line to bar the invaders' progress to Nanking, from which the Government has been moved.

The new line, along which 130,000 Chinese were reported entrenched, stretched nearly 35 miles from Wusih, 25 miles north of Soochow, to Kiangyin.

Japanese drove toward the line, northwest of Shanghai, from three points.

They announced that after a bombardment which lasted throughout the night their marines had captured the Fushan Forts, stronghold on the Yangtze River 33 miles northeast of Soochow.

40,000 Chinese Retreat.

Further inland, a column from Changshu was reported to have occupied Anchen, which is within eight miles of Wusih.

Another column, from Soochow, advanced along a railway to capture Sinan, six miles from Wusih.

Forty thousand Chinese troops retreated from Soochow after the Japanese took it in what one of their army spokesmen called "one of the most amazing captures of an important city in the annals of war."

At Soochow, the main Japanese force had expected to be confronted by at least one Chinese division and was amazed to meet only small apparently dazed groups of soldiers, with loaded rifles and fixed bayonets, lolling about the city. None of these even questioned the presence of Japanese troops, an army spokesman said.

Tells of Soochow's Fall.

"Our men went directly to a big pagoda overlooking the city, where they hoisted the Japanese flag. Seeing this the Chinese troops fled."

"The Chinese line extending from Fushan (on the south bank of the Yangtze River some 40 miles above Soochow), to Soochow, which the Chinese boasted they would be able to hold for six months, broke down in exactly four days."

A Japanese news correspondent with the Japanese in Soochow gave a somewhat different version of the city's capture. He said a small vanguard of Japanese, hooded against the rain, walked through the gates undetected and raised their flag on a pagoda.

Chinese troops, he said, were thrown into a panic and the Japanese who followed the vanguard quickly captured 2000 of them.

One thousand other Chinese soldiers were killed in hand-to-hand fighting, he reported, while the remainder fled.

Despite these losses, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's aids said the Chinese would resist the advance on Nanking, although fears were expressed that the Japanese soon might break through the defenses both north and south of Lake Taihu, drive on to Wuhu, then above Nanking on the Yangtze River and cut off all Chinese armies in that area.

Some Chinese elements favored withdrawal from Nanking for this reason, pointing out that it might be extremely hazardous because of the possibility of combined aerial and naval attacks on Chinese troops retreating across the Yangtze, a mile or more wide at Nanking.

On a 100-Mile Defense Line.

With Nanking's main defenses punctured in the center and flanked at both ends, the retreating forces were stretched among myriad creeks and lakes.

On the success of their stand precariously hung the fate of 50,000,000 Chinese in two of China's wealthiest provinces, Kiangsu and Chekiang,

ENVOYS TO QUIT NANKING WHEN CHIANG LEAVES

U. S. and British Embassies to Be Moved From Partially Abandoned Capital Wednesday.

TROOPS FROM WEST JOIN DEFENDERS

Civilian Population Flees to the Hills as Nationalist Government Goes 750 Miles Inland.

By the Associated Press.

NANKING, Nov. 20.—The capital of China was moved from here today and taken 750 miles farther inland to Chungking, in Szechuan Province.

While full evacuation was not expected to be completed for at least a week, the transfer of central government ministries and officials to several inland cities was well under way and a systematic stripping of equipment, machinery and furnishings for removal was begun.

With the Government gone, with the civilian population fleeing to the hills, Nanking will be an empty prize if captured by the Japanese.

But Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, whose aids have declared China will offer a strong defense of the city, indicated today that he intends to put up a bitter fight outside Nanking's walls. New troops from West China marched in today and joined reserve forces entrenched in the hills outside the city.

Embassies to Leave Wednesday.

It was learned in official circles, meanwhile, that embassies were not planning to leave Nanking until Wednesday.

The exact plans of the United States Embassy were not received here but it was known that three gunboats were standing by to evacuate the staff and archives when required.

The British Embassy staff plans to proceed to Hankow Wednesday aboard H. M. S. Bee while H. M. S. Cricket stood by, prepared to evacuate 20 British persons remaining.

It was understood the delay of the embassies in evacuating was due to the fact that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and other officials still remained in Nanking.

A number of Americans and other foreigners were understood to have left Nanking for Hankow or other points up the Yangtze River but disrupted communications kept the details from Shanghai.

Although a sentiment for a peace at any price was expressed in some quarters as the Japanese pushed back the Chinese forces defending Nanking in three different sectors of the defense line southeast of here, the army staff repeated its determination to keep on fighting.

Foreign observers declared any move by the Government to accept oppressive peace terms might split China.

Statement by Government.

Civil departments, the Government declared, were withdrawing from Nanking only "in order to conform to requirements of the present state of hostilities and to be more advantageously situated to direct national affairs and maintain prolonged resistance."

"Upon the bodies of our heroic dead the foundation for a new, independent China is being firmly laid," a Government statement said. "Our submission to Japan neither would be compatible to our national existence nor consonant with the maintenance of international justice and peace.

"Japan is gravely mistaken in her belief that by pushing westward she can force Chinese acceptance of Japan's humiliating terms because China has fully made up her mind that her salvation rests in fighting the invaders to the last man.

"In her present struggle China has behind her the full sympathy of foreign nations and the solid support of her own people. There is no question that she ultimately can attain her object of maintaining her national existence and independence."

flight from the Kelly home, Newton continued: "I asked Mrs. Kelly, 'What are you going to do with that money?' after she mentioned she had some with her. She opened the door of the dash board compartment and put in a package. I said, 'Don't let that gun fall out.' She said, 'Is that your gun?'"

The discussion turned on where she was going. Newton said she "made several suggestions, but she made no decision. She mentioned having left a note for her husband saying she was going to California."

The minister's voice dropped lower as he neared the point at which the fatal struggle on the highway was alleged to have occurred.

"Mrs. Kelly refused to stop for the night in Hannibal and at her request I drove into Illinois," he continued. He took the wrong route, missed the Mark Twain bridge, and turned around to get back.

"She crouched down in the car as another came by. I turned my head. The other machine turned around.

"I waited what seemed like an eternity. I killed the engine. The car came back and went on past us. It stopped and backed up. The machine ahead had no lights then.

Asserts He Was Attacked.

"Someone stepped out of the other car.

"Mrs. Kelly said, 'Isn't that Myra?' I said nothing. Mrs. Kelly said: 'It is.'"

"The voice outside the car said: 'Oh, daddy, are you having car trouble? Is that tire down?'"

"Then there was some apology. I had got out of the car. I went down to the other machine. When I reached the car, somebody grabbed my wrist and gave me a quick jerk. Somebody from behind got a hold of my left leg and lifted me up. I struggled. I went into the car on my head.

"I heard, above noises I was making, Mrs. Kelly scream: 'Oh, don't.'"

Newton said he remembered nothing more than "dimly" he was in mistery and agony and didn't know what it was about."

He was still lying down in the car. There was something under his head and a light covering over his face.

His attorney asked him: "Did you recognize the voice back there on the highway?" "I thought I did."

Later in his testimony he said he had "not definitely" placed the voice. Resuming the narrative of the ride with his captors, he said the car finally stopped and a voice said:

"Daddy, are you all right? Awful sorry she had to die, but it had to be done."

I was untied, and removed from the car. I sat down on the running board of the machine, I was sick and weak. My car had stopped behind. Then it was driven away.

"Gone Down the River."

"Myra said: 'Dont' sit on that, lean against me.' She said 'lean against me.' I got back in the machine and Myra drove off."

He asked about Mrs. Kelly and first "got the response: She's all right." Later he was told: "She's gone down the river."

"We drove on. The car was swaying dangerously and I found we had a puncture. I got out and changed a tire. Myra helped with the jack. When I got back in, I dropped something and went to pick it up. She said: 'Come, let's get away.'

"I kept urging and asking questions. My head was clearing and I thought I had a right to know what happened. The answers were vague. She said something about finding a place to dispose of the body, but the bridge was lighted like a carnival."

Blood on His Clothing.

Myra Hanan drove him to within a block of their home, he said. She got out and he drove on to his garage. He made himself coffee, took off his clothes and noticed "plenty of blood" on them.

He dressed again, rolled his stained clothing in a bundle and tossed it into the car. At daylight, he looked in the machine and saw the blood. "I didn't see it all but I saw plenty."

The minister, responding to questions by his attorney, then began categorical denial of all admissions of guilt contained in his confession. He denied he had struck Mrs. Kelly, or had thrown her body in the river.

He told how he hosed his car, inside and out, at his son's filling station, flushing even under the seats.

He said he did not recall having talked next day to the State's witness who saw him with a diamond ring resembling Mrs. Kelly's. "I don't want to lie about it, things were vague that day." He admitted however that he had the ring in his pocket that day.

Late that evening he was summoned to the court house at Paris where authorities from three counties began the two days' questioning that resulted in filing the murder charge against him.

He specifically repudiated parts of his confession in which he described how he had hit Mrs. Kelly on the head with a hammer and disposed of her body. He said he was cursed, called a "smart Alec," a "cold-blooded killer" and a "racketeering parson" during the questioning. He finally signed the statement to keep his wife from being held prisoner, he said.

The confession was dictated, he added, after some of his questioners had implied that he would "burn" if he didn't talk, but that influence would be used in his behalf if he signed a statement admitting the crime.

Morning Testimony.

For two hours before the noon recess Newton told of his career in Northeastern Missouri as a Baptist minister and his association with Mrs. Kelly.

He first met Mrs. Kelly when she asked him to call at her home shortly after he took the pulpit at Paris, after he had finished a four-year term as Mayor of Kahoka, Mo., he testified.

Later she joined his church and made him her confidant concerning her marital troubles. She told him as long as 10 years ago, he testified, that she intended to leave Kelly.

Newton was asked about the pit dug in his garage. Newton said he had dug it intending to enlarge the garage.

Thomas Proctor, Prosecuting Attorney at Paris, was reprimanded by the Court for referring to the pit in the garage as a grave.

RED CROSS SENDS $15,000 TO AID TYPHOON VICTIMS

Number of Destitute in Central Philippines Storm Area Estimated at 20,000.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—The Red Cross cabled $15,000 today to its Philippine chapter to help victims of the Armistice Day typhoon. James K. McClintock, vice-chairman in charge of finance, said the chapter estimated 20,000 persons were destitute and 130,000 more would need some emergency assistance.

Deaths in the typhoon's path were expected to exceed 200, and property damage was estimated at $4,000,000.

It was the most disastrous storm in the Philippines in 25 years. The loss of life was especially heavy at sea, where many small craft were wrecked. Sixty-five ship passengers, sailors and fishermen were drowned.

JAPANESE TROOPS ADVANCING TOWARD NEW CHINESE LINE

Despite a heavy toll of dead and wounded, staggering losses of material and great expense, the Japanese had 200,000 men, 300 airplanes and vastly superior tanks and artillery in the field. Against them were ranged 300,000 Chinese, with a few planes and inferior artillery. The Chinese had the added advantage of fortified defense positions and familiarity with the lake-studded region, but also the handicap of disrupted communications and supply lines.

It was learned authoritatively today that friction between the Nanking Government and certain Chinese generals concerning troop disposition caused Chinese forces to be replaced in the Hangchow Bay area last week, on the day Japanese units landed there. The new Chinese units wilted before the Japanese, forcing China's withdrawal from Pootung and Hungjao, Shanghai sections that previously had been successfully defended.

Foreign observers have declared that political friction and military incompetence were largely responsible for China's reverses.

Expressing only praise for the bravery of Chinese troops, foreign military authorities criticised Chinese leadership for a fatal lack of co-operation and the breakdown of supply lines.

The Japanese advance brought Kwangfoh, where five American missionaries have established a refugee camp, within the Japanese lines. The Americans are believed to be safe. They included Dr. Mason Young of Anderson, S. C.; C. G. McDaniels of Blackstone, Va.; H. A. McNulty of New York City; Henry H. McMillan of Wagram, N. C.; and a nurse, Lucy Grier.

GOVERNMENT SUPPRESSES EDITION OF ROME PAPER

Objects to Article Advocating Better Relations Between Italy and France.

ROME, Nov. 20.—The Ministry of Popular Culture announced today that yesterday's edition of the newspaper La Tribuna had been suppressed because of an article advocating better relations between France and Italy.

A communique said the paper had been ordered withdrawn because of "the substance and a certain statement" in the article, which was written by La Tribuna's Paris correspondent, Francesco Scardaoni.

Informed quarters interpreted the action as an indication of the Italian Government's anxiety over the conversations between Chancellor Adolf Hitler of Germany and Viscount Halifax, British Cabinet Minister. It was said Premier Mussolini desired to eliminate any impression abroad that Italy was attempting to offset a possible British-German rapprochement by making overtures to France.

Senator Nye's Daughter Hurt.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Marjorie Nye of Washington, 20-year-old daughter of Senator Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota, suffered a fractured ankle and lacerations on the head here today when an automobile collided with a coal truck in the Bronx. Rose Castone, 26 years old, of Minneapolis, Minn., was treated for a possible fracture of the skull. The women were riding with Henry Schmidt, 21, and John Gilmartin, 26, both of New Rochelle, N. Y., who were injured slightly. Gilmartin received a summons because, it is alleged, he failed to give the truck the right of way.

WHAT ADOLF HITLER TOLD LORD HALIFAX

German-Japanese-Italian Line-up a Settled Fact in World Affairs.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Nov. 20.—The press service "From Germany" said today that Reichsfuehrer Hitler had told Great Britain's special envoy, Viscount Halifax, the German-Japanese-Italian triangle must be accepted as a factor in world affairs. Government spokesmen gave assurances this source was "usually right."

According to this agency, Hitler and Halifax "frankly and trustfully" exchanged views on the reasons for the present international difficulties and misunderstandings.

Hitler repeated that Germany was striving for peace and expressed the belief there was no inherent reason for conflict between Britain and its friends on one side and Germany and its group on the other.

He told the British emissary the Berlin-Rome axis, as well as the German-Japanese-Italian triangle, was a fact other nations must take as immutable and make allowance for in all international calculations. Germany, Hitler said, clung to its theory that bilateral pacts were preferable to collective security arrangements.

One result of Halifax' visit was a formal invitation to the German Foreign Minister, Baron Konstantin von Neurath, to visit England, although no date was fixed. Von Neurath had cancelled a previous visit scheduled for June 21, just before he was to have left for London

Halifax' talks with German leaders seemed more and more to have been designed to thaw previous coldness to the British scheme of a general European settlement. Official overtures were expected to follow based on the more complete British understanding of Hitler's objectives.

As the British envoy prepared to leave, the Government turned to preparation for an official welcome tomorrow for Hungarian Premier Koloman Daranyi. Daranyi and Koloman von Kanya, his foreign minister, will confer with Hitler and von Neurath. A Budapest dispatch said their talks might include Hungarian rearmament and Hungarian-German financial relations.

Halifax returned to Berlin today with von Neurath, from Berchtesgaden, Hitler's Bavarian estate. It was announced officially that he would leave for London tomorrow.

Halifax had a long telephone conversation with London from Berlin and it had been reported he would extend his visit. He spent the day as the guest fo Colonel-General Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Hitler's principal aid, at the Scorf Meadow hunting lodge.

SHANGHAI CENSORSHIP LIFTED

Capture by Japanese Ends Chinese Curb on Press Dispatches.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 20.—Press censorship has been discontinued in cable and radio offices in the International Settlement since the capture of Shanghai by the Japanese. Censorship had been in effect since 1930.

When it first was ordered, foreign consulates contended it was not sanctioned by treaty, but cable companies submitted after they were threatened with total loss of their inland business if they refused to comply. So far as is known, correspondents have had no difficulty getting out any news stories they wished to send during the Chinese-Japanese war.

Mussolini Takes Over Post Of Minister for Italian Africa

Swift Administration Changes Taken as Move to Tighten Grip on Empire—Duke of Aosta Viceroy of Ethiopia.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Nov. 20.—Premier Mussolini tightened his grip on Italy's new Fascist empire tonight in a series of swift administrative changes which presaged complete reorganization of the empire's internal affairs. He assumed the portfolio of Minister for Italian Africa—his fifth cabinet post—and linked Italy's royal family more closely with the conquest of Ethiopia by naming the Duke of Aosta, King Victor Emanuel's cousin, Viceroy.

Newspapers immediately hailed Mussolini, heretofore Duce of Fascism, as "the Duce of Empire."

The King was said to have hesitated over the appointment of his 39-year-old cousin as Viceroy before the Ethiopian conquest was recognized officially by Britain and France.

Aosta, an air corps officer who helped conquer Ethiopia, took the post of the veteran colonial warrior, Marshal Rodolfo Graziani, who has been in poor health since he was wounded in a native uprising last February.

New Commander Likely.

There were some indications that Gen. Ugo Cavallero, Fascist compatriot of Mussolini, would be named military commander of Ethiopia and that Aosta would have only civil administration of the colony.

Mussolini's new African portfolio was taken from Alessandro Lessona, who was given the professorship of colonies in the University of Rome. Gen. Attilio Teruzzi, veteran of the Spanish Legion, was made first assistant. Mussolini already held the ministries of interior, war, navy and air.

Looking toward the empire's increased financial burdens, Il Duce created a fifteenth cabinet post, the Ministry of Exchange Control, heretofore a division of the Finance Ministry. The division's chief, Felice Guarnieri, was elevated to the ministry. Contrary to first reports, Guarnieri does not succeed Finance Minister Than di Revel Jr., who remains. Renato Ricci, former Fascist Youth chief, was named undersecretary in the Ministry of Corporations.

There have been reports that Graziani, might be assigned to helping the insurgent drive in Spain. If speed and mobility are to prevail in Spain, Graziani would be the logical man for Italy to send there.

For three months at the beginning of the Ethiopian war he fretted behind his entrenchments at Dolo on the border of Italian Somaliland. Finally, in January, 1936, when the Italian advance from the north was being slowed down by the strong Ethiopian armies, Graziani got permission to start from the south in the hope that he could harass Haile Selassie's troops enough to force an immediate shift of Ethiopian troops from the north to the south.

One Order, "Keep Going."

That strategy was more successful than the Italian high command had thought possible, for Graziani gave one order to his motorized column and that was to keep moving.

Tanks, portable machine gun nests, light cannons and other war equipment started rolling through jungle and across veldt, the Blackshirts, fighting their way through the battles of Filtu, Deidei, Godgod and several other ones on to the final battle that resulted in the captutre of Ras Desta's stockaded capital, Neghelli.

So fast did Graziani's army move that it cut through the heart of the Ethiopian lines until the Italians were fighting almost as many of the enemy on their flanks and rear as they were forward. They left the slow-moving enemy far behind.

Graziani, now 55 years old, has been a colonial soldier since even before the World War. After the 1918 armistice he went to Africa to conquer Libya. It was in this latter campaign that he first became famous for his ability to move an army against the enemy with incredible speed.

FRANCE REINFORCING DEFENSE OF INDO-CHINA

Cabinet Provides 'Large Sums' for More Warships and Planes There.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 20. — Minister of Colonies Marius Moutet announced tonight the Cabinet had appropriated "large sums" to reinforce the military defenses of French Indo-China.

The announcement was made a few days after the Foreign Office denied Japan had issued an ultimatum to France against transporting war supplies on its Indo-Chinese railroad to China.

Moutet declared the reinforcements, which he said also would be extended to other colonies, would be chiefly of warships and fighting planes.

He said that he and Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos had established a "permanent liaison" between the Governor-General of Indo-China and the French Diplomatic and Consular authorities in the Far East.

The Navy Ministry reported the 7000-ton cruiser Primauguet was on the way to Saigon, capital of French Indo-China, after a halt at the British naval base at Singapore.

The reinforcements to be provided by the new appropriation will be in addition to the work started nearly a year ago. Under the plan then, naval engineers began preparatory work toward the creation of a great naval base at Cam-Ranh Bay, half way between Singapore and Hongkong.

Plans were also made for building a secondary base in Along Bay, facing the Chinese Island of Hai Nan, and for increasing the number and power of the coast defense guns at Cape Saint Jacques, controlling the river entrance to Saigon.

Other defense measures included the stationing of modern submarine flotillas at Cam-Rah with additional fast destroyers and squadrons of bombers.

One 7800-ton cruiser, five colonial sloops, five river gunboats, one submarine flotilla and several gunboats make up the French fleet normally stationed in the Pacific.

BOMBING TRIAL WITNESS TELLS OF SECRECY WARNING

TESTIFIES HE SAW BOXES OF DYNAMITE

Explosive Was Put With Relief Supplies in Basement of P M A Headquarters, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 20.—A miner testified in the bombing conspiracy trial today that local officers of the Progressive Miners of America were summoned into emergency session early last year and warned to keep their records away from Government investigators.

Andrew Skrlevicus of Springfield, who changed over to the rival United Mine Workers of America recently, testified the meeting was presided over by Dan McGill of Springfield, executive board member of the P M A and one of the 41 defendants on trial.

"Don't let the law get to your books," Skrlevicus quoted the union leader as saying, but he said he learned later the records of some locals already had been seized.

Apprehension was expressed at the meeting that the Government was "getting too close," he said, adding that McGill advised some of them to "change your books."

Testifies He Saw Dynamite.

Skrlevicus, one of the Government's key witnesses in the conspiracy trial in connection with Central and Southern Illinois mine and train bombings from 1932 to 1934, is awaiting trial in Sangamon County Circuit Court on a charge of shooting a P M A miner and his wife in an argument two months ago.

Skrlevicus testified he had seen seven boxes of dynamite stored in the union's Springfield headquarters along with groceries for persons on relief.

He asserted he was eating lunch in the headquarters with a companion in April, 1933, when John Schneider and Dan Mataya, defendants, and several other P M A members unloaded the food and explosives, storing them in the basement. Four days later the food and dynamite were gone, he said.

In August of 1934, the witness continued, he visited McGill's home and "talked over railroad bombings."

Says He Was Given $150.

The witness said he had been given between $150 and $160 by McGill and Schneider to "keep me from complaining at meetings" about the use of relief funds for "other purposes."

On cross-examination, Skrlevicus said he didn't turn the money back.

"In other words," asserted chief Defense Counsel Arthur M. Fitzgerald, in cross-examination, "you kept your mouth shut when they let you get away with your mooching."

Other witnesses testified today about the bombing of the Peabody Coal Co. Woodside mine here in 1933 and the storage of explosives near Springfield.

Joseph M. Kirby, a Springfield policeman, said that in November, 1934, when he was unemployed, Eddie Lee, another defendant, offered him $100 to "touch off" a bomb. The witness said he walked away without reply. On cross-examination, Kirby said Lee appeared to have been drinking.

Charles H. Redpath of Detroit, former Sangamon County Deputy Sheriff, said boxes of fuse were found in Schneider's house and rifle shells in the home of William Crompton, another defendant.

"Paid After Changing Unions."

Two former members of the Progressive Miners of America called as Government witnesses, said on cross-examination, they were paid $350 each when they left the P M A to return to the older union, the United Mine Workers. They were Ira Sharpe and John Gaddis of Tarco.

Several former Progressives testified that they were "undercover" men on the payroll of the Peabody Coal Co. while taking active roles in the P M A movement. They denied defense allegations that they were forced to testify under threat of losing their present jobs in United Mine Worker operated mines. The defense also has tried to show the witnesses were trying to get personal revenge against some of the defendants.

Cross-questioning also has involved statements signed by some of the witnesses after they testified before the special grand jury last year.

MATTHEW M'LOUGHLIN SUES TWO DETECTIVES FOR $20,000

Union Officer Takes Civil Action Against Policemen Who He Says Beat Him.

Matthew A. McLoughlin, secretary-treasurer of the Cleaning and Dye House Workers' Union, filed suit for $20,000 damages in Circuit Court yesterday against City Detectives William Dunman and Lyman Price, whom he accused of flogging him at Police Headquarters last Aug. 26.

McLoughlin asks $10,000 actual and $10,000 punitive damages, alleging that his left ear drum was punctured, his nervous system shocked, and that he suffered numerous bruises and lacerations.

The detectives have denied beating McLoughlin. A complaint he filed against them was dismissed by the Board of Police Commissioners and the grand jury, after investigating the flogging, voted no indictment.

The Cleaning and Dye House Workers' Union has called a mass meeting in support of a demand for a special grand jury investigation, to be held Monday, Dec. 6, at 8 p. m., in Carpenters' Hall, Grand boulevard and Easton avenue. Newsreel pictures of the Memorial Day "Chicago Massacre," the labor picture "Millions of Us," and a motion picture showing McLoughlin's bruises will be exhibited at the meeting.

BOY WITH SCREW IN LUNG STRICKEN WITH PNEUMONIA

Operation Delayed at Philadelphia Hospital, Where He Was Taken by Plane and Train.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 20.—Pneumonia added new complications tonight to the condition of little Melvin Martin, who came by airplane and train from Blackwell, Ok., for removal of a brass screw from his right lung.

Surgeons at the Jefferson Hospital Bronchoscopic Clinic announced shortly after the boy's arrival that they would not attempt to remove the screw, which he swallowed Monday, until they had the pneumonia condition controlled. The piece in his lung, they said, would complicate his recovery. Melvin is two and a half years old.

Melvin's airplane trip eastward with his mother, Mrs. Addie Martin, was interrupted yesterday by fog at Columbus, O. They completed the trip by train.

MRS. CORINNE FREDERICK GETS PIANO SCHOLARSHIP

Concert Performer Honored by Fontainebleau School of Fine Arts in France.

Mrs. Corinne Frederick, concert pianist, who has appeared frequently with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, has received a fellowship to continue her study of the piano at the Fontainebleau School of Fine Arts in France. She was a student there two years ago.

When she was 13 years old she made her first appearance with the St. Louis orchestra. She has played under such conductors as Igor Stravinsky and Rudolph Ganz and has studied under Artur Schnabel and Robert Casadesus.

Tonight she will play the clavichord, a keyboard instrument in common use before the invention of the piano, in the General Motors radio broadcast from the Municipal Auditorium. Her home is at 5264A Waterman avenue.

Two Men Killed in Plane Crash.

By the Associated Press.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Nov. 20. — Two men were killed when their small monoplane struck telephone wires and crashed at Otay Dam near here today. The dead were E. J. Helzle, Pilot, and F. X. McGrath, both of San Diego and both attached to navy units here.

FURNITURE STORE FIRE CAUSES $15,000 LOSS

Stock of H. Wagner Co., 1617 South Jefferson Avenue, Is Destroyed.

Fire of undetermined origin destroyed the stock of the H. Wagner Furniture Co., 1617 South Jefferson avenue yesterday with a loss estimated by Fire Chief John J. O'Boyle at $10,000 to the contents and $5000 to the one-story stone building.

The fire started in a workshop at the rear where supplies of paint and linoleum fed the blaze. A strong wind from the west swept the flames through the store. So quickly did the fire spread that the first firemen on the scene were unable to enter.

Harry Wagner, who operates the business with his son, George, told a Post-Dispatch reporter the fire started about 12:30 p. m. He was working in an office at the front of the store when a small boy ran in and told him the workshop was afire.

Wagner at first tried to fight the fire with hand extinguishers, but when a can of paint exploded, he sent the only other person in the store, Joseph Standuff, a clerk, to sound a fire alarm. The first alarm was recorded at 12:48 o'clock, and a second was turned in by the firemen first at the scene.

It seemed no more than two minutes, Wagner said, before the whole store was ablaze. Abandoning his fire extinguishers, he took the money from the cash register and fled from the building.

Wagner said his loss was partly insured. He owns the building.

GOV. BENSON, MANY OFFICIALS AT UNION LEADER'S FUNERAL

Police Are Still Without Clews as to Identity of Men Who Killed Patrick Corcoran.

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 20. — City and State officials and thousands of union workers attended the funeral today of Patrick J. Corcoran, murdered union leader.

Gov. Elmer Benson who journeyed from Northern Minnesota where he was attempting to settle a lumber workers' strike and Mayor George E. Leach were among officials at the funeral.

Three days after he was killed, police apparently were still far from a solution. They have thus far been unable to trace the two men seen running from the scene of the killing.

Police Capt. James Mullen said two former Chicago men who admitted they attacked Corcoran at a party three days before his death had established alibis for Wednesday night, when the former switchman was killed. The two, Eddie and Al Foretto, brothers, would be held without charge, he said, until their other activities were checked.

Still sought for questioning was another man Mullen said was an organizer for General Drivers' Union No. 544 with which Corcoran was associated as head of the joint teamsters' council.

Pulpit Crusade Against Crime.

Pastors of churches throughout the city have been asked by the Love Thy Neighbor As Thyself Association to co-operate in setting aside next Sunday for a pulpit crusade against crime. Children of school age will be urged to attend services, devoted to causes and prevention of crime.

MOTORIST GETS 10 DAYS ON THREE TRAFFIC CHARGES

Clarence Whitacre Also Fined $350; Another Driver Assessed $50, License Suspended.

Clarence Whitacre, 4396 Lindell boulevard, an engineer, was fined $350 and sentenced to 10 days in the Workhouse by Police Judge Edward M. Ruddy yesterday on charges of careless driving, leaving the scene of an accident and driving when intoxicated. His driver's license was suspended automatically for a year.

James Tierney, 536 Oakwood avenue, Webster Groves, testified Whitacre drove away Nov. 6 after striking the rear of his machine, which was parked in the 5600 block of Maple avenue. He said he chased Whitacre in his car and forced him to the curb two blocks away. Tierney and the policeman who arrested Whitacre said he appeared to be intoxicated.

The defendant denied he was intoxicated and charged Tierney had backed out of the curb and struck his machine. He said he drove off because he was dazed in the collision.

Gus Gotler, 4448 Evans avenue, was fined $50 and his driver's license was suspended for a year by Judge Ruddy when he pleaded guilty of speeding 40 miles an hour on Delmar boulevard, between Clarendon and Belt avenues, on Nov. 14.

POLICE SEEKING MISSING KANSAS CITY WOMAN

Daughter of Mrs. Lou Snyder Enlists Aid Here in Search for Her Mother.

St. Louis police yesterday joined in the search for Mrs. Lou Snyder, 69 years old, who disappeared from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Carl M. Morgan, 7534 Oak street, Kansas City, Mo., the night of Nov. 12. A request for police help was made by Mrs. Morgan on her arrival in the city after a search along Highway 40 between here and Kansas City.

She said her mother was 5 feet, 3 inches tall; weighed 90 or 95 pounds; with gray eyes and black hair that is quite white at the temples. She was wearing a tan coat, black dress and hat and old shoes when last seen. She had only a few dollars.

George Barnes of Independence, Mo., said he saw a woman of that description on the highway and gave her a short ride Saturday, Nov. 13, a little while before she is thought to have stopped in an Odessa restaurant for breakfast. She said she was going to St. Louis. She has no relatives or friends here.

8 DEAD, 5 SERIOUSLY SICK AFTER EATING CHILI LUNCHEON

For First Time Since Monday, a Day Passes Without a New Case Being Reported.

TUCUMCARI, N. M., Nov. 20. — For the first time since Monday, physicians were able to report today that no new cases of food poisoning had developed here. Eight partakers of a mourners' luncheon have been killed, little hope is held for two others, and three are in serious condition.

Belief that the peak of illnesses might have been passed was based on the fact that victims ordinarily die or recover in from three to six days. This was the sixth day since those affected ate home-preserved chili following a funeral.

Health authorities believed they had given antitoxin treatment to some 30 members of the luncheon party.

UNION THREATENS TO CALL STRIKE IN FORD CO. PLANT

UAWA Regional Director Says He Will Act Not Later Than Wednesday Unless Terms Are Met.

A strike is threatened this week at the Ford Motor Co. assembly plant, 4100 Forest Park avenue. Statements by local representatives of the United Automobile Workers of America and the Ford management, issued yesterday, indicated no progress had been made in adjusting differences.

Delmond Garst, regional director of the automobile workers' C I O union, announced that a strike would be called not later than Wednesday if the company continued alleged discriminatory practices against union members. Milton N. Johnson, plant manager, repeated earlier denials that the company had refused to bargain collectively, fostered a company union or discriminated against members of the union.

Johnson added that no agreement relative to the manner of re-employment existed between the company and the union, and he said it was the intention of the management to operate the local plant according to the policies of the Ford Motor Co. Henry Ford has said the company will never recognize the United Automobile Workers "or any other union," and the Ford policy is not to deal collectively with employes.

Union Statement.

In a statement "for the benefit of the citizens of St. Louis, who are vitally interested in all unsettled labor conditions," Garst explained that the assembly plant workers organized Local Union 325 last April and harmonious relations continued with the company until the seasonal lay-off in September. An agreement was made with the management, Garst said, that the union shop committee would work during the seasonal lay-off and that when production was resumed all old employes would be called back to work. Johnson denies that any agreement existed.

"The union discovered during the lay-off that company supervisors were endeavoring to form and sponsor what might be called a 'company union,' forcing employes to sign loyalty pledges, which stated that all the policies of the Ford Motor Co. met with the approval of the signer," Garst's statement declared.

"When work started on the 1938 models, the management inaugurated a program of discrimination against all officers, shop stewards and others actively working in the interests of Local 325 by refusing to rehire these men. New employes were hired in their places. We feel sure that it is of more than passing interest to St. Louisans to learn that this large group of employes, having been thrown out of work, will become a burden on the city and State through the necessity of being placed on relief rolls. This is not the choice of the workers, who stand ready and willing to return to their jobs on the same basis as existed when they were laid off."

Last Effort, Union Says.

In conclusion the statement says that the interest of the union membership can only be protected by a strike, an action resorted to as a last effort to induce the Ford management "to at least adhere to fair and humane treatment in their relationship with their employes." The union asks St. Louisans to learn the facts "before passing judgment as to the rights and wrongs involved."

The union recently formed a board of strategy for its organization drive against Ford, which apparently has been timed to coincide with the appearance of the 1938 model cars. The strike here, if called, will be the first shot of the campaign. This is due to the fact that the St. Louis plant was further advanced for assembling the new models than other Ford factories, union leaders explained. Some new models came off the assembly lines here last wek, with about 600 men at work. The plant employs more than 900 workers in normal production, and the local union claims a membership of more than 800.

240 EMPLOYES RUN BANKRUPT TROLLEY LINE OUT OF DEBT

Wheeling System Now Serves 43 Communities, Operates Bus Lines.

By the Associated Press.

WHEELING, W. Va., Nov. 20.—A bankrupt street car system, taken over four years ago by employes who wanted to keep their jobs, is operating free of debt and difficulties today.

All of the 240 men who put aside part of their earnings in 1932 and 1933 to help purchase the traction company still are on the job.

In that time, the co-operative transit company has added two bus lines to the original holdings of the insolvent Wheeling Traction Co., and now serves eight West Virginia communities and 35 Eastern Ohio communities. Acquisition of the bus lines increased the number of employes to 290, but only the original employes are stockholders.

Harry McCune, general manager, said the company pays out $423,000 annually in salaries, operates 67 street cars and 46 miles of track and 23 busses on a 50-mile route.

The employes got the company for $75,000. State and county remitted back taxes to aid them to complete the transaction. Courtesy helped the business to grow. Passengers are greeted with "Good morning" and conductors always look at corners to see if there are any tardy ones rushing to catch the car.

TAILOR, 80, IS KILLED BY STREET CAR NEAR HOME

Benjamin Sachs Stepped Into Path Motorman of University Line Asserts.

Benjamin Sachs, a tailor, 80 years old, was struck and killed by an eastbound street car of the University line, while crossing Waterman avenue in the 5000 block. He suffered a fractured skull, and died at Jewish Hospital.

The motorman, Leonidas Turley, told police that Sachs stepped into the path of his car. Sachs lived at 5111 Waterman avenue.

MAN KILLED BY AUTO NEAR EAST ST. LOUIS

Charles Gibson, W P A Worker, Struck When Attempting to Cross Highway.

Charles Gibson, W P A worker, was killed at 6 o'clock last night, when struck by an automobile as he was attempting to cross Illinois State Route No. 3, near his home, 1050 South Eighth street, just outside the East St. Louis city limits. He was 62 years old.

The driver of the car, Richard Sharp, 1830 St. Clair avenue, East St. Louis, said Gibson appeared to become confused by lights of other automobiles, and stepped in the path of his car. Gibson was on his way to visit a neighbor. Sharp was notified to appear at the coroner's inquest.

East St. Louis Woman, Struck by Auto Friday, Dies.

Mrs. Susan Garrity, 69 years old, 411 North Twelfth street, East St. Louis, died last night in St. Mary's Hospital of a skull fracture suffered Friday, when she was struck by an automobile.

Brooks Stimson, 461A Columbia place, East St. Louis, driver of the car, said that Mrs. Garrity, who was crossing St. Louis avenue at Fifth street, suddenly walked into the path of his car. Police notified him to appear at the inquest.

Man Injured Seriously When Struck by Automobile.

Joseph Berra, a laborer, was seriously injured at 8:30 o'clock last night, when struck by an automobile near his home, Dorsett road and Michael avenue, Maryland Heights. The driver of the car did not stop. Berra was taken to County Hospital with internal injuries and a fractured right ankle.

MILITARY ACADEMY BOY WINS PEACE ORATORICAL CONTEST

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 20.—Harry Cook of Oklahoma City, representing Kemper Military School, won the Missouri State Peace Oratorical contest here tonight. His subject was "The Youths' Contribution to Peace."

Second place went to Woodrow Denney, representing the Southwest Missouri State Teachers College at Springfield. Earl Saunders of Westminster College, Fulton, Mo., was third. Other finalists were Willis Alexander, Trenton Junior College; J. D. Robins Jr., Central College, Fayette, and Robert Sight, University of Missouri.

CHARITY FUND DRIVE GOES INTO 4TH WEEK

Campaign Extended Until Wednesday in Effort to Reach Goal.

Entering the fourth week of their effort to raise $2,555,000 for United Charities, campaign workers will be busy today seeking to reduce the $525,000 gap between the present total of contributions and the amount sought.

The campaign, which began Nov. 1 and was to have ended yesterday, has been extended until next Wednesday noon, when the final report meeting will be held at Hotel Statler.

Pledges announced at the last report meeting, Friday, totaled $2,018,382, and a new report of the county division yesterday increased this to $2,029,607, or 79 per cent of the goal.

No division has yet reached the quota assigned to it. The larger subscriptions division is $212,346 short of its quota; the employe division, $179,110; the general division, $105,689; and the county division, $27,230.

Contributions received through the larger subscriptions division total $1,256,654; the employe division, $546,890; the general division, $164,311, and the county division, $62,770.

A subscription of $27,945 from Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Co., representing the gifts of employes, executives and the corporation, was announced yesterday. Pledges of 2264 employes totaled $10,445; executives gave $10,500 and the corporation, $7000.

Other contributions announced by the employe division included: 4023 employes of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., $19,465; 359 employes of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., $3365; 433 employes of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad, $2201; and 1333 employes of the Frisco Railroad, $3632.

Hinrichs Executives Refused to Bargain Collectively with Union, Central Trades Charges.

Charges that the Hinrichs Distilled Products Co., 5235 Manchester avenue, refused to bargain collectively with its employes, who have been on strike since Nov. 5, were filed with the National Labor Relations Board on Friday by William M. Brandt, secretary of the Central Trades and Labor Union.

Brandt said a union negotiating committee held four meetings with an attorney representing the company, but was unable to reach any agreement, although the workers offered to waive the closed shop and seniority rights if the company would agree to wage and hours demands. The demands were for a 50-cent hourly minimum wage and a 44-hour week.

Mass picketing has been conducted at the distillery by the Wholesale Wine and Liquor Plant Workers, affiliated with the A. F. of L. The union claims a membership of 80 of the 84 Hinrichs workers.

NARCOTICS RING BROKEN BY RAIDS IN FIVE CITIES

17 Arrested by Treasury Agents, Said to Have Done Business of $750,000 Annually.

TWO INVESTIGATORS JOINED CHINESE TONG

Posed as Dealers, Federal Prosecutor Discloses, in Order to Trap Higher-Ups Who Directed Gang

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—A trail that started with the source of supply for a narcotic addict in New York led Treasury agents to a series of raids in five cities last night in which they said they smashed a nation-wide ring doing $750,000 of business yearly.

Six months of quiet investigations paved the way for the raids, in which the agents arrested 17 persons, including the wife and brother of a member of the notorious "Lucky" Luciano gang and a former president of the Chinese Hip Sing Tong, as members of the ring, and also arrested a number of suspected addicts and others found at the scenes of the raids.

Treasury officials said the 17 seized in New York, Pittsburgh, Chicago, San Francisco and Butte, Mont., were importers and large-scale dealers in narcotics.

Operated Through Tong.

Most of those arrested, the Treasury announced today, operated through the Hip Sing organization. Harry J. Anslinger, Commissioner of Narcotics, said seizures made earlier in the investigation indicated that opium, morphine, heroin and pink heroin pills were handled by the syndicate. He said the opium was a combination of Chinese and Persian and that the other narcotics were imported from France and Japan.

In New York, the treasury agents arrested Mary de Bello Pennochio and Vito Pennochio, wife and brother of Tommy (The Bull) Pennochio, member of the Luciano gang who now is serving a 25-year sentence in Sing Sing prison. Arrested with Mrs. Pennochio in her home, were her father and brother, Pietro and George de Bello.

In Pittsburgh, agents arrested Yee On Li, alias Yee Haim, former president of the Hip Sing Tong, one of the major Chinese organizations in this country. Chin Joo Hip and his son, Chin Joo Hip the Younger, were seized at Butte, Mont. The elder Chin, described by Anslinger as the "Father of the Tong," was said to be the principal advisor and contact man for the narcotic ring.

In New York, 50 Federal agents and customs patrol inspectors broke down the dragon-emblazoned doors of alleged "smoke joints" and other haunts in Chinatown to pick up their prisoners.

How Agents Followed Trail.

Assistant United States Attorney Abel Smith described in Federal Court in New York how two agents posed as dealers, joined a Chinese tong and went through the secret tong ritual to trap higher-ups.

"One agent persuaded a Seattle Chinese narcotics distributor to act as his informer," Smith said, "and eventually gained an introduction to a Chinese in Butte.

"The agent then went to New York. He represented himself as a 'front' man for a large narcotics syndicate, and met a New York Chinese who gave him a letter of introduction to the president of a Chinese tong in Chicago.

"The agent was warmly welcomed by officials of the Chicago tong, and at their suggestion was initiated into the tong. The agent took part in the ancient ritual. Then he was given a party and letters of introduction to the leaders of the various tong branches throughout the country. The letters recommended the agent as a large distributor of narcotics and urged that he be given whatever assistance he required in his operations, including the hiring of lawyers to 'fix' cases."

Soon thereafter, Smith said, the investigator had a fellow agent initiated into the tong, and they finally reached the national president of the tong, in Pittsburgh.

"The president said he had been engaged in the narcotic traffic for years," Smith said, "and offered to supply the agent, who subsequently met the national treasurer of the tong in New York City. Through the treasurer, the agent received letters of introduction to narcotic distributors in New York, and the arrests followed."

When the investigation began, Anslinger's office marshaled its field forces under District Supervisor J. B. Greeson of Kansas City, who was kept constantly advised from New York by United States Attorney Lamar Hardy and his assistant, Joseph P. Martin.

Anslinger said no further arrests were expected.

"We knew who we wanted, and we got them," he said.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Three representatives of the Jewish Peoples' Committee, accompanied by Senator Thomas (Dem.), Utah, presented today to Secretary of State Hull a protest against treatment of Jews in Poland. The delegation included Edward I. Aronow and Joseph Windradsky and Samuel Solomons, Chicago.

Basic Constitutionality of T V A Act Being Tested First Time in Utilities' Suit at Chattanooga

Circuit Court's Decision Under Appeal There Is Outside Limits of Supreme Court's Previous 8-to-1 Ruling.

By SAMUEL J. SHELTON.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Nov. 20.—The significant distinctions between the suit on trial here to test the constitutionality of the Government's Tennessee Valley Authority power program and the early case in which the United States Supreme Court upheld, 8 to 1, one phase of T V A activity, were defined by the United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit in an opinion holding that the United States District Court had properly refused to dismiss the suit.

The Court of Appeals also said, in the opinion last May 14, that the issues in this suit, instituted by 18 utility corporations to enjoin T V A activities, could be determined only by a hearing on the merits. That hearing is now under way before a three-Judge Federal Court. Presiding over the court is United States Circuit Judge Florence Allen, one of the two Judges joining in the opinion here referred to. Another member of this court is United States District Judge John J. Gore of Tennessee, who first had the case and from whose orders the appeal was taken. The third is District Judge John D. Martin, also of Tennessee.

Procedure Background.

The suit was filed after the Supreme Court, in the Ashwander case early in 1936, had upheld as constitutional a contract of T V A to sell power generated at Wilson dam, constructed by the Government at Muscle Shoals on the Tennessee River during and after the war, and to transmit that power to buyers.

In the Ashwander case, Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, speaking for the Supreme Court, narrowly limited its decision to upholding T V A's right to sell power generated pursuant to an exercise of the national defense powers of Congress. Justice McReynolds dissented. The Supreme Court had previously divided, 5 to 4, on whether it had jurisdiction in the proceedings as brought, Justice Brandeis leading the dissenters on this point.

In an early hearing, Judge Gore not only rejected the contention of T V A, made in its motion to dismiss, that the Supreme Court already had decided the issue by its opinion in the Ashwander case, but also granted the complainants a temporary injunction restraining T V A from the acts complained of. T V A appealed on both points.

The opinion of the Court of Appeals was written by Judge Charles C. Simons and concurred in by Judge Allen. A third member, Judge Charles H. Moorman, concurred in that part of the opinion which lifted the temporary injunction, but held in a dissenting opinion that the suit should have been dismissed.

Summary of Complaint.

The bill of complaint was summed up in the opinion, in part, as follows:

"It charges that . . . they (T V A) plan to produce an amount of electric energy greatly exceeding the total consumption of the area, which includes all of the State of Tennessee and a large part of the six neighboring states. It charges that the execution of this program will irreparably injure if not wholly destroy the business and prosperity of each of the plaintiffs, and that the defendants have already performed, or are in the process of performing a vast number of acts in the execution of their power, which is being carried out as rapidly as possible.

"It charges the program itself, and all of the acts done pursuant to it to be unconstitutional and void, and that if the T V A act purports to authorize such program, it is to that extent also unconstitutional and void."

The opinion recites other allegations in the complaint, such as that "defendants have announced that unless existing utilities sell their transmission lines to them such lines will be duplicated. They have announced their intention to regulate local intrastate rates and service by a so-called yardstick method through Federally subsidized competition which will supplant state regulations as inadequate and unsatisfactory."

Two Cases Not on All Fours.

Taking up the contention of T V A that the issue was settled in the Ashwander case, the court said:

"They lay the bill in the Ashwander case by the side of the present bill, and by exhaustive comparative analysis urge the conclusiveness of that decision on the issue now under consideration. The 'deadly parallel is frequently devastating, but so only when controversies are substantially identical and of equal breadth. We have given careful consideration to the Ashwander case. It sustains constitutional power of T V A to enter into a specific contract with the Alabama Power Co., one of the original plaintiffs in the present suit. That contract related solely to the purchase by T V A of transmission lines for disposal of excess energy generated at Wilson dam and for exchange of energy.

"The Ashwander case was a derivative suit brought by preferred stockholders of the Alabama Power Co. to set aside the contract as ultra vires. By limitations imposed upon the court by the nature of the suit, and through limitations of the judicial process, the Ashwander case was kept within very narrow compass. . . .

Ashwander Issue Narrow.

"The issues were confined to the constitutional authority for the construction of Wilson dam, and for the disposal by reasonable method of the electric energy there generated. Finding the construction of Wilson dam a valid exercise of constitutional power under the war and commerce clauses, the electric energy there generated to be property of the United States for the sale of which authority exists in Section Three of Article Four of the Constitution, and the method of disposal not inappropriate according to the nature of the property, the court refused to set aside the contract, the decision concluding with the following:

" 'The question of the constitutional right of the Government to acquire or operate local or urban distribution systems is not involved. We express no opinion as to the validity of such an effort, as to the status of any other dam or power development in the Tennessee Valley, whether connected with or apart from the Wilson dam, or as to the validity of the Tennessee Valley Authority act or of the claime made in the pronouncements and program of the Authority apart from questions we have discussed in relation to the particular provisions of the contract of Jan. 4, 1934, affecting the Alabama Power Co.'

Difference in Instant Suit.

Later in the opinion the Court of Appeals said:

"The case made by the present bill present a different aspect. Here are no preferred stockholders whose interests are limited to their distributive share in the assets of the corporation, and whose grievance is circumscribed by their own formulated estimate of it. Here are 17 (now 18) utility corporations already suffering the economic pinch of actual or threatening competition they conceive to be illegal, and facing what they conceive to be not only irreparable injury, but possible destruction, not through any one specific act of the defendants which, singly considered, may not be an unconstitutional exercise of power, but through a far-flung program which they charge will inevitably effect and has for its purpose their common annihilation.

"We are not convinced that the Ashwander decision precludes us from recognizing a justifiable controversy between these plaintiffs as a class and the Tennessee Valley Authority as an instrumentality of the Government involving the constitutional validity of the described program, whether authorized by the act or transcending its authority.

Another Consideration.

"Another consideration is of importance. Eighteen months (this was last May) have elapsed since the Ashwander decision in the Supreme Court. Three years have passed since the District Court announced the decision there reviewed. We are told that the program of the Tennessee Valley Authority and its directors has gone forward with all reasonable dispatch. What then may have been merely tentative or speculative may now be approaching realization. What then was remote may now be imminent, and mere concept have fruition in action of a definite and concrete character constituting an actual or threatened interference with the rights of those complaining.

"This may only be determined by full hearing on the merits. Moreover, the distinction between the case here made and that presented by the bill in the Ashwander case is not only clear but is brought into bold relief by the dissenting opinion (by Justice McReynolds) in the Ashwander case. The injury and threat of injury is here assigned not to a single act or series of acts, but to the entire program, the full sweep of which is illustrated by the acts already done and proposed.

"The primary grievance in the Ashwander case related to the constitutional power of T V A to execute a specific contract. It was thought by the plaintiffs there to demonstrate invalidity of the contract not merely by challenging the power of the Authority to execute it, but by challenging its power to promulgate and carry into execution a power program of which the assailed contract was but a part, and to test the validity of the very act under the authority of which the program was conceived—even to the extent of seeking a declaratory judgment thereon. The power was involved only as its possible invalidity might infect with validity the assailed contract.

Point Made by Dissent.

"The dissent makes it clear that the court rejected the theory that 'the plan makes the part unlawful.' So, while it results that one may not secure relief against an act which is not in itself an unconstitutional exercise of power, it also results that one may not complain of a plan which, though possibly open to attack on the ground of constitutional invalidity, does not as such injure him, and this is but an application of the familiar principle that courts will not pass upon the constitutionality of a statute per se, but will set it aside only when both invalidity and direct or imminent danger of injury to the persons complained of its enforcement are made clear. The court below did not err in overruling the motion to dismiss."

The Court of Appeals concluded, however, that the state of facts shown did not justify a temporary injunction that would stop all of the activities of T V A pending a hearing of the suit on its merits, recommending expedition in the hearing.

AUTO UNION HEADS TO CONFER ABOUT DEFIANT STRIKERS

Leader of Unauthorized Pontiac Sit-down Called Before U A W A Executive Board Today.

MARTIN ASSAILS OUTLAW STRIKES

450 Men in Fisher Body Plant, Supplied With Necessaries, Prepare for Indifinite Stay.

By the Associated Press.

PONTIAC, Mich., Nov. 20.—Officers of the United Automobile Workers of America, preparing for a showdown on the unauthorized sit-down strike in General Motors' Fisher body plant here, sent out a call today for a special meeting of the 24-member international executive board at Detroit tomorrow. Telegrams instructed the members to travel by airplane, if necessary, to attend the meeting, at which the entire General Motors situation also will be discussed.

Leaders of the strike here were summoned to the meeting by Homer Martin, international president.

Martin came here tonight after conferring with oher union officers at Detroit and speaking at a closed membership meeting at Flint. He conferred here with officers of the local union, but not with leaders of the sit-down nor with any of the several hundred men who, by going on strike Wednesday night, threw 14,700 men into idleness.

"Will End Unauthorized Strikes."

"We are determined to eliminate unauthorized strikes," Martin said. "Whatever is necessary to accomplish this end will be done.

"General Motors, as other corporations, has made the mistake that it could and should disciplin union men. We have taken consistently the position that it is the union's duty to discipline members who refuse to abide by its constitution, and that the union can best handle the situation of unauthorized strikes."

Martin called a meeting of the Pontiac U A W A local for Sunday night and said he would address it.

"No small group of workers who think they can do as they please can close a General Motors plant and stay within the pale of the union," Martin said at Flint before coming to Pontiac, adding that unauthorized strikes "would not be tolerated." He added, however, that the Pontiac case "was not all one-sided."

He said there were no plans for expelling the sit-down strikers here, but declined otherwise to discuss his plans for dealing with the strike.

Assails Discipline Clause.

"We are going to give General Motors assurance against outlaw strikes," Martin said, "but the Sept. 16 clause (conceding the management the right to discipline instigators of outlaw strikes) is foolish. No union would be able to operate under that kind of a system. We propose now a joint responsibility for living up to contracts. We will take care of our own membership, but not stool pigeons who may cause strikes.

"We want to go through the grievance procedure and, if we cannot settle an issue there, have an impartial umpire."

Members of the Fisher local union at Lansing, Mich., voted not to call a strike and to follow the policy of Martin and the international executive board.

The Pontiac sit-down strikers, numbering about 450, prepared for an indefinite stay in the plant. Refused strike benefit funds by the international union, the strikers were supplied with blankets and food by sympathizers. The Pontiac U A W A local also placed funds at their disposal.

Strikers' Demands.

Odin H. Johnson, attorney here for the U A W A, said the strikers were demanding:

Reduction of the speed of conveyor lines which, they said, were speeded up when several hundred workers were dismissed recently.

Removal of E. R. Leeder, the Fisher plant manager who insisted in conferences Wednesday on dismissal of four men whom he blamed for a 12-hour strike which began Monday night.

Re-employment of 1350 workers, the number the strikers declare have been laid off in recent weeks, and a "share the work" program under which hours would be reduced to provide some work for all employes.

Abandonment of a reported plan to transfer some processes from the Pontiac Fisher plant to a New Jersey plant.

Reinstatement of the four men suspended Wednesday; six men discharged last June after a nonunion man was thrust, feet first, into a barrel containing a tar-like substance, and two men dismissed in March, 1936.

William S. Knudsen, president of General Motors Corporation, said that "irresponsibility on the part of locals and unauthorized strikes" jeopardized collective bargaining.

Speedup Charged.

The strike threat at Lansing was precipitated by the suspension for one week of Fred Wickham, a riveter, for interrupting production. The union conceded Wickham had pulled a switch, halting work, but contended the stoppage was of less than two minutes duration. The union charged that conveyor lines had been "persistently speeded up" in recent weeks and that the company had discriminated against union employes and violated seniority rules.

Gov. Frank Murphy, whose efforts brought about settlement of the extended General Motors strike last winter, was reported to have been in telephone communication with General Motors and union officers, but he declined today to comment on the situation.

Third Recent Strike.

The Fisher strike here was the third since U A W A delegates rejected a proposed new agreement with General Motors. The others, the Monday night strike in the same plant and a strike Wednesday of foundry employes in the Cadillac Motor Car Co. plant at Detroit, were short-lived.

The second Fisher strike occurred one day before the first anniversary of a sit-down strike in the Fisher plant at Atlanta, Ga., which marked the opening of the U A W A offensive against General Motors. That strike movement spread until, two months later, production throughout the General Motors system was virtually paralyzed.

The strikes continued without abatement for six weeks, ending in an agreement between General Motors and the U A W A which was subject to revision after six months. Intermittent negotiations for a revised agreement were broken off by the union's rejection of a proposed new agreement last Sunday.

In September, the union agreed to a General Motors demand that it be given the right to discipline employes responsible for unauthorized strikes. The corporation insisted on that proviso as a prerequisite to negotiations on contract revision.

General Motors announced it would insist on a renewal of that assurance against unauthorized strikes before entering into further negotiations.

MARYLAND BOAT IN FIGHT WITH VIRGINIA OYSTERMEN

Two Arrested After Encounter in Potomac; Most of Crafts Get Away.

By the Associated Press.

LEONARDTOWN, Md., Nov. 20.—Capt. William Thrall, Maryland Conservation Commission boat commander, said he arrested two Virginia oystermen today following a brief fight in the Potomac River. No one was wounded, Capt. Thrall said.

Capt. Thrall said his boat, the Kent, surprised 15 small power boats handscraping for oysters before dawn today. His shouts were answered with rifle fire, some shots striking the Kent. His men returned the fire with a machine gun, scattering the boats. Only one, occupied by Sheldon Crockett and Preston Pruitt, both of Tangier Island, Va., was captured.

The use of handscrapers, small oyster dredges, is prohibited in the Potomac River. Sheriff J. B. Love said they would be charged with handscraping in the Potomac.

Maryland conservation officials and Virginia oystermen have clashed frequently in past years over rights in the Potomac.

Capt. Arthur L. McGuire of the Third District will assume command also of the Second District, effective tomorrow. Capt. Samuel Taylor of the Second District, who soon will reach the compulsory retirement age of 70, will be transferred to Police Headquarters for assignment. The Wyoming Street Station of the Second District and the Lafayette Avenue Station of the Third District will be vacated with completion of a new station at the northwest corner of Twelfth boulevard and Lynch street, expected in about three weeks.

On consolidation of the two districts, Lieut. Carl Johnson will be transferred from the Second to the Carr street district, Lieut. Michael Flavin from the Magnolia avenue to the Ruskin avenue district and Lieut. William Henry from the Second to the Magnolia Avenue District.

Dr. R. B. H. Gradwohl was appointed research laboratory director at a salary of $50 a month, effective Dec. 1.

Michael J. McEnery, for 30 years assistant secretary of the Board of Police Commissioners, will be placed on detached duty tomorrow and his services terminated Dec. 15. He became a policeman in 1895, transferred to the clerical department in 1906 and the following year was made assistant secretary. He will be succeeded by John D. Blong, now employed in the record room.

DUCHESS OF WINDSOR OPENS BAZAAR NEAR PARIS

Pair Welcomed by Anglican Clergyman; Rumor They Will Spend Christmas in U. S.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 20.—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor were received by a Church of England clergyman today for the first time since their marriage last June, which the church opposed.

At the same time it was reported that the Windsors would go to the United States to spend Christmas in Washington with Mrs. D. B. Merryman, aunt of the Duchess.

The abdicated British monarch and his American-born wife were greeted in a formal speech when the Duchess opened the annual charity bazaar held by fashionable Christ Church in the suburb of Neuilly.

"We thank you very much for your welcome," the Duchess replied to Chaplain W. H. F. Couldridge's speech. "We both are very glad and wish you every success."

After the brief opening ceremony the Windsors visited the sales booths, ordering several things sent to their hotel.

The United States Embassy announced the Windsors would be the guests of Ambassador William C. Bullitt for the third time tomorrow night. They will see motion pictures at the Embassy.

None But the Best Doughnuts Bear the "Seal of Tested Quality"

CHOSEN companion to picnics, partner on harvest parties, favorite sustainer of football fans—doughnuts unquestionably form part of every picture this time of year.

Not just ordinary doughnuts, mind you. But the round, plump fellows—appetizing, brown and done to a turn. They're grand eating—and so easy to procure.

All you do is look for the "Seal of Tested Quality"—displayed wherever good doughnuts are sold.

The Seal tells the story of Grade A ingredients—blended to a formula that never varies. A formula that produces doughnuts delectably digestible, nutritious and full of food value. A formula that turns out doughnuts uniform in size, and shape, each light and crisp, each the same beautiful shade of golden brown!

Local bakers and dealers everywhere offer them to you in all their goodness. Look for the Seal in grocery stores, restaurants, luncheonettes. Investigate the many varieties now being offered—plain doughnuts, sugared, crunch, chocolate, et al! They're the top touch to all sorts of feasts.

ON BAGS—When you buy doughnuts in bags, look for this Seal on the bag.

COUNTIES TO BE SELECTED TO SHARE IN TENANT FUNDS

Recommendations to Be Made to Wallace Dec. 3; Total of $316,000 for State.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 20.—The initial step in distribution of the $316,158 Missouri allotment under the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act will be taken here Dec. 3, J. F. Nicholson, State Director of Rural Rehabilitation and executive secretary of the Missouri Nine-Man Advisory Committee, said today.

The committee, meeting with regional and national officials of the Farm Security Administration, will recommend counties to receive benefits to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, who will make the final decision, Nicholson said.

It is expected that 10 to 20 counties will share in the allotment. After Wallace designates the counties, voluntary county committees of three will begin examination of applications, Nicholson said.

TWO DENTISTS CITED BY MISSOURI BOARD

Dr. A. J. Rust Jr. and Dr. T. E. Collins Charged With Unprofessional Conduct.

Dr. A. J. Rust Jr. and Dr. T. E. Collins, dentists with offices at 620 Washington avenue, were cited yesterday by the Missouri State Dental Board to appear before it Dec. 11 to answer charges of unprofessional conduct. The hearing will be held at Hotel Statler.

The citations, ordering the dentists to "show why license or certificate of registration, or both," should not be supsended or revoked, were served late yesterday. Six violations of the Missouri Dental Act were alleged. The change were: Indirect advertising of prices for professional services; indirect advertising by means of a large display, a glaring light sign, a display showing a representation of teeth, us of advertising solicitors, and by permitting the Dr. Rust Dentists Laboratories, Inc., to advertise prices.

Both Deny Charges.

Dr. A. J. Rust Jr. said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that all of the charges were false. He declared that the laboratory was operated by his father and that neither he nor Dr. Collins was connected with the corporation, which occupies offices on the same floor. A similar denial was made by Dr. Collins.

Members of the Dental Board, which met yesterday at the Statler, declined to comment on issuance of the charges. Dr. E. B. Owen, St. Louis member of the board, remarking that "my hands are tied," would not identify Leslie A. Kendell, whose name appeared as complainant on the citations.

Dr. A. J. Rust Sr., head of dental laboratories downtown and in Wellston and at Kansas City, declared to the reporter that the citations were an "obvious attempt to strike at me through my son." Dr. Rust Sr. was cited by the Dental Board in 1934 on charges of advertising prices, and he asserted yesterday that the citation was dismissed after he had obtained a permanent injunction in Circuit Court at Kansas City.

Says Display Case Is Small.

The elder Rust said that a small display case showing dental plates was used at a downtown office and that the "glaring" sign was at the Wellston office. He asserted also that he was not a practicing dentist, and that he advertised only the prices of X-ray examinations, a matter which is not covered by the Dental Act.

In remarking that he used the services offered by his father's laboratories, Dr. Rust Jr. said that he received no benefit from the corporation advertising. He added that the only signs employed by Dr. Collins and himself were small nameplates on their office door.

A graduate of the Chicago College of Dental Surgery, Dr. Rust Jr. said he was second highest in examinations before the National Dental Board in 1936. He established the office with Dr. Collins last June.

Dr. Collins, graduate of the Kansas City Western Dental College and the Chicago College of Dental Surgry, said he had practiced in St. Louis and Springfield, Mo., for 13 years.

MRS. ELLEN CRAIB ESTATE INVENTORIED AT $438,163

Daughter of Late W. C. McBride Left Bulk to Two Sisters and Children of a Third.

The estate of Mrs. Ellen McBride Craib, who died Oct. 2, was valued at $438,163 in an inventory filed yesterday in Probate Court at Clayton. The will of Mrs. Craib, wife of Balfour Stuart Craib, retired merchant, and daughter of the late W. C. McBride, multimillionaire oil man, left the bulk of her estate to her sisters, Mrs. Isaac D. Kelley Jr. and Mrs. William D. Orthwein Jr., and to four daughters of another sister, Mrs. Birch O. Mahaffey.

Items listed in the inventory were: Notes, $266,158; accounts, $110,558; stocks, $13,535; bonds, $14,170; cash, $10,226; chattels, $6000, and real estate, $17,515.

Beneficiaries were among those whose notes constituted a part of the estate. Notes listed were: Birch O. Mahaffey, trustee, $104,775.96; Mrs. Orthwein, two notes for $52,460 each; Mrs. Kelley, $52,460, and Eleanor Tilton, $4000.

Accounts listed were: Easton-Taylor Trust Co., $49,353; Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Co., $7216; K. McB. Kelley, open account, $52,460. The home of Mrs. Craib at Narragansett, R. I., valued at $17,500, was left to her husband, for whom an annuity had been provided.

Farmer's Share of Food Dollar Up.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—The farmer will receive 46 cents of the consumer's food dollar this year, Agriculture Department economists estimated today. The remaining 54 cents will go to processors, wholesalers, transportation lines and retailers. The farmer's share was said to be the largest since 1929, when he received 47 cents of the dollar.

G. Avery Cabinett Dies.

By the Associated Press.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia., Nov. 20.—G. Avery Cabinett, Federal grain supervisor for most of Iowa and part of Illinois, with headquarters in Cedar Rapids, died today at his home here after a long illness. He had been connected with the Federal grain division for 25 years, the last 10 in Cedar Rapids.

CATHOLIC BISHOPS OF U. S. ASSAIL GERMAN GOVERNMENT

Real Issues Concerning Church in Spain Beclouded by Propaganda, They Charge.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20. — The Catholic bishops of the United States assailed the German Government today for what they termed persecution of the church. They said that all religious-minded men and women were "outraged by the Satanic resourcefulness of these leaders of modern paganism."

The bishops said also that "clever propaganda, maliciously used" had beclouded the real facts concerning the Church of Spain.

The statements were made in separate letters to the heirarchies of Germany and Spain before the bishops concluded a three-day annual meeting here.

"The attempt to vilify priests and to destroy their reputations in indecent and frequently unjustified trials has produced in our country just the contrary effect," the letter to the German heirarchy said. "It has shown us and the world the degradation of governmental agencies in Germany today."

The letter to Spain expressed sorrow over the church's "suffering" there.

STORE HELD UP, MANAGER FORCED TO HAND OVER $60

Robber, Armed with Pistol, Made Purchases Before Demanding Money.

A man with a pistol held up a Kroger grocery at 3671 Olive street last evening, escaping on foot after forcing the manager to hand him about $60 from a cash register.

The manager, William McDonnell, said he and a clerk were the only ones in the store when the man entered and drew the pistol after making several purchases. He said the robber was about 35 years old, and wore a dark overcoat and checkered cap.

"SINCE"

"Since it relieved our coughs four years ago, we get REM whenever there's a need for a cough medicine."

Mrs. Walter W. Brown
1604 W. Oak St., Louisville, Ky.

Here's Why:

Mrs. Brown's enthusiasm is shared by thousands . . . REM is so good that delighted users are glad to pass the good word along. There are definite reasons why REM is so effective and brings relief so quickly:

(1) REM is made specifically for coughs resulting from colds.

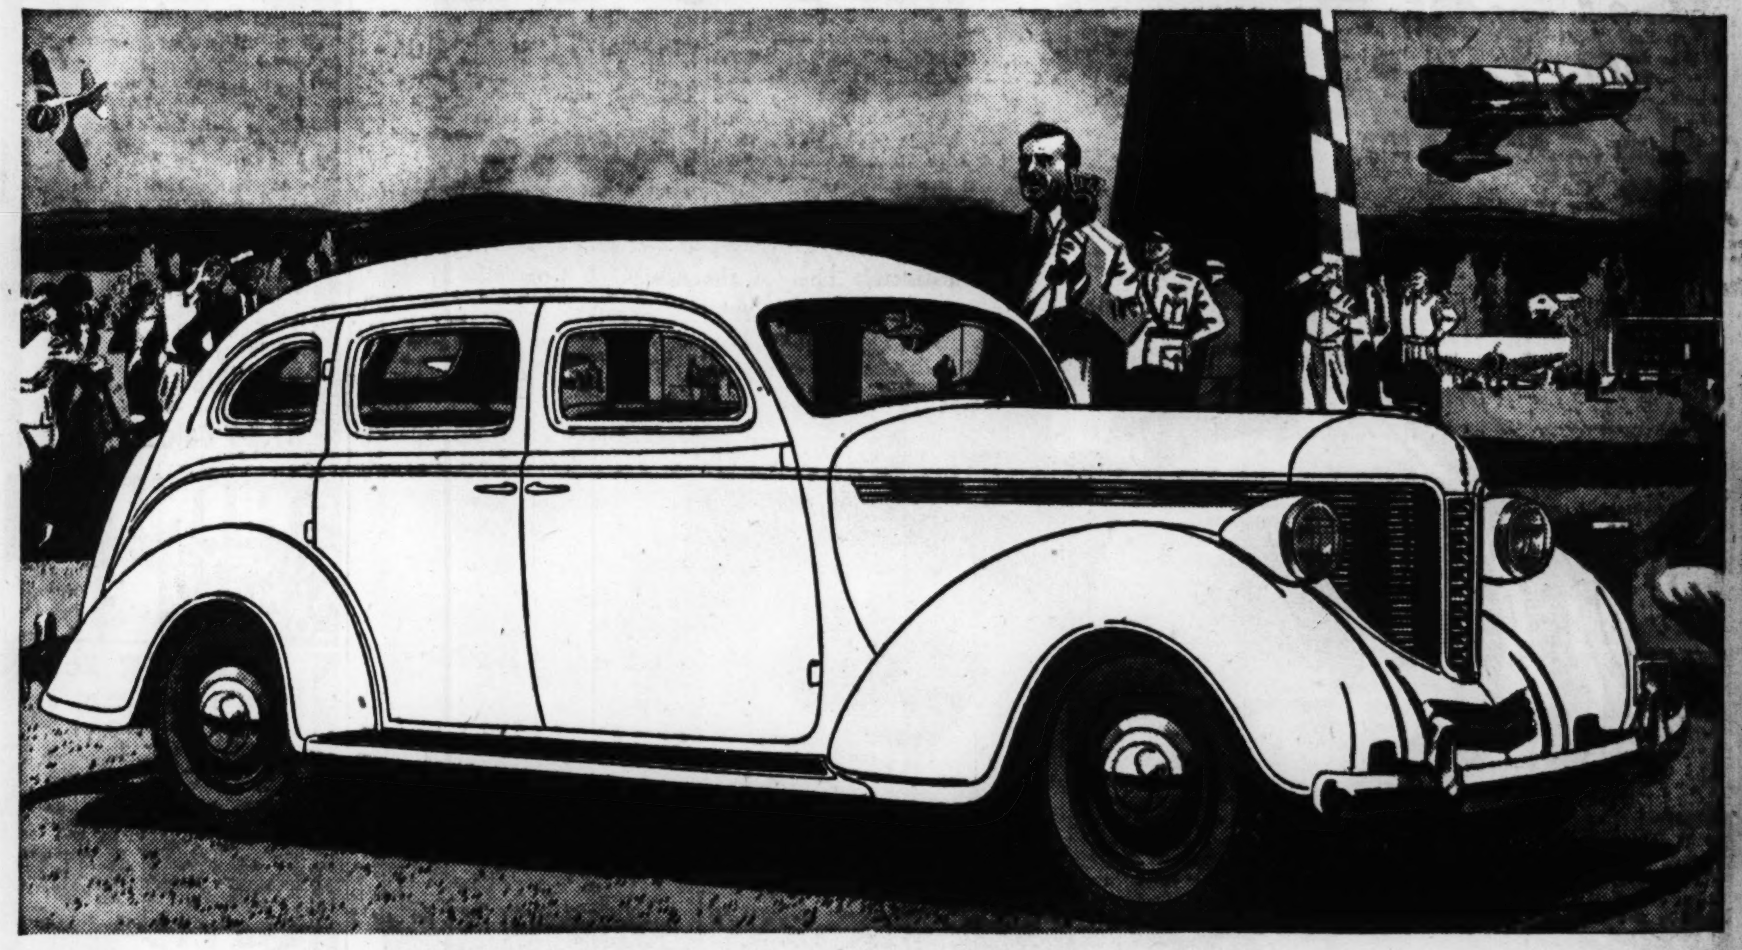
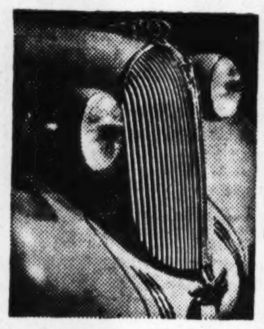
(2) REM is a real cough medicine, not just a "tickle stopper."

(3) REM is thorough because it works two ways . . . not only in the throat, but also systemically. That's what makes it so very much more effective.

So if you have a cough resulting from a cold, don't fool around with it! Go after it with a real cough medicine like REM.





LOWELL THOMAS HAS A BIG STORY ABOUT HIS NEW DE SOTO

Every DeSoto Feature is a Headline Story—DeSoto Now Priced Just Above the Lowest!

FARMERS URGED TO INCREASE WILD LIFE ON THEIR LANDS

Planting of Trees on Waste Areas Recommended by Speaker at Columbia, Mo.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 20.—Farmers should regard wild life as a crop and establish a program to increase it, Warren W. Chase, regional biologist of the Soil Conservation Service, said here today at the closing session of the first all-State conservation conference.

"Perhaps we do not have enough wild life and woodland areas built up now to produce an income," he said, "but this will come in time if a conservation program is established and maintained."

Chase pointed out that farmers should establish wild life areas on their land by planting trees on waste acreage. He added that an increase in wild life would benefit the coming generation and bring a better living to the farmer.

Other speakers included: David Meeker, W. C. Etheridge, J. C. Wooley and D. B. Ibach, all of the Missouri College of Agriculture; K. G. Harmon, State co-ordinator of the Soil Conservation Service, and R. L. Von Trebra, regional conservationist of the Soil Conservation Service.

About 200 persons attended the two-day meeting.

94,000 RETURNS HERE IN CENSUS OF JOBLESS

Double the Expected Number — Some From Jokers and Unemployables.

A total of 94,083 residents of St. Louis and St. Louis County has made returns in the unemployment census, more than double the advance estimate of Postoffice officials.

The deadline for sending in cards was last midnight, and it was expected that late arrivals, to be counted tomorrow, would increase the total but slightly. Yesterday 12,492 cards were received.

After the count is completed at the Main Postoffice here, the cards will be forwarded to Washington for classification and analysis. Results of the national census will not be made known until early next year.

Among the local returns were cards from persons classified as unemployable and some from practical jokers. The latter included replies purported to be from business executives, professional men and others holding positions.

PRISONER SHOOTS HIMSELF AFTER ADMITTING KILLING

Man Arrested in Pittsburgh, Pa., Confesses Murder of New York Policeman.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 20.—Carl Sommerfield, 29 years old, who, police said, admitted the Greenwich Village killing of a New York police officer in 1931, shot himself, perhaps fatally, today as he was being questioned at police headquarters.

Detective Inspector Walter Monaghan said Sommerfield admitted killing Sergt. Timothy Murphy in a restaurant holdup. Then, said Monaghan, as he turned to call in New York detectives to hear the confession, Sommerfield drew a pistol that had been strapped to his leg and fired three bullets into his body.

Sommerfield was taken to Mercy Hospital, three wounds in his breast. Physicians said he has little chance to live.

Another suspect, Jack Brabson, 32, was taken into custody with Sommerfield and was being questioned in an adjoining room. New York police officials announced two other men, Joseph Feola, 22, and Benjamin Hyman, 35, were arrested there today in connection with the same holdup slaying.

Monaghan quoted Sommerfield as saying on the way to the hospital: "I might as well kill myself as go to New York and testify against those fellows."

Police said both Sommerfield and Brabson are former prison parolees.

IMPORTS FOR STARCH MAKING BEING INVESTIGATED BY HULL

Illinois Congressman Says Sago and Cassava Sent in Cost Farmers $18,000,00 a Year.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20. — Secretary of State Cordell Hull had under investigation today a report by Representative Hugh M. Rigney of Arthur, Ill., that imported tapioca, sago and cassava were costing American farmers $18,000,000 a year by displacing domestic corn in starch making.

Rigney said the report was based on information from employes of the Staley Corn Products Manufacturing Co. at Decatur, Ill. They told him they were "being denied full-time work because of the competition presented by sago and tapioca being imported from the Netherlands."

Rigney supplied Hull with figures purporting to show that in 1935 approximately 240,000,000 pounds of tapioca and sago, "equal to 7,280,000 bushels of corn," were imported duty free.

The Congressman's report added that "in 1936 these imports were greatly increased and, according to the Corn Industries Research Foundation, 270 Broadway, New York, there were 301,000,000 pounds imported during the first seven months of 1937."

LA GUARDIA NAMES OPPONENT IN 1921 RACE DEPUTY MAYOR

Henry H. Curran Assigned to New Post in New York City Government.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Deputy Mayor—a new job in the New York City government—was the post assigned today by Mayor LaGuardia to Henry H. Curran, 60-year-old magistrate and one-time president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. Curran defeated LaGuardia for the Republican nomination for Mayor in 1921, then lost the election to John F. Hylan.

The Mayor now can delegate many powers to his deputy, exceptions including the powers of appointment and removal of officials, of calling hearings and of presiding at Board of Estimate sessions. However, he may cast the Mayor's board vote.

Curran was Immigration Commissioner at Ellis Island from 1923 to 1926. He has held several municipal offices including that of Manhattan borough president.

BRANCH POSTOFFICE BUILDING AT WELLSTON IS DEDICATED

W. Rufus Jackson Speaks at Ceremonies After Parade in Business District.

The Wellston branch postoffice, at Hamilton and Ridge avenues, completed last week at a cost of $95,500, was dedicated last night by Postmaster W. Rufus Jackson, who spoke at ceremonies held at the building after a parade of postoffice employes and civic organizations from the business district.

Special cancellations printed on a card were given spectators as souvenirs. The branch will be open for business tomorrow morning. Construction of the building, of Vermont marble and Carthage limestone, started a year ago.

Postmaster Jackson, in his speech, traced development of the office from its beginning in 1873, when the community was known as Rinkelville. He said receipts have increased from $29,083 in 1912 to $121,588 in 1936.

WORK ON FARM BILL SPEEDED UP BY COMMITTEES

Groups in Congress Start Continuous Sessions in Hope of Presenting Measure Tuesday.

SENATE DIFFERENCES "NOT VERY SERIOUS"

Wallace Confident After Seeing Garner — House Body Agrees Tentatively on Most of Corn Plan.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20. — Farm bill leaders, anxious to get a measure before Congress on Tuesday, speeded up committee machinery today.

Joining in an almost unprecedented maneuver, Senate and House Agricultural Committees undertook executive sessions, with some subcommittees scheduled to be in virtually continuous sessions until Monday.

The strategy apparently gave Secretary of Agriculture Wallace confidence the administration's No. 1 item was rounding into shape. He told reporters after a conference with Vice-President Garner that the measure was "coming along all right." It was assumed they conferred on plans for handling the bill, which leaders have decided to set ahead of the pending anti-lynching legislation.

The progress of the committees was none too rapid.

Differences "Not Very Serious."

Chairman Smith of South Carolina said the Senate Committee had been able to agree only as far as Page 6 of the 124-page bill. He added, however, that committee differences "were not very serious."

"I have asked the committee to keep going all day and all night if necessary," he said, adding with a chuckle; "if I can go fox-hunting until 3 o'clock in the morning, this committee can certainly put in as much time working for the people."

Senator Norris of Nebraska doubted the measure would be reported out by Monday, although he expected some report to be made to the Senate on the status of studies at that time.

"All members of the committee are working hard," he said, "but no two of them agree."

Norris led a subcommittee revolt against "purchasing the compliance" of cotton farmers with benefits and "forcing" corn farmers to co-operate with a program of marketing quotas and penalty taxes.

Differ on Basis of Control.

Smith said the main question before the Senate committee was whether to base control and benefits on the farmers' base acreage as specified under the present soil conservation program or authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to ascertain the acreage and average yield per farm and make allotments to the various States according to average acre production.

The committee had about decided, he said, that the ever-normal granary should be put in operation for wheat when the supply for domestic consumption, export, and carryover exceeded 10 per cent of the grain usually needed.

The corn granary would be put into effect immediately upon ascertaining the normal supply for domestic and foreign requirements under tentative Senate committee proposals.

Senate committeemen debated whether to offer wheat and corn growers outright acreage-control contracts or blanket them in on general provisions for a referendum vote before any program became effective.

Both groups were stirred by legal opinion in some quarters that the proposed referenda were an unconstitutional delegation of legislative power to an unofficial source.

House Committee's Progress.

After an all-day session, the House Agriculture Committee had almost completed consideration of a sub-committee's recommendations for a corn control program.

Tentative agreement was reached, members said, to impose a penalty of 15 cents a bushel on corn sold in excess of the bill's marketing quotas. The Agriculture Department had suggested a 25-cent penalty.

Representative Coffee (Dem.), Nebraska, said the group also tentatively decided commodity loans on corn should be made on a basis of not less than 60 per cent or more than 75 per cent of parity. Under the formula prescribed, the present parity price is 87 cents a bushel.

In contrast to the Senate Committee's proposal, the House group indorsed, subject to reconsideration, provisions requiring corn producers to store a percentage of their crop whenever the supply exceeded 15 per cent of normal. The bill defines the normal supply as the domestic and export needs plus a carryover of 7 per cent of that total.

The House group adjourned until Monday, but Chairman Jones of Texas said cotton and wheat subcommittees, still wrestling with their respective sections of the bill, would continue their work over the week-end.

7 C I O UNIONS AT CLEVELAND INDORSE RACKET INVESTIGATION

White Collar Workers Urge Authorities to Protect Labor's Lawful Rights, However.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 20. — Seven white collar C I O locals urged authorities today to "prosecute to a decisive conclusion" their current investigation of alleged extortion by several Cleveland labor leaders and unions.

"The chief victims of such practices are the rank and file of union members," the C I O resolution said. "The cause of trade unionism and the advancement of labor depends on leadership that has intelligence and integrity."

It urged, however, that the authorities "respect and assure the lawful right of all unions, lest the investigation be used as a weapon aimed at legitimate activities which are necessary for the preservation of the unions."

A county grand jury is investigating evidence of asserted labor racketeering gathered in a four-month investigation by Eliot Ness, Cleveland safety director. The grand jury has heard several out-of-town business men who, Ness said, had been victimized by union agents in connection with building activities here.

Unions joining in the C I O resolution were the United Retail Employes; United Federal Workers; State, County and Municipal Workers; United Office and Professional Workers; Cleveland Newspaper Guild; American Telegraphists' and the W P A Teachers' Union.

TOURS, EXHIBITS, LECTURES FOR 'KNOW ST. LOUIS WEEK'

Programs Outlined for Industrial Cultural, Educational and Medical Days.

The fifth annual "Know St. Louis Week," sponsored by the Young Men's Division of the Chamber of Commerce, will be observed this week with special tours, exhibits and lectures on the city's industrial, cultural and educational advantages.

Tuesday has been designated "Industrial St. Louis Day," and will be observed by trips through factories and plants. Wednesday will be "Cultural St. Louis Day," with open house to be held at the Art Museum and Jefferson Memorial in Forest Park and at the Artists' Guild, Union boulevard and Enright avenue. "Educational Day" will be observed Thursday with special talks to be given at St. Louis University's schools of medicine and commerce.

Friday will be "Medical Day," with a public tour of Barnes Hospital scheduled at 1 p. m. A program in memory of Eugene Field, poet, will be held Saturday at the Field Home, Broadway and Cerre street. A sight-seeing tour of the city on Sunday will conclude the week's observance.

Talk at Social Science Forum.

"Results of the Labor Vote in New York and Detroit" will be the subject of a talk by Al Easton before the Social Science Forum tonight at 7 o'clock at 3602A Finney avenue.

Barring of Play Upheld by Court.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 20.—United States District Judge Wayne G. Borah ruled today that the city of New Orleans was within its right in refusing a permit for the play "Tobacco Road" to be presented here. He denied an injunction sought by the producers. Mayor Robert S. Maestri refused the permit on the ground that the play was "obscene."

SIGNERS OF MEDICAL PROPOSAL CRITICISED

County Society's Bulletin "Astonished" to Find 19 St. Louis Doctors Among Them.

Editors of the St. Louis County Medical Society Bulletin were "astonished" to find the names of 19 prominent St. Louis physicians and surgeons on the list of 429 doctors who signed a "medical declaration of independence," indorsing public health principles and proposals previously rejected by the American Medical Association, an editorial in the current issue of the Bulletin states.

"It is to be hoped that there was some misunderstanding on the part of the local signers, and that they quickly correct their mistakes," the editorial asserted. There were originally 20 St. Louis signers, but one said he had not signed and had not authorized the use of his name.

"It seems that some 430 physicians, most of whom are connected with teaching institutions, have ordained that they are a self-chosen Moses who will lead us out of the medical chaos that is depriving (??) the people of the United States of the proper medical care," the editors wrote.

"If the entire medical profession that is close to the patient has seen fit to adopt the principles that have been promulgated by their own members in the House of Delegates of the A. M. A., then why should some 430 physicians and surgeons, part-time or full-time university paid, place themselves in so distressing and unseemly a position?

"The proposals of the 430 physicians are for the most part accepted principles of those who would socialize medicine, build up larger and more inclusive health departments, socialize the medical schools, socialize the research departments, socialize the hospitals, and all of this would be under a consolidated Federal department."

The main proposals indorsed by the physicians who defied the American Medical Association were that preventive medicine should be emphasized; that public funds should be used to provide adequate medical care for the indigent and to support medical education and research, and that health functions of the Government should be consolidated in one department.

Association Trustees Reply to Backers of Changes in Principles.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—Trustees of the American Medical Association, replying to advocates of proposed changes in medical principles, reaffirmed today their adherence to the House of Delegates' decision rejecting the plan at the last national meeting.

The board of trustees said the same proposals had been rejected by the House of Delegates, the elected representatives of the association's 106,000 members, after thorough consideration.

The governing body's mandate to the trustees, officers and employes of the association, the statement continued, "opposes the principles and proposals emanating from the Committee of Physicians."

The board advised that until the elected representatives determine "that some fundamental change or revolution in the nature of development, distribution and payment for medical service in the United States is necessary, physicians will do well to abide by the principles which the House of Delegates has established.

"They will at the same time deprecate any attempts inclined to lead the executive and legislative branches of our Government, as well as the people of the United States, into the belief that the American medical profession is disorganized."

The trustees said the profession was ready and willing to consider ways of meeting the problem of providing medical service to those unable to pay the full cost.

TWO KILL EACH OTHER IN KENTUCKY PISTOL FIGHT

Quarreled in Henderson Pool Hall and Apparently Went Outside and "Shot It Out."

By the Associated Press.

HENDERSON, Ky., Nov. 20.—Byron Tinson, 50 years old, and Graham Raymond, 30, were shot to death tonight. Police Sergt. Edward Brown said they fought with pistols in front of a pool hall operated by Tinson a short distance from police headquarters.

Brown said: "A quarrel apparently started in the pool hall and the two men walked outside and shot it out."

Raymond operated a furniture store two doors from the pool hall.

WILKINS ON WAY TO ARCTIC

Party Hunting Russian Flyers Reaches Fort Resolution.

By the Associated Press.

EDMONTON, Alberta, Nov. 20.—(Canadian Press.)—The monoplane carrying the Sir Hubert Wilkins searching party landed at 2:30 p. m. today at Fort Resolution, N. W. T., after a 600-mile flight from Edmonton. The flight completed the first lap of a 1750-mile journey to Aklavik where a base will be established for flights over the Arctic in search for six Russian airmen lost since last August en route to the United States from Russia.

The searching plane was piloted by Air Commodore Herbert Hollick Kenyon and carried Sir Hubert; W. R. Wilson, radio engineer of Toronto; and Alan Dyne, air engineer of Winnipeg.

ANTI-FASCIST MASS MEETING TONIGHT

Ex-Congressman Marcantonio to Be Principal Speaker at the Armory.

A public mass meeting to demonstrate and explain "the American way" to those who fear the infiltration of Fascist ideas in this country will be held tonight at 8:30 o'clock at the Armory, Grand boulevard and Market street, under the auspices of the recently formed St. Louis Council for American Democracy.

The principal speaker will be Vito Marcantonio, former Progressive Republican Congressman from New York City. Admission will be free.

The meeting was originally planned to be a counter-demonstration to the Midwestern regional convention of the Amerikadeutscher Volksbund, a pro-Nazi organization in this country. The Volksbund, however, postponed its convention until next week-end when it found difficulty in obtaining a hall. The convention was barred from the German House, 2345 Lafayette avenue, and it is now scheduled to be held at the Oakville Farmers' Club on Telegraph road in St. Louis County.

The St. Louis Industrial Union Council and the Forty and Eight Society of the St. Louis County American Legion posts have protested to the Farmers' Club against permitting the Volksbund convention in its building. Another protest against Volksbund activities in St. Louis was made yesterday by the Associated Garment Industries of St. Louis, an association of 45 clothing and dress goods manufacturing companies.

Directors of the Farmers' Club announced last night, through Andrew Cooseman, club manager, that the meeting would be held as scheduled. The directors met last evening with a committee from the Bund to discuss terms and other details.

Cooseman said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that the meeting would be held from 6 p. m. Saturday to 1 a. m. Sunday. He said one or two men were to speak and that the balance of the program would consist of dancing and entertainment. Cooseman declared that the Bund committee had signed a contract for use of the club, but declined to give the rental price made to the organization.

A varied group of organizations will participate in the program tonight, which will be preceded by a concert by the American Legion band, starting at 8 o'clock. The Rev. Truman B. Douglass, pastor of Pilgrim Congregational Church and chairman of the St. Louis Council for American Democracy, will preside.

Some of the groups whose representatives will participate are the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the United Spanish War Veterans, the American Federation of Labor, the Committee for Industrial Organization, the German Liberty Union and various other German-American, civic and patriotic societies.

The program will be augmented by the reading of a "statement of purpose" of the St. Louis Council for American Democracy by Fred W. Emig, vice-chairman; by a "definition of Americanism," read by Harry S. Sharpe of the Spanish War Veterans, and by a pledge of allegiance to the American flag.

Actress Gets Divorce in Mexico.

By the Associated Press.

EL PASO, Tex., Nov. 20.—Betty Lawford, stage and movie actress, obtained a Mexican divorce from her producer husband, Monta Bell, in Juarez a week ago, her attorney disclosed here today. Miss Lawford, now appearing in the Broadway production "The Women," was granted the divorce on the ground of incompatability. They were married in New York, Dec. 23, 1931.

MEXICAN RIGHTIST PLOT AGAINST PRESIDENT CHARGED

Communist Official Makes Accusation in Speech on Anniversary of Overthrow of Diaz.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO, D. F., Nov. 20.—Hernan Laborde, secretary of the Mexican Communist party, today accused Rightists of plotting a revolt against President Lazaro Cardenas with financial aid from foreign countries. The charge was made in an address to 30,000 workers gathered before the President's palace to commemorate the twenty-seventh anniversary of the revolution which overthrew Dictator Porfirio Diaz.

The Communist leader said proof of the plot was "storage of arms and munitions in Guatemala and the introduction of great quantities into Mexico."

"Mexican labor points with a finger of fire to the reactionary groups in the country financed by foreign companies which oppose the masses of the people," Laborde said.

NEW Y. M. C. A. CORNERSTONE TO BE LAID AT U. OF ILLINOIS

John R. Mott to Participate in Ceremony for $300,000 Building This Afternoon.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Nov. 20.—The cornerstone of the new $300,000 campus Y. M. C. A. at the University of Illinois will be set tomorrow afternoon in a public ceremony with John R. Mott, founder of the World Student Christian Federation and Y. M. C. A. worker of 50 years' experience, participating.

Funds were raised by subscriptions of students, graduates, faculty members and other friends. A large auditorium in the building has been named Latzer Hall in recognition of the contributions of the Latzer family of St. Louis and Highland, Ill.

The modified two-story Tudor style building, which faces the university campus near the library, will be a center for non-denominational activities of the more serious, deeper side of student life. Statistics show that 16,000 students attended meetings and social affairs sponsored by the Y. M. C. A. last year and that 54,000 used its lounge and rooms for study, reading and recreation.

NISON TREGOR VISITS FRIENDS IN ST. LOUIS

ARTIST IN CITY

—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.

NISON TREGOR.

Nison Tregor, young Russian-born sculptor, whose subjects have included President Roosevelt, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, Henry Ford and Henry Morgenthau Sr., is visiting in St. Louis before going to Hollywood to model heads of movie actors. He is a guest at the home of Miss Clara Frampton, 7314 Westmoreland avenue, University City.

Children and those adults whose faces show pronounced character make the best subjects for sculptors, Tregor said to a Post-Dispatch reporter last night. A careworn face or a child with full lips and irrepressible manner are best to work with, he added.

For Tregor, the subject need not stay in one position while posing, and few do. President Roosevelt was busy signing N R A codes when Tregor made a clay likeness of him in five sittings. Now in bronze, this bust is on display in the White House.

"Mr. Roosevelt was always very pleasant and very encouraging while I worked in his office, even though I littered it constantly with bits of clay, and persons came in and out all day long," Tregor recalled.

In the 15 years he has been in the United States he has modeled many heads and busts of the prominent. He has had as subjects Lady Diana Manners, Rosamond Pinchot, Vincent Bendix, Raymond Moley and James Farley. A bust of the late Knute Rockne, which he made from photographs after the football coach was killed in an airplane crash, is at a memorial building in South Bend, Ind.

Women are more difficult to model than men, he said, but he was unable to explain just why. While he is modeling likenesses of film stars in Hollywood, a short movie will be made of Tregor at work.

Born 33 years ago in Vilna, now part of Poland, Tregor has a military bearing and manner, apparently the result of his service in the Russian army during the late stages of the World War. A deep scar on the right side of his face and another on his left wrist were inflicted with a sword, he related, when he was captured with a Russian scouting party by Polish soldiers.

He considers sculptural ability "something you are born with." He began carving bits of wood at 6, and later enrolled in the Polish Academy. But he developed most of his skill working alone or with the advice of older sculptors. After being an assistant to two sculptors in New York, his first big step was taken when he was invited to execute a bust of the Chancellor of McGill University, Montreal. That led to many other engagements.

MILWAUKEE ARCHBISHOP BARS GAMES OF CHANCE IN CHURCH

Order Includes Institutional Benefits or Activities at Which Prizes Are Given.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 20.—Archbishop Samuel A. Stritch in a letter to pastors of Catholic churches in the Milwaukee archdiocese today barred "chance games at church or institutional benefits or recreational activities at which the prizes given will be money or its equivalent."

"We understand how at such benefits and recreational activities there must be prizes," the letter said, "but we insist that these prizes be of such a nature that there can be no accusation of gambling in a real sense of the word." The archbishop repeated "our directions that there be no sale or distribution under any pretext on our parish or institutional premises of intoxicating beverages."

METHODIST RESOLUTION ON CHINESE-JAPANESE WAR

Board of Foreign Missions Says U. S. Must Bear Full Part in Co-Operative Decisions.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—A resolution concerning the conflict between China and Japan, adopted today by the Methodist Episcopal Board of Foreign Missions, said christians "must deal with the inequities and injustices and inordinate ambitions which are the destroyers of peace."

The resolution, which said "we speak as friends of all nations and enemies of none," was submitted by Bishop H. Lester Smith of Cincinnati at the closing session of the board's three-day 119th annual meeting. It said that "in the momentous decisions called for in the realm of co-operative action, the United States must bear its full part. Irresponsible isolation is futile, ignoble and unchristian."

CLARK FINANCE CHAIRMAN

Gale F. Johnston of St. Louis Heads Campaign Committee.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 20.—The appointment of Gale F. Johnston of St. Louis as chairman of a finance committee for the campaign of United States Senator Bennett Champ Clark, candidate for re-election, was announced today by Rubey M. Hulen, campaign chairman.

Charles L. Aylward, an officer of the Columbia National Bank at Kansas City, was named vice chairman of the finance committee in charge of Western Missouri. State campaign headquarters have been opened at 2018 Railway Exchange building, St. Louis, in charge of Charles J. Vaughan.

RUSSIAN NOT TO BE DEPORTED

Faced Death as Former White Army Officer, Lawyer Says.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 20.—Nicholas Bogomoletez, former Major-General in the White Russian army, but now a cobbler in Hollywood, will not have to return to Siberia.

Although Bogomoletz was deprived of his United States citizenship in United States District Court for moral turpitude, immigration authorities notified him today he will be permitted to remain in this country under provisions of the Immigration Act of 1922, under which he entered. His attorney said return to Russia would mean his death.

RALPH L. SMITH NAMED COUNTY PROBATION OFFICER

To Take Job Jan. 16 After Completing Studies for Master's Degree in Social Work.

Appointment of Ralph L. Smith as probation officer of St. Louis County was announced yesterday by the Circuit Judges. He will take office Jan. 16 after completing his studies for a master's degree in social work at Washington University.

Smith, 32 years old, was for six years an assistant probation officer in St. Louis, resigning in 1935. He lives at 5833 Nina place. John P. Ossenfort, who resigned recently after 28 years as the county's probation officer, will remain in the office until Smith assumes his duties. The probation officer is paid $2400 a year.

REGISTRATION OF CAROLERS

More Than 400 Groups Enrolled During Past Week.

More than 400 groups of carolers have registered during the past week with the St. Louis Christmas Carols Association for participation in the association's program of carol singing on Christmas Eve. About 1000 groups are expected to take part.

Committees have been organized in the city and county to enlist groups from schools, churches and scout troops. Funds collected by the carolers will be distributed among charitable organizations for aid to underprivileged children.

BRAZIL WILL BARGAIN ON PAYING ITS DEBTS

Authorizes Finance Minister to Arrange Readjustment With Bondholders.

By the Associated Press.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Nov. 20.—Finance Minister Arthur de Souza Costa today was commissioned in a Cabinet meeting over which President Getulio Vargas presided to begin negotiations with holders of Brazilian bonds abroad. It was stated he would seek new accords for the resumption of payment of the Brazilian debt in accordance with the country's financial possibilities. The Government suspended remittance of funds for foreign obligations pending conclusion of the negotiations.

Vargas issued a manifesto Nov. 10, when a new Constitution was promulgated, declaring the new Government would suspend payments on all Government debts abroad. He declared later that Brazil must revise the arrangements for payments on its foreign debt "so as to pay only what we can within our balance of trade." He said at the time that "special consideration" would be given United States holders of Brazilian Government bonds.

J. Reuben Clark Jr., representative of the American Bondholders' Committee in New York, said Nov. 10, that United States investments in Brazilian Federal, state and municipal securities totaled about $360,000,000.

NEW YORK BEAUX ARTS BALL IS DISCONTINUED

Business Decline and Publicity Given $25,000 Costumes Are Among Reasons.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Mrs. S. Stanwood Mencken disclosed tonight that the Architects' Society of the Beaux Arts had decided to discontinue the Beaux Arts Ball this year.

The principal reasons, she said, were the business decline and the "annual ride" for which the event had been taken by the public in general. The ball has had commercial sponsors every year—but this year sponsors did not come forth, Mrs. Mencken said.

She was angry over "the rotten deal all around" she said the ball had received from commentators who depicted it as a waste of money, overlooking, she said, the fact that the proceeds went to educate aspiring architects.

She cited as "outrageous" a comment made by a Broadway columnist that her costume this year would be more elaborate than the $25,000-and-up costumes she wore in other years. She said last year's ball netted only $7000, as compared with $25,000 in previous years.

The balls started over 20 years ago as stag studio affairs and grew into a major social event staged in the city's largest hotels. Things started slipping, Mrs. Mencken commented, when prohibition came and people started getting "tirribly spifflicated." Then came repeal.

Last year part of Mrs. Mencken's Beaux Arts ensemble was an array of neon lights too big for her to wear, before which she stood as her costume proper was unveiled.

U. S. GRAND JURY TO INQUIRE INTO BULLET-SMUGGLING CASE

Five Now Charged With Plotting to Run Ammunition Into Honduras on a Liner.

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 20.—Witnesses were summoned today for a Federal grand jury investigation into an alleged plot to smuggle ammunition from New Orleans into Honduras in violation of the neutrality laws.

Five men, charged with conspiracy to smuggle the ammunition aboard the United Fruit Co. steamship Sixaola, were ordered to appear Wednesday before United States Commissioner Reginald H. Carter Jr.

The latest charge filed was against J. S. West, United Fruit employe in Honduras. District Attorney Rene A. Viosca charged that West, then in New Orleans, loaded 600 rounds of ammunition from a taxicab onto the ship.

Viosca said the ammunition was not removed from the ship on its arrival in Honduras but was returned to New Orleans and fell into the hands of Federal agents.

The other four charged were Israel Slobotzky, connected with a furniture firm; Walter J. Stauffer, hardware company executive, and Louis H. Hardie and James F. Perry, employes of Stauffer.

BETTY GRABLE, JACKIE COOGAN ARE MARRIED IN LOS ANGELES

Many Movie Actors at Wedding of Former St. Louis Girl and Former Child Actor.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 20.—Jackie Coogan, who rose to movie fame as the ragged urchin in the Charlie Chaplin movie "The Kid," 18 years ago, and Betty Grable, movie actress, were married today in St. Brendan's Catholic church.

Conn Grable, retired St. Louis stock broker, accompanied his daughter to the altar. Mrs. Lillian Grable, the bride's mother, and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bernstein, mother and stepfather of the bridegroom, occupied front pews.

Among those who attended the wedding were Jack Haley, Buck Jones, Alice Faye and her husband Tony Martin, and Anne Shirley. Alan Gordon, actor, was best man, and Bob Hope and Arthur Lake, actors, were ushers. Mrs. Grant Garrett, wife of a movie writer, and her sister, Mrs. David Arnold of Kansas City, attended Miss Grable.

Miss Grable was born in St. Louis, and came to California with her mother at the age of 14 to study dancing. After appearing in musical films she returned to St. Louis and there was notified she had been awarded a five-year contract.

NEW ORE-CARRYING SHIP FOR GREAT LAKES LAUNCHED

The Ralph H. Watson, Which Cost $1,500,000, Is Christened at Detroit.

DETROIT, Nov. 20.—The Ralph H. Watson, first ore carrier to be launched at River Rouge since 1930 and the second on the Great Lakes in those seven years, went down the ways here today.

The 610-foot vessel is one of four new ships being put into service by the Pittsburgh Steamship Co., subsidiary of United States Steel.

The ship was launched sidewise at the Great Lakes Engineering Co. yards. Named after a vice-president of the Steel Corporation, it was christened by Miss Margaret H. Merrill of New York, niece of Watson.

The vessel has a cargo capacity of 12,000 tons and will operate between Lake Superior and Lake Erie ports. It cost $1,500,000.

19 U.S.-BUILT PLANES BOUND FOR CHINA

Shipment Once Stopped by President's Order Is Put on Another Ship.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—A $1,000,000 shipment of 19 American-made planes intended for China was aboard a ship somewhere on the Atlantic tonight.

A spokesman for the Chinese Consulate in New York admitted that the planes, manufactured by the Bellanca Aircraft Co. of Newcastle, Del., were purchased by the Chinese Government. The planes are capable of flying 280 miles an hour and have a cruising range of 4000 miles.

Lying in wait are naval patrols from both Japan and Spain. Spanish insurgents are reported to fear that the planes may be headed for Barcelona, via France, there to be used by Government pilots.

Their fears are based on the report that the crates containing the airplanes were marked "D. L. P."—the initials of Don Luiz Prieto, son of the Spanish Government Minister of Defense, Indalacio Prieto. Don Luiz is the London agent for the purchase of war material for the Barcelona Government.

The Chinese Consulate here denied, however, that the planes had been resold to the Spanish Government.

The planes already have traveled more than 12,000 miles. They left New York on Aug. 23 for China on the U. S. Maritime Commission freighter Witchita.

When President Roosevelt's bar on the shipment of war materials on Government-owned ships was proclaimed, the Witchita put in at San Pedro, Cal., where the planes were unloaded.

With the closest secrecy, the cargo was then trans-shipped by rail to Philadelphia, where the planes were stowed aboard the British freighter Malancha and set forth, ostensibly for England, Nov. 9.

Frank Bellanca, New York broker, formerly associated with the Bellanca Aircraft Co., said the planes were originally manufactured for the French National Air Line, Air-France, for use in the French colonial mail service. They were never delivered to Air-France by the purchasing agent, however.

Social Security Grants to States.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—The Social Security Board announced today the following grants to states for the quarter which began Oct. 1: Massachusetts $328,128 for administration of its Unemployment Compensation Act and $400,429 for expansion of its State employment service; Nevada, $15,500 supplemental grant to operate its unemployment compensation agency; Maine, $39,221.68 supplemental grant, and Connecticut $4102 supplemental grant for the same purpose.

CHIEF DELEGATES STAY AWAY FROM BRUSSELS PARLEY

Eden, Delbos and Soviet Envoy Absent—Norman H. Davis Works on Draft of New Statement.

HE AND BRITONS DISCUSS TEXT

Final Adjournment Expected Early in Week With No Decisive Action Anticipated.

By the Associated Press.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 20. — Norman H. Davis, United States spokesman, debated with British delegates today the draft of a new statement on the Chinese-Japanese conflict to be submitted Monday to the apparently dying Brussels conference.

The absence of the principal delegates from Great Britain, France and Russia was regarded as a portent the next session would end without decisive action.

The drafted statement in final formal might follow the general outlines of the speech urging direct negotiations between the warring nations Davis made at the opening session of the conference seeking peace in the Orient.

The draft was submitted to Paul Spaak, Belgian Foreign Minister, prior to discussions Davis had with prior to discussion Davis had with the British delegates, Viscount Cranborne, Foreign Undersecretary, Malcolm MacDonald, Dominions Secretary, and Sir Alexander Cadogan.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden's absence was ascribed in British quarters to a cold he contracted in Brussels last week. Also missing were Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos of France and Soviet Ambassador V. P. Potemkin.

China's appeal to the 19 governments represented at Brussels to withhold war supplies and financial credits from Japan was the main business scheduled for consideration Monday. There was no expectation of such action. It was believed that final adjournment would be taken early next week after adoption of some new statement.

Previously 15 Powers adopted a resolution condemning Japan for military action in China and for refusing to take part in the conference.

Italy voted against the resolution while Norway, Sweden and Denmark abstained from voting.

HAWAIIAN PRINCE SENTENCED TO PRISON FOR KILLING

He Is Ordered to Serve 10 Years After Pleading Guilty of Manslaughter in Death of Woman.

HONOLULU, Nov. 20. — Prince David Kalakaua Kawananakoa, 33 years old, last male descendant of Hawaii's Kings, pleaded guilty to a charge of manslaughter today and was sentenced to 10 years in Oahu penitentiary. He was indicted on a charge of second degree murder, accused of killing Arvilla Kinslea, young part-Hawaiian, with whom he had been living.

The Prince also is under a 10-year sentence for the death of Miss Felicity Connors of Fresno, Cal., killed in an automobile accident in 1932.

Kawananakoa's five-year probation granted in the Connors' case was revoked after Miss Kinslea was killed.

Judge H. E. Stafford ordered the terms to run consecutively, making a maximum of 20 years.

U. S. AMBASSADOR TO BRAZIL MARRIED IN RIO DE JANEIRO

Jefferson Caffery and Miss Gertrude McCarthy Wed in Cardinal's Chapel.

By the Associated Press.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Nov. 20.—The United States Ambassador to Brazil, Jefferson Caffery, and Miss Gertrude McCarthy of Chicago were married today in the private chapel of the arch-episcopal palace by Sebastiao Cardinal Leme.

A message was read from the papal secretary of of state, Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, bestowing the Pope's blessing on the pair.

The church wedding was preceded by a civil ceremony at the United States Embassy. After a wedding breakfast at the home of Embasy Cousellor Robert M. Scotten, Mr. and Mrs. Caffery motored to Therezopolis for a honeymoon.

GRINNELL, Ia., Nov. 20.—Accurate passing by Johnny Nunn gave the St. Louis University Billikens three touchdowns in the first period here this afternoon and started them on their way to a 27-7 victory over Grinnell in a Missouri Valley Conference game played before a homecoming crowd of about 1000.

It was the second victory in the conference for the Billikens and kept them in a tie with Tulsa for first place. Moreover, it was the seventh triumph for St. Louis U. in this season, marred by only one defeat and a tie with De Paul.

Sixteen-degree temperature greeted the teams as they took the field, but the Billikens stayed warm long enough to score three times in the first 15 minutes and then repulsed all but one of the Grinnell scoring threats.

Nunn passed twice to Mel McGonnigle for touchdowns and once to John Hartle, the end with the educated toe who also booted three place-kicks for extra points. St. Louis U. regulars didn't enter the game until the second quarter, and they quickly added another touchdown, scored by Denny Cochran, but Hermanny failed to convert, and that ended the visitors' scoring for the day.

Grinnell's only tally came in the third period when Schlotterbeck climaxed a 50-yard drive with an end run into the end zone and Wittrock added the point.

A Score in One Minute.

The Billikens took the opening kick-off on their 30-yard line. After two line plays failed to gain, Nunn passed about 40 yards to Hartle, who ran the remaining distance for touchdown number one. Hartle added the point, and the game was not a minute old.

Grinnell, after the kickoff, tried some passes, but McGonnigle intercepted one on the Grinnell 25-yard line, and it took the Billikens just one play to rush over number two. Nunn this time threw the leather to McGonnigle, who was waiting on the goal line, and Hartle's conversion made it 14—0.

Hartle's kick-off went over the goal line and Hayworth of Grinnell, forced to punt on third down, got off a weak boot that carried only to the Pioneer 38-yard stripe. Nunn again came through with a long pass to McGonnigle, good for the 38 yards and a third touchdown, and Hartle again converted.

Denny Cochran Tallies.

St. Louis University regulars took charge of the situation in the second quarter. Carl Totsch intercepted Luther's pass on the St. Louis 43-yard line to send the Billikens on their way. A series of plunges by Totsch and D. Cochran put the ball on the Grinnell 14-yard line. D. Cochran and Hermanny in three tries made it a first down on the three-yard line. Hermanny was stopped in his tracks and D. Cochran's pass was knocked down, but on the third down Cochran smashed off tackle for another touchdown. Hermanny's kick for the extra point was wide.

The Bear Stops the Tiger—Except for a Place Kick

Jimmy Conzelman's Washington U. Bears did a good job of stopping the Missouri Tigers at Francis Field yesterday afternoon, as indicated in this photograph showing a Washington tackler about to down Sneed of Missouri, in the first half. The game was won by Missouri, 3 to 0, on a place kick by Mondala in the second period.

Gastanaga and Lewis to Meet in a Return Match Here, Dec. 7

By W. J. McGoogan.

Isidro Gastanaga, Spanish heavyweight boxer who has been making St. Louis his headquarters for some time, has been re-matched with John Henry Lewis, world's light-heavyweight champion, for a 15-round contest at the Arena, Dec. 7, Larry Atkins, matchmaker for St. Louis Post No. 4 of the American Legion, announced last night.

In a previous meeting between the pair at Detroit, Sept. 15, Gastanaga surprised Lewis and the rest of the fight world when he gave the 175-pound champion a severe beating in 10 rounds, dropping the Negro title-holder to the canvas for counts three times.

That setback did much to retard Lewis' announced intention of seeking the heavyweight championship and, according to Atkins, put John Henry in retirement for a couple of weeks.

So badly was he beaten by Gastanaga that Lewis had to cancel several contests, among them one scheduled to be held here with Hank Hankinson.

Gastanaga Awaiting Match.

Atkins tried immediately after the Detroit contest to rematch the pair in St. Louis but John Henry had about enough of Gastanaga and demanded a big price for his services, which it took considerable persuasion on the part of the matchmaker to reduce. Finally Lewis agreed to accept 30 per cent of the net gate receipts.

Gastanaga returned here after Thanksgiving and Football.

ONCE upon a time, when John Harvard, Eli Yale and Old Nassau were as giants of 50 cubits stature compared to their gridiron rivals, the football season came to a grand climax on Thanksgiving day.

The season ended then. Post-season games were as rare as gold-filled pterodactyl teeth. All major schools saved their feature contest for that date. Traditional rivals put everything they had into that last battle—the one of all the campaign they most desired to win.

The undergrads saved up for weeks to take their best girls to the game and to the dance or show afterward. Pa and Ma journeyed long distances and shivered through the wintry cold watching Junior shake his long hair and charge in to do or die for dear old Something-or-Other; the players, held to early hours and training table diet for weeks, looked forward to breaking training—and perhaps breaking up a few music halls and variety shows, by way of letting off pent-up steam.

All that passed away years ago. Thanksgiving day dwindled to half a dozen traditional contests.

First, the season was closed on the Saturday before Thanksgiving day, so that the players might go home to the family and the turkey dinner.

HARVARD BEATS YALE 13-6, WINS BIG 3 HONORS

By the Associated Press.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 20.—Harvard shook off its inferiority complex on the gridiron today, turned loose a powerhouse attack for the first time in years, and broke the spell of Yale's superiority with a thrilling 13-6 victory on a snow-swept field.

The Crimson's smartly-drilled team countered Yale's tying rally in the third period with a smashing 80-yard drive that clinched the game in the last quarter, then repulsed the last desperate aerial bid as the Elis sought to avert their first defeat of the 1937 season.

Frank Foley, Harvard signal-caller and home-town boy, sprinted 10 yards around Yale's left end for the decisive score, after passing to Ray Daughters on a 19-yard play that produced the Crimson's first score in the second period. Between these Harvard tallies, Yale's great captain, Clint Frank, plunged two yards to climax a 67-yard scoring drive, but the heroic performance of the Eli leader was unable otherwise to offset the Crimson's brilliant attack.

58,000 Watch Game.

A capacity crowd of 58,000, jamming Harvard's stadium for the first time in six years, saw the crimson-clad warriors scale heights such as they have not known since the palmy pre-war days.

The Crimson, in ending Yale's three-year winning streak, captured the classic "Big Three" championship for the first time since 1915, when Eddie Mahan was cast in the heroic role. Both walloped Princeton this season and came up to the climax game with a more spirited display of rivalry than

California Wins Rose Bowl Berth But Likely Opponent More Uncertain Than Ever

By the Associated Press.

California's Golden Bears have moved in as the far western Rose Bowl representative but the latest wave of football upsets failed to shed much additional light on just what outfit will get the job of opposing Stub Allison's Pacific Coast conference champions at Pasadena New Year's Day.

While Yale's favored Bulldogs were suffering their first defeat at the hands of Harvard, and Boston College, Navy, Syracuse, Holy Cross, Indiana, Kansas State and Arkansas were cast in the unwanted roles of victims in a series of form reversals yesterday, California wound up an unbeaten season with a 13-0 conquest of Stanford that carried with it the conference championship and a berth in the Rose Bowl classic.

Keeping step with the Golden Bears were the unbeaten Eastern Goliaths, Pittsburgh, Fordham, Villanova and Dartmouth. The South's chief Rose Bowl candidate, Alabama, was idle in preparation for its Thanksgiving day clash with Vanderbilt, itself rated by some experts as a Pasadena eligible if it gets past Alabama.

85,000 See California Win.

A crowd of 85,000 saw California, tied by Washington but undefeated, turn back Stanford with a second half drive that accounted for both touchdowns. Pitt, with its great backfield aces, Goldberg, Cassiano, Stebbins and Patrick running wild, crushed Penn State by a 28-7 score and now needs to stop Duke next Saturday to wind up a season marred only by a scoreless tie with Fordham's powerful Rams.

Fordham was less impressive in a 6-0 victory over St. Mary's Gaels from California although the undefeated Rams dominated play from

MONTANA DEFEATED FIRST TIME, BY IDAHO

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Idaho, Nov. 20.—The University of Idaho Vandals tumbled the University of Montana Grizzlies from their undefeated and untied perch today, 6 to 0.

The Vandals scored the unexpected touchdown in the final quarter.

It was the first defeat for Montana in ten games, including three at the close of the 1936 campaign.

NORTHWESTERN LOSES TO NOTRE DAME, 7 TO 0

By the Associated Press.

EVANSTON, Ill., Nov. 20.—Sweeney, Charles Aloysius Sweeney, told it to Northwestern today.

The fighting Irish of Notre Dame conquered their bitter Big Ten rival, Northwestern, 7 to 0, today in freezing, wind-swept Dyche Stadium, and it was Sweeney, of Bloomington, Ill., hero of Notre Dame's triumph over Navy and Minnesota, who scored the single touchdown, result of a second quarter break. It was Sweeney also, who on three other occasions, contributed defensive gems which helped keep the desperate Wildcats, playing their final game of the season, from scoring.

The bit of Irish good fortune, and Northwestern misfortune, which led to the only score of a bitterly fought battle that kept the greater part of a crowd of 45,000 seated until the finish, came when a Northwestern lineman was guilty of holding as Bernie Jefferson, Negro halfback star, attempted to punt from deep in his own territory. Jeff's first kick went out of bounds on his 40-yard line, but the play was called back, and Northwestern penalized 15 yards to its seven.

Again Jefferson attempted to punt. This time Sweeney, 6 feet and 188 pounds of brilliant right end, and his partner, Alec Shellogg, smashed through and blocked the kick. Sweeney, hardly hesitating in stride, snatched the ball before it reached the frozen sod, and

WASHINGTON THREAT IS STOPPED ON 1-YARD LINE

By J. Roy Stockton

The wind and the snow were blowing in their faces and the Tigers hadn't kicked a goal from the field all year. But it was fourth down on the 12-yard line, with five to go, and the Tigers hadn't been able to gain worth a nickel through the Washington line.

And so Stanley Mondala, portly fullback, fell back to the 20-yard line and Art Murray kneeled to receive the pass from center. The Tigers hadn't kicked a goal all year, and Mondala hadn't even converted a point after touchdown. But Don Faurot, the Tiger coach, was trying to get through the game with his second and third string players and Mondala was the only man available for the job.

Even the angle was bad, Mondala noted, as he measured the turf in front of him, figured the power of the west wind and loosened his leg muscles, as a fighter does in his corner before the bell for the first round.

Jimmy Conzelman and his Bears weren't afraid of the big bad Tiger in that emergency. The Bears had had difficulty with placement kicks from the shadow of the goal, squarely in front of it.

Kick Wins the Game.

But that place kick that Mondala tried and made won a ball game at Francis Field yesterday afternoon. The big fullback had just enough power to clear the goal posts and direction was just good enough to counteract the wind. The ball, turning end over end as it zoomed off Mondala's foot, cut through a corner of the goal post zone and on that kick the Missouri Tigers rode to a 3-to-0 victory over the Washington Bears.

It was a very potent kick, this one by Stanley Mondala from about the 20-yard line. It nullified all the ground gaining of the Bears, making it wholly unimportant that Conzelman's Warriors registered 12 first downs to the Tigers' seven and gained 297 yards on land and through the air, compared to the 186 yards that the Tigers had to show for their 60 minutes of combat with the Bears.

It was not much of a victory for the Missouri squad, when you consider the shouting and hope with which they started the season. It wasn't much of a margin for a team that was quoted as a 4 to 1 favorite by the professional bettors. But it was a victory and the Tigers as they romped off the field with the decision, were very happy about it and there was much gleeful waving of arms and handclapping by the Missouri athletes as they trouped to the dressing room.

Like many defeats that the Bears have suffered this year, this was a tough one to take, for the contest so easily could have gone the other way. For instances after six and one-half minutes of the first quarter, Norman Tomlinson stole the ball from the arms of Jim Christensen as the Tigers tried a line play from the 28-yard line and the Washington lineman ran to the Missouri 11-yard line before he was crowded out of bounds.

So Far and No Further.

It looked like a big break and the Washington partisans among the chilled crowd of about 6000, forgot the bitter cold wind as they roared their applause. Leo Sha-

FORDHAM BOOSTS ROSE BOWL HOPES IN BEATING ST. MARYS

RAMS GREATLY OUTPLAY FOES BUT WIN ONLY BY TOUCHDOWN

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Showing a wealth of offensive power in mid-field but slight scoring punch when the goal posts neared, the Fordham Rams only partially pleased their Rose Bowl boosters today as they downed the scarlet-pantied St. Mary's, 6 to 0, at the Polo Grounds.

The way they tore up the sodden turf between the 20-yard lines, the Rams might have scored six touchdowns instead of the lone marker that rewarded a 58-yard drive in the third period. They were so jittery, so anxious to please any Rose Bowl scouts that might have been in the stands, that they had the officials stop the big "time left to play" clock in the second half. Jimmy Crowley said it made his boys nervous.

Completely outclassed were the once-galloping Gaels. They made only one first down—and that on a pass—while Fordham's fleet backs piled up 16 behind their massive line. The Rams gained, in all, 290 yards; St. Mary's only 32. The great kicking of Jerry Dowd for St. Mary's did much to keep the score down.

Lock Scores.

John Lock, a substitute fullback, was the lad who saved the bacon for the Rams. He went in at the start of the third quarter, after his mates had been blundering around for 30 minutes, threatening and falling back. He began tearing yawning holes through the St. Mary's line, and without letting go of the leather he plunged and fought his way from his own 37-yard line down to the St. Mary's 12-yard line.

On the next play, he took the pass from center, slipped the ball to Krywicki, who tossed it out to Joe Woitkoski, running in the clear. It was an easy counter, the entire St. Mary's team having been bamboozled. The attempted placement was fumbled, but it didn't matter.

Ram Tally Nullified.

Obviously anxious to pile up an impressive score, the Fordhams made no effort to protect their lead. On the contrary, they gambled even harder the rest of the way on passes and laterals, secure in the knowledge they had the St. Mary's offense handcuffed. Four more times they stabbed their way well into St. Mary's territory, and when the final whistle sounded they were on the five-yard line.

An unfortunate penalty for holding deprived the Rams of another touchdown at the outset of the game. Joe Granski got loose on a reverse and made a pretty run of 55 yards across the goal line, but he was whistled back and Fordham assessed 15 yards.

That might have been what cooled the Rams off and spiked their confidence until Lock went in and jerked them out of it.

St. Louis U. High Wins, 12 to 6, Over Roosevelt Team

The St. Louis U. High football team scored touchdowns in both the second and third periods to hand Roosevelt of the Public High School League a 12-6 defeat last night at Walsh Stadium. The Junior Billikens are the 1937 Preparatory League champions.

Earl Peterman, who replaced Ohmer in the St. Louis U. High lineup, made a 17-yard run to make the initial score before the half ended. Kenrick Jones took a 19-yard pass from Roemerman and ran the remaining seven yards for the Junior Billikens' second touchdown in the third quarter.

The lone Roosevelt score also came in the third period, Frank Brown, left halfback, carried the ball over from the nine-yard line.

MARYLAND DEFEATS GEORGETOWN, 12 TO 2

NINETEEN PLAYERS—And Not an Official in View

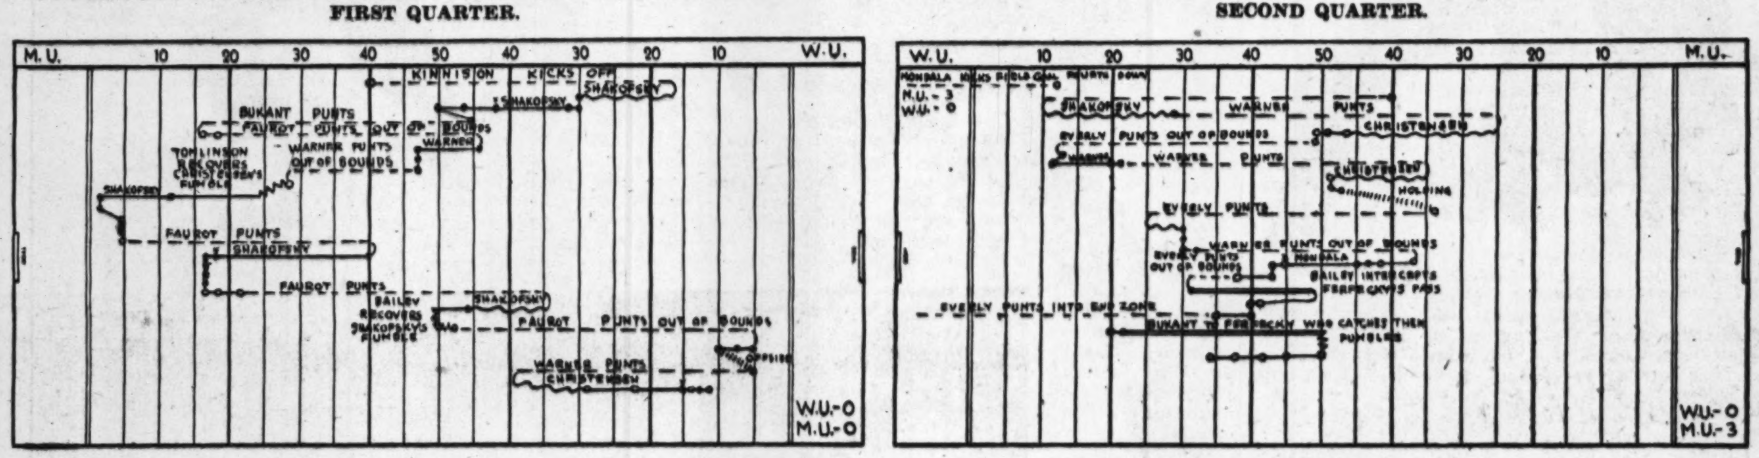
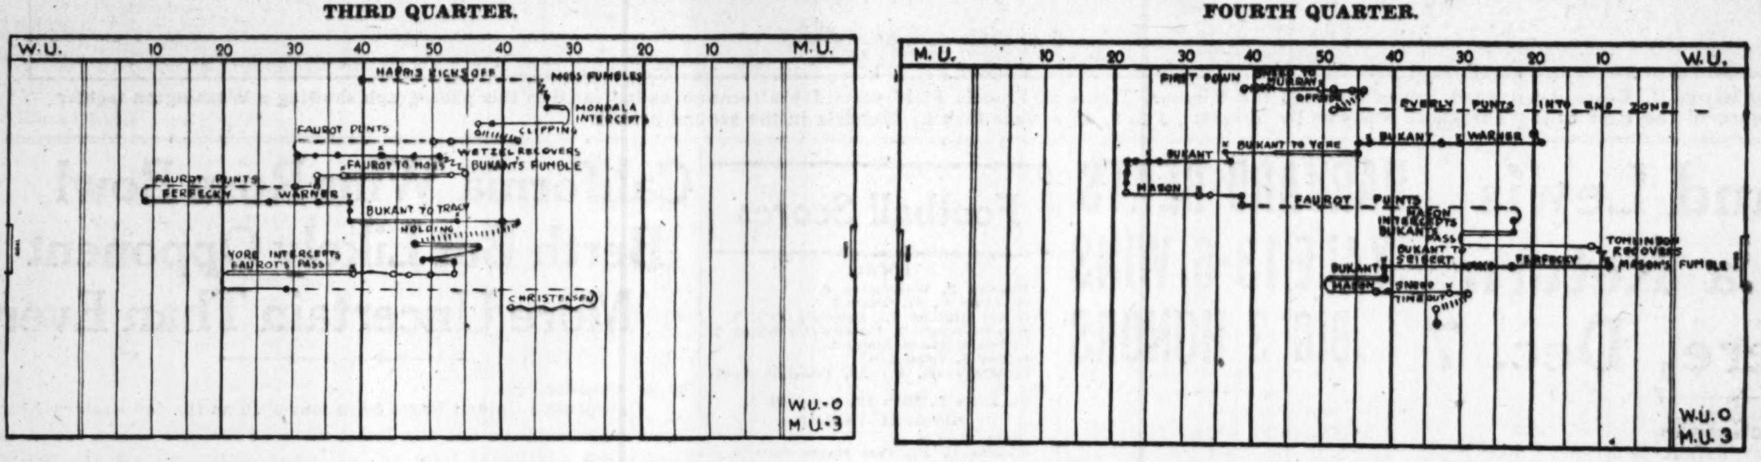
Eleven Notre Dame players appear and only three Northwestern performers are missing from this photograph showing 19 footballers in action in yesterday's game at Evanston, Ill., won by the Irish, 7 to 0. Joe Thesing of Notre Dame (No. 33, indicated by arrow) carries the ball for a 10-yard gain on an off-tackle play. John Haman, Wildcat center, is the man lunging for a tackle. The play seemingly moved well away from the officials.

Charts of Tiger-Bear Game





Mondala's Field Goal for Missouri Beats Washington

kofsky took the ball, started around his left end, cut in and was within inches of a first down before he was brought to earth. Only another yard to go and the underdog Bears would be out in front over their traditional rivals.

But the Bears never made that one yard they needed. And when you consider that, the Tigers had more than those three points to cheer about. Joe Bukant tried the Missouri line and was stopped. Jack Warner carried the ball and failed. The Tiger line was a stonewall, a wall that wouldn't budge and with mobile wings that cut in and nailed the Bears before they could gain momentum they need to advance the necessary three feet. Instead of going forward the Bears found themselves pushed back and when a Bukant pass was grounded on fourth down, the Tigers took the ball and the danger was averted and the Bears stopped.

There were other promising advances by the Bears, but the Tigers always had enough to stop them. In the fourth quarter, for instance, the Bears made a gallant drive, starting on their own 20-yard line after a kick into their end-zone. Joe Bukant flashed his best form of the game and looked better than at any time this season as he and Warner and Bill Ferfecky made first down after first down until they were only a yard from the enemy 20-yard mark. But there the Washington attack fizzled. Or perhaps it would be fairer to say that there the Missouri defense stiffened. At any rate the Bears were stopped once more and the Tigers took the ball on their 23-yard line.

Before the game, Coach Faurot announced that he would try to get through the game without using too many of his first string men, as he wanted to save his strength for the Thanksgiving day game with Kansas and a contest next Saturday with U. C. L. A. at Los Angeles. Faurot and the Tigers found the Bears a little tougher than they had expected, but even so only four first string players and only one first-line ball carrier were among the 29 Tigers who saw service in the contest against 15 Washington athletes. Harry Mason, a product of the St. Louis district, broke into the game in the second half and helped no little as he displayed his fine defensive skill by diagnosing the Bear plays wisely and intercepting several passes that broke up ambitious Washington rallies.

Bills Lead in State Race.

As a result of the game, the St. Louis University Billikens now are out in front in the race for State honors with one victory and no defeats, while the Tigers are second, having gained one victory and suffered a defeat. The Bears, with only a defeat to show for their title competition, could still make it a three-cornered tie, if they could close the season Thursday with a triumph over the Billikens. But the figures, even cold figures on a cold day, make the outlook none too bright. The Billikens defeated the Tigers, 14 to 7, and the Tigers defeated the Bears, 3 to 0, which would make the Billikens 10 points stronger than the Bears.

There were Washington players who distinguished themselves in the defeat. Harold Tracy played a fine game at end, Tomlinson was alert and in every play and Bukant, Warner, Ferfecky and Yore were hard-running ball carriers. There were a few fumbles, but the big breaks were that stonewall defense by the Tigers, with their heels on the border of the end zone, and that 20-yard placement by Stanley Mondala. The wind and the snow and the angle of the kick couldn't stop him. That one swing of his leg was the ball game.

actual finale of the season. Thanksgiving seemed in a fair way to pass out completely as a football high point, at one time.

Scanning the list of next Thursday's battles, only two or three of the scheduled games can really be called "classics."

The Cornell vs. Pennsylvania, and Missouri vs. Kansas games are the outstanding survivors of long ago that have been continued through the years and each has a background of 40 years or more. The first Missouri-Kansas game viewed by this writer was in 1895 at Kansas City—that will give you an idea of the length of time this classic has maintained its schedule place.

'Turkey Day' Coming Back?

IN recent years, however, Southern and Western schools have been showing a liking for Thanksgiving day contests. This year a total of 69 games are scheduled and some of them are of considerable importance.

Washington and St. Louis University have developed a Thanksgiving day attraction that has annually increased in importance.

Alabama and Vanderbilt will play a game that has a national championship bearing, owing to the success of the Crimson Tide this year. Kentucky-Tennessee, Detroit-Duquesne, Brown-Rutgers, Mississippi-Miss. State, Texas-Texas Aggies and other good contests are on this year's Turkey day menu.

To some extent Thanksgiving day is coming back, but it probably will not regain the prestige it enjoyed once—that of ringing down the curtain on the colorful collegiate gridiron drama.

Slipping?

IS boxing going downhill? Read the result of the Bob Olin-Johnny Risko 10-round match and ponder.

The score of the fight showed the 34-year-old Risko an easy winner over his rival who, only a couple of years ago, was rated lightheavyweight champion. Risko, besides being a hasbeen and old, had not fought for two years.

It has been years since Max Schmeling came to this country and gave Risko a savage beating. Still, the remnants of that Risko was able to beat Olin, after having previously been considered all washed up. Even John Schwake gave Risko all he wanted in a fight at the Coliseum, some years ago.

Now don't tell us that it would have been a different story had John Henry Lewis, lightheavyweight champion, faced Risko in Olin's stead. John Henry might have done things—and he might not. Isidro Gastanaga gave John Henry a masterful walloping—so let's not brag about what the Negro champion might do to a crafty old ring general like Risko.

There seems to be a justifiable suspicion that our larger fighters are considerably below the caliber of the good scrappers of a few years ago. We don't have to argue much to prove that this is so in the heavyweight division. Tommy Farr proved that against Champion Joe Louis.

Pinch Hitting and Victory.

HOW often does the pinch hitter in baseball drive in a victory for his team? Many have conjectured about this feature, few have figured it.

Henry Edwards, former sports editor of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, now head of the publicity department of the American League, has tackled the subject in a recent bulletin. His summary reveals:

American League pinch hitters actually won 22 victories in championship games of 1937. They also drove in tying scores in two drawn games, tied three other games that were lost by their clubs either in the ninth or extra innings, and twice put their teams ahead, only to see them lose later.

The big pinch man, as far as scoring victories goes, was Jimmy Dykes of White Sox. In four pinch hit efforts he hit a double and a homer, each winning a game.

Charley Ruffing of the Yanks, Wes Ferrell of Washington, Rothrock of the Athletics, Dallesandro and Eric McNair of the Red Sox and Goose Goslin of Detroit also won two games each with pinch hitting.

However, strange as it seems, the leading pinch hitter of the season in average, Bruce Campbell of Cleveland with an average of .455 in the pinches, won only a single game for his club.

Of all the league's pinch hitters who went to bat 10 times or more only three hit over .300. Allen of St. Louis (.400) and Hughes of Cleveland (.364) were the others. Wes Ferrell, a pitcher, was fourth with .296.

The league plays more than 600 games as a whole so that pinch hitters actually were responsible for one-thirtieth of the schedule results. Divided among 16 clubs that's little enough to worry a manager.

CALIFORNIA IS WINNER OVER STANFORD, 13-0

By the Associated Press.

PALO ALTO, Cal., Nov. 20.—California's undefeated football juggernaut rolled to a 13-to-0 victory today over Stanford's Indians, climaxing the finest season in nearly a decade by charging to the Coast Conference championship and the right to represent the West in the Rose Bowl game, New Year's day.

Some 85,000 fans sat through a first half downpour as the Bears outfought their oldest rivals for a second succesive year and won their first conference title since 1928.

Except for two slashing touchdown thrusts in the second period, the Bears found the underrated Indians formidable foes. Statistically they compared favorably.

When the California power plant started spinning at top speed early in the second period, here's how the scoring took place:

Left half Vic Bottari and Fullback Dave Anderson pounded the tackles on three plays for 18 yards and a first down on their 36-yard line. Anderson added four more straight through the line and Right Half Sam Chapman broke away for 18 yards and another first down, which put the oval on the 42-yard stripe. Anderson plunged for 12 and 10 yards for two more first downs with the ball resting on the Stanford 20-yard marker.

Chapman smacked through for five and Anderson carried it five yards on two tries for a first down on the nine-yard stripe. Chapman slashed off tackle for four, Anderson, added one, and from the four-yard marker Bottari broke through for the first touchdown. It capped a 77-yard advance.

The Bears put the ball into play on their own 35-yard line after the kick-off and dipped into Stanford territory on a 39-yard pass, Bottari to Chapman. Line bucks and a five-yard penalty against Stanford put the ball three yards from scoring turf. Chapman raced around right end to score, and added the extra point.

Shortly after the third quarter opened, Stanford moved across the 50-yard line for the first time, once reaching the 37-yard marker and later the 44-yard line. In the last quarter, a recovered fumble gave the Indians the ball on California's 18-yard line. They reached the 15-yard line but the rally stopped abruptly when Bob Herwig, Bear center, intercepted a pass.

S. M. U. TROUNCES U. C. L. A., 25-13

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 20.—Southern Methodist University pitched its aerial circus in the Coliseum today and played a brilliant 25 to 13 performance for the benefit of the Bruins of University of California at Los Angeles and 35,000 spectators.

Outplayed and completely overshadowed at the outset by the Bruins' Negro combination of Kenny Washington and Woodrow Wilson Strode, the Mustangs cut loose with a tally in the second and rang up three more in the third.

After the Uclans had scored twice, with Washington and Strode leading the attack, the complexion of the game changed.

Starting from their own 23-yard line, the Mustangs advanced on four passes, scoring on a short aerial from Jack Morrison to Pete Acker. In the next period, the third, the Texans counted twice after long aerial and ground advances and completed the rout when Gray intercepted one of Washington's passes deep in Bruin territory. A triple lateral, Ewing to Dewell to Quarterback Jackson was good for 25 yards and the fourth touchdown.

Washington State Wins 7-0 Victory.

CORVALLIS, Ore., Nov. 20.—Carl Littlefield's running and Eddie Bayne's passing arm gave Washington State a 7 to 0 victory over Oregon State today in a final Pacific Coast Conference football game.

The Pioneers also forced play in the fourth quarter, but didn't get inside the St. Louis 12-yard line.

Grinnell had 14 first downs to 11 for St. Louis and gained 142 yards in rushing to the Billikens' 112, but the visitors gained 159 yards on passes to 52 for the Pioneers.

Cleveland and Roosevelt are tied for the Public High School Football League championship as the result of Cleveland's 21-6 victory over McKinley yesterday afternoon at the Public Schools Stadium, the feature of the last weekly double header. About 2500 spectators, huddled in blankets, watched the two games that ended the league season. Soldan defeated Central, 7—0, in the other contest.

Cleveland finished its season with four victories and one defeat. Roosevelt ended its season Tuesday with the same record. Cleveland lost to Roosevelt and Roosevelt to McKinley. McKinley would have tied for the title too, except for its scoreless tie with Central last week.

Cleveland's triumph was not unexpected, for McKinley's star, Amiel Lange, has been ailing for several weeks, but how Cleveland scored its winning touchdowns was a surprise.

Goldbugs Outsmarted.

The center of Cleveland's team, Herman Ellenberger, scored the first two touchdowns. His first one was in the second quarter. He passed the ball to Ray Mills, then rushed behind him. Mills passed it back. No one on McKinley's team saw Ellenberger take the ball, and he ran 10 yards untouched for the score. Gualdoni converted on a line plunge.

McKinley passed its way back into the game on two tosses. Amiel Lange, unable to run and gain ground because of his injured leg, dropped back and fired a 33-yard pass to Bill Howle and then threw one to Joe Beauclair, who had to grab it away from other players in the end zone. It was good for 10 yards and a touchdown. Lange missed an attempted place kick for the extra point.

Coach Bert Fenenga's tricky play worked again in the third quarter, and for the second time in the game Ellenberger fooled McKinley and ran for a touchdown without an opponent touching him. The play gained 38 yards and followed a 24-yard run by Harry Dickson.

Gualdoni again added the extra point on a line plunge.

The third Cleveland touchdown was the result of sheer power that hammered its way through McKinley's line for 80 yards. Gualdoni carried the ball over from the three-yard line. Dickson plunged over for the extra point.

The victory ended a most successful season for Cleveland. The Carondelet team won seven games and lost but one. That defeat was a heartbreaker, too, for Roosevelt scored a touchdown in the final two minutes of play to win, 12-7.

Backfield Broken Up.

McKinley's backfield was badly broken up in the second half. Jim Newberger was unable to play because of an injury to his ribs, suffered in the first half, and Mills was replaced early in the third quarter because of an injured shoulder. Lange was never able to play his best and limped throughout the game.

Soldan scored its first league victory by stopping Central in the second quarter on its two-yard line and then scoring in the final period. A 45-yard pass from Tom Lombardo to Substitute Garrison that advanced the ball to Central's 18-yard line as the third quarter ended put Soldan in position to score.

Kanefield passed to Lombardo for a 10-yard gain. After three plays, Lombardo scored from the one-foot line. Swistowicsz converted on a place-kick.

Ask the guy that Hen has hit.

"Gabby" Street has the inside track for the managership of the Browns and should win on the bit unless some dark horse comes from behind.

"Gabby" won't be taking over a championship team like he did when Sam Breadon placed him in the driver's seat and told him to carry on from there. But he will be reminded of his old days with Washington when the Senators spent most of their time in the lower house.

Come tidings from Van Meter, Ia., that Bob Feller is wearing the same sized hat that he did before he became famous.

FOR Pitt the classy Rose Bowl
Has always been a treat;
And a Bowl by any other name
Would not be half as sweet.

There is some talk about Pittsburgh not receiving a bid for the Rose Bowl game. In that event, the Sugar Bowl would be something to fall back on or into, as the case may be.

Maxie Rosenbloom seems to be losing his bloom. He was knocked out in the second round by Jimmy Adamick.

Cleveland and Roosevelt are tied for the Public High School Football League championship as the result of Cleveland's 21-6 victory over McKinley yesterday afternoon at the Public Schools Stadium, the feature of the last weekly double header. About 2500 spectators, huddled in blankets, watched the two games that ended the league season. Soldan defeated Central, 7—0, in the other contest.

Cleveland finished its season with four victories and one defeat. Roosevelt ended its season Tuesday with the same record. Cleveland lost to Roosevelt and Roosevelt to McKinley. McKinley would have tied for the title too, except for its scoreless tie with Central last week.

Cleveland's triumph was not unexpected, for McKinley's star, Amiel Lange, has been ailing for several weeks, but how Cleveland scored its winning touchdowns was a surprise.

Goldbugs Outsmarted.

The center of Cleveland's team, Herman Ellenberger, scored the first two touchdowns. His first one was in the second quarter. He passed the ball to Ray Mills, then rushed behind him. Mills passed it back. No one on McKinley's team saw Ellenberger take the ball, and he ran 10 yards untouched for the score. Gualdoni converted on a line plunge.

McKinley passed its way back into the game on two tosses. Amiel Lange, unable to run and gain ground because of his injured leg, dropped back and fired a 33-yard pass to Bill Howle and then threw one to Joe Beauclair, who had to grab it away from other players in the end zone. It was good for 10 yards and a touchdown. Lange missed an attempted place kick for the extra point.

Coach Bert Fenenga's tricky play worked again in the third quarter, and for the second time in the game Ellenberger fooled McKinley and ran for a touchdown without an opponent touching him. The play gained 38 yards and followed a 24-yard run by Harry Dickson.

Gualdoni again added the extra point on a line plunge.

The third Cleveland touchdown was the result of sheer power that hammered its way through McKinleys' line for 80 yards. Gualdoni carried the ball over from the three-yard line. Dickson plunged over for the extra point.

The victory ended a most successful season for Cleveland. The Carondelet team won seven games and lost but one. That defeat was a heartbreaker, too, for Roosevelt scored a touchdown in the final two minutes of play to win, 12-7.

Backfield Broken Up.

McKinley's backfield was badly broken up in the second half. Jim Newberger was unable to play because of an injury to his ribs, suffered in the first half, and Mills was replaced early in the third quarter because of an injured shoulder. Lange was never able to play his best and limped throughout the game.

Soldan scored its first league victory by stopping Central in the second quarter on its two-yard line and then scoring in the final period. A 45-yard pass from Tom Lombardo to Substitute Garrison that advanced the ball to Central's 18-yard line as the third quarter ended put Soldan in position to score.

Kanefield passed to Lombardo for a 10-yard gain. After three plays, Lombardo scored from the one-foot line. Swistowicz converted on a place-kick.

TACKLE! TACKLE! Who Has the Ball?

A St. Mary's tackler who thought he'd stopped a Fordham play in the second quarter of the game at New York yesterday found that Fordham was flipping the ball around. He dove into halfback Joe Granski (No. 56) as Granski skirted end, but just as he lunged, Granski lateraled to End Johnny Druze (No. 1) and Fordham made 10 more yards.

start to finish. Unbeaten Villanova ran up the biggest score in the history of the series in routing Pop Warner's Temple Owls. 33-0. Dartmouth, which has said officially it will play no post-season games, completed an unbeaten season with an easy 27-0 conquest of Columbia, giving the Indians from Hanover, N. H., clear title to the "Ivy League" championship.

Meanwhile Lafayette's Leopards downed their traditional rivals, Lehigh's Engineers, 6-0, to complete a season marked by neither defeat nor tie.

Yale, led as usual by the irrepressible Clint Frank, gave Harvard a stiff fight but in the end the crowd of 58,000 saw the Crimson win out, 13-6, on its hard-driving ground attack and effective passes tossed by Frank Foley. Harvard's victory carried with it the "Big Three" title, first time the Crimson has won it since 1915.

Holy Cross Held Scoreless.

Unbeaten Holy Cross was held to its second scoreless draw, this time by Carnegie Tech., in a major Eastern surprise but the biggest form reversal of the day overtook Navy's Tars who were thoroughly shellacked by Princeton, 26-6. Boston University beat Boston College for the first time in history, 13-6, while Colgate, trampled by most everybody this season, once more showed itself Syracuse's master, 7-0.

Maryland's clever Southern Conference team outpointed 'Georgetown, 12-2; Manhattan tripped Niagara, 13-7, and Army's reserves buried St. John's of Annapolis, 47-6.

Competition in the Midwest saw Minnesota's Gophers capture the Big Ten championship by virtue of a 13-6 victory over Wisconsin's battling Badgers. Ohio State's Buckeyes gained second place with an easy 21-0 triumph over Michigan. Purdue surprised the experts by jolting Bo McMillin's Indiana array, 13—7. Illinois turned back Chicago with a second-half drive, 21—0.

Notre Dame took advantage of one break to score the only touchdown of the game in a 7-0 defeat of Northwestern Wildcats. The remaining Big Ten member, Iowa, was soundly laced by Nebraska, 28—0.

Iowa State's unpredictable Cyclones swept all calculations in a 13-7 triumph over Kansas State in the only Big Six game of the day. Missouri won over Washington University (St. Louis), 3—0, but Kansas was tripped by Arizona, 9—7. Oklahoma won its annual tussle from Oklahoma A. and M., 16—0. Marquette's well-beaten team upset Duquesne, 13—6, in a major intersectional surprise.

Rice Upset.

Rice's drive toward the Southwest Conference crown met with a rude setback as Texas Christian's Horned Frogs, paced by Davey O'Brien, pounded out a 7-2 verdict that threw the conference race wide open again. Baylor ran up a 27-13 count on Loyola (California) and Southern Methodist invaded the Far West to snare a 26-13 decision over U. C. L. A. Arkansas' Razorbacks, however, were held scoreless for the first time since 1934 in a 0-0 deadlock with George Washington.

Despite its defeat by California, Stanford finished second in the Pacific Coast race as Oregon State bowed to Washington State, 7—0. Washington, bowling over Oregon, 14—0, finished third. Montana, previously unbeaten and untied, fell victim to Idaho, 6—0.

St. Louis Women Retain Lead in Tenpin Tourney

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Nov. 20.—The 2784 score run up by the Central Royal bowlers of St. Louis last week still led the Missouri women's bowling tournament with the final session of team rolling half through tonight.

Team competition will be finished early tomorrow morning, with doubles and singles scheduled to be finished in the afternoon.

Scores posted tonight included St. Louis Premiers, 2372; South St. Louis Dairy, 2523; Slankers, Jefferson City, 2372; and Royal Recreation, Joplin, 2573.

High individual score tonight was the 542 of Edith Gugel, Springfield, 1937 president of the Missouri Women's Bowling Association.

H. H. HACKETT, FORMER DAVIS CUP STAR, DIES

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Harold Humphries Hackett, 60, holder of the national tennis doubles championship with F. B. Alexander for four years from 1907, died today.

Hackett was a former New York City and State champion and starred with Maurice McLoughlin in America's Davis Cup tennis victory in London in 1913. He was a Yale alumnus.

Surviving are his widow, the former Maude Adams Demarest, and a son and daughter.

ILLINOIS WINS OVER CHICAGO WITH LAST HALF DRIVE, 21 TO 0

By the Associated Press.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Nov. 20.—Illinois came through for its veteran coach, Bob Zuppke, today, trouncing Chicago 21 to 0 with a last-half offensive to put a winning finish on Zuppke's twenty-fifth season as Illini grid mentor.

Held scoreless during the first two periods by a gallant Maroon eleven which twice made valiant goal line stands the Illini struck swiftly for two third-period touchdowns and added another in the final stanza of a battle played in 20 degrees above zero weather. Snow-swept Memorial Stadium housed 11,500 fans for the game.

Chicago Girl Spilled During Roller Derby

Gertie Scholl, speedy little skater from Chicago, was the victim of several bad breaks last night as the roller derby concluded its second night of a scheduled three weeks run at the Coliseum.

Miss Scholl was the first girl to be penalized and she drew four minutes in the penalty box for tripping Tiny McDowell during a jam. Shortly after that Miss Scholl was spilled during "open house," and had to be carried off the track for repairs. She returned to finish her stint, though.

The "open house" was won by Miss Honey Thomas and Fuzzy Pierz. Since they also won the night's derby award, they profited by $50 for capturing the two events. Miss Gene Vizena and Joe Nygra finished second and Miss Hazel Roop and Wes Aronson third in the open house.

"Muscles" Stampley continued skating solo, since his partner, Miss Kitty Nehls, who was injured during the opening night's activities, had not recuperated sufficiently to return to action.

A crowd of about 4700 saw the program. The show will continue tonight.

In the second "open house," the teams tied so there will be a carry over until tonight, making a purse of $100 that will be offered to the winners.

GOPHERS BEAT WISCONSIN; WIN BIG TEN TITLE

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 20.—Minnesota won full possession of the Western Conference football crown today by overpowering Wisconsin, 13 to 6, in a spectacular windup of the season. It was the fifth straight Big Ten victory for the Gophers.

The Badgers showed valiant fight against the Minnesota powerhouse and were an unremitting threat from the start of the game, for which some 50,000 fans turned out.

Minnesota scored first in the second period on a march from its own 16-yard line, Bill Matheny counting on a sparkling 13-yard dash around left end, aided by some beautiful blocking. Bell placekicked the extra point and Minnesota went into a 7 to 0 lead at halftime.

The Badgets retaliated with the opening of the second, and aided by a 24-yard pass ruled complete because of interference, blasted through to the Gopher four, whence Howard Weiss who was a thorn in the side of the Minnesotans all afternoon, carried it over.

Another irresistible 76-yard drive by Minnesota in the final quarter found Marty Christiansen, reserve fullback, cracking over from the three-yard line.

After taking the opening kickoff, Wisconsin cracked through for three straight first downs before the Gophers dug in and forced the Badgers to kick. Again in the first Wisconsin moved up to the Gopher 25 only to lose possession of the oval on a fumble.

The Gophers used tricky lateral plays to advantage, particularly in their first touchdown drive. Matheny, in scoring, ran wide around his left end as big Larry Buhler, fullback, and little Rudy Gmitro, quarterback, erased tacklers in a splendid exhibition of blocking.

After its third period touchdown, Wisconsin again moved deep into Minnesota's territory after recovering a fumble on the Gopher 19-yard line. End Fred Benz recovered for the Badgers. Four line plays, however, resulted in a net loss of five yards, and Minnesota took the ball on downs on its 24-yard line, from where it powerhoused its way to the second touchdown.

SCHAEFER WINS TWO BLOCKS BUT HOPPE CAPTURES 18.1 CUE MATCH

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Challenger Jake Schaefer saved his best efforts of the match for the last day but it wasn't enough to win as Willie Hoppe successfully defended his 18.1 balkline billiards crown tonight by outscoring the Chicago cue artist 3000 to 2567 in their 3000-point, 12-block challenge match.

The challenger, with a high run of 137, won the afternoon's eleventh block 598 to 250, whittling 348 points off the champion's lead before Hoppe was able to run out the block with a cluster of 42 in the twenty-first inning.

The night block found Schaefer still shooting flawlessly while Hoppe nervously flubbed shots. Schaefer scored 355 points before Hoppe completed his quota of 250 in the nineteenth frame to end the match. Schaefer had a high run of 73 and Hoppe 69 for the final block.

NEBRASKA RUNS OVER IOWA BY SCORE OF 28-0

By the Associated Press.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 20.—Biff Jones' Nebraska football team demonstrated today it has an offensive.

Twenty-five thousand shivering fans and an outclassed band of Iowa Hawkeyes were convinced of that by four touchdowns and four points after touchdown to make the score board read: Nebraska 28, Iowa 0.

The line kept Nile Kinnick, great Hawkeye back, bottled up today and the backs did their work in no uncertain fashion. Less than four minutes after the game started, Paul Amen tore in to block a Kinnick punt and recover on the Iowa 13-yard line. Callihan finally lugged it over from the one-yard line. Little Bob Mehring intercepted one of Kinnick's aerial slants and got to the 33-yard line. Marvin Plock swung the end for 13 and Jack Dodd raced for the score.

Both teams were bottled up thoroughly in the second, but midway in the third Dodd took the ball on a fake double reverse, raced around his left end and caught the Hawkeyes flatfooted. Three tackles caught Dodd on the Iowa 35-yard line, but he fought loose and scampered to get behind a wall of blockers. Fred Shirey took out Ed McLain, last Iowa tackler, with a beautiful block and Dodd coasted across. It was a 65-yard run.

Biff Jones then began emptying his bench of substitutes, but the subs turned on the fire, too. Late in the final Thurston Phelps grabbed a Kinnick pass and got to the Husker 28-yard line. A pass to Plock was good to the Iowa 49-yard line, and another Phelps-to-Plock shot went to the eight-yard line. Plock oozed across from there.

"I CHOOSE MY MODELS AS I CHOOSE MY CIGARS —for that important plus!"
SAYS McCLELLAND BARCLAY, NOTED ARTIST

Mr. Barclay's models, one of whom you see above, are chosen from many because they're outstanding—because they have that important plus which lifts them above the crowd.

Van Dyck 32's, too, have that plus. Men bought over 140 million of these fine cigars last year because they're sweeter, milder, mellower. Because Van Dyck is the friendly cigar with the satisfying aroma. Because in all qualities that make a cigar preferred, Van Dyck is outstanding.

Don't wait another day to discover Van Dyck's important plus. It takes only a nickel to make you acquainted.

LEGAL LIGHT WINS ENDURANCE HANDICAP IN FIELD OF FOUR

VICTORY NETS WINNER $4800; SECOND TAKEN BY BROWN MOTH

No Money Bet on Third Place, but All Entrants Participate in Share of $5000 Stake at Bowie.

By the Associated Press.

BOWIE, Md., Nov. 20.—Legal Light, as expected, won the $5000 added sixteenth endurance handicap, outstanding juvenile stake of the meeting, in hollow style before a large week-end crowd here today. Carrying the Baltimore-owned silks of Ral Parr, the chestnut son of the Sun Edwin-Fair Advocate conceded gobs of weight to three mediocre rivals and registered under wraps by four lengths.

Brown Moth, a recent winner under $3500 claiming conditions, was just as easily second for Owner J. J. Farrell Jr. Le Mar Stock Farm's Mightily beat Bluefield, the only other starter, by six lengths. Legal Light, a $3.50 for $2 choice, ran the mile and 70 yards over a fast track in 1:47 3-5. This was his fifth score in 14 outings and, with today's purse of $4800, the colt boosted his total earnings to $11,505.

Legal Light recently dead-heated with Pit Bull, the Eastern Shore Handicap winner, in the Sagamore Handicap at Pimlico. He was fourth in the Walden at the same track and before that, second in the Spalding Lowe Jenkins Handicap at Laurel.

Despite his 126 pounds, the Parr colorbearer outclassed his field. Maurice (Moose) Peters rated the favorite close behind the pace to the top of the stretch. Bluefield was allowed to make the early running. Mightily shot to the front midway to the backstretch. But when Peters so desired, Legal Light bounded into command and breezed through the stretch, affording few thrills for the spectators.

Brown Moth, last to the far turn, easily picked up all save the winner to take the $1000 second share of the purse.

Mrs. Louise Viau's Conquer, a 16 to 1 shot, won the second running of the T. K. Lynch Memorial Handicap, thereby giving Trainer J. P. Jones and Jockey Peters victories in the two feature events of the day. It was a triple for Peters, who also won the opening contest.

Culver-Stockton College Defeats Principia, 13-7

The Culver-Stockton College football team won from Principia College 13 to 7, in their annual game on the Principia field at Elsah, Ill., yesterday afternoon. It was the final of the season for both teams.

Coach Paul Scott's eleven from Canton, Mo., scored twice in the opening half. Two end runs from the 20-yard line gave Culver-Stockton the ball on the home team's one-yard line in the first quarter. George Sweat, fullback, then hit the line for a touchdown. A line play for the extra point was stopped.

LAFAYETTE ENDS SEASON, UNTIED, UNDEFEATED BY BEATING LEHIGH

By the Associated Press.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Nov. 20.—Lafayette ended its football season unbeaten and untied today by scoring a 6 to 0 victory over its traditional rival, Lehigh, before a crowd of 15,000. Cavallo plunged over for the touchdown in the third period from the two-yard line after a Lehigh kick had been blocked on the 20.

NOTRE DAME DEFEATS NORTHWESTERN, 7 TO 0

stepped over the goal line for the touchdown. Andy Puplis' place-kicked for the extra point split the uprights.

Before his touchdown act, Sweeney, who tossed Allan McFarland for the safety that meant victory for the Irish over Navy, and who blocked the point after touchdown effort that saved a 7-to-6 game for Notre Dame over Minnesota, recovered a fumble by Northwestern's brilliant Don Heap who had just caught a pass on Notre Dame's 26 in the first period. He halted a Wildcat drive in the second by intercepting one of Heap's passes.

In the fourth quarter, he downed one of Harry Stenson's punts on the one-yard line to put the Wildcats in a hole from which they barely escaped, and just before the finish, dropped on a fumble by Nick Cutlich after the latter had grabbed a pass tossed by Heap from behind his own goal line.

SUMNER HIGH MEETS VASHON ELEVEN IN ANNUAL GAME

The most important football game in this section where Negroes are concerned will be played Thursday afternoon in the Public Schools stadium when the Sumner High School Bulldogs meet the Vashon High Wolverines in the eleventh annual city championship gridiron contest.

Coach W. H. J. Beckett at Sumner and Otis Finley at Vashon have put their teams through some very stiff practice sessions to sharpen up the players for the Turkey day game. Since 1935 Vashon has played 28 games and has dropped but two games since that date.

McFarland, Anderson, Harris and Smith are the outstanding players on the Sumner eleven, while Mondaine, Breadon, Daniels and Hellium, are expected to star for the Vashon Wolverines.

Sumner's band headed by Stanley Henderson and the newly organized Vashon High band under the direction of Spencer Tocus will furnish music.

The officials will be Samuel Shepard of the University of Michigan, umpire; James Cook of the Pine Street Y. M. C. A., referee, and J. E. Moreland, head-linesman.

ZELTMANS TO MEET SCHMIDTS TODAY IN U. CITY SOCCER LEAGUE

The Schmidts, pace-setters in the University City Soccer League, oppose the second-place team Zeltmans in the first game of today's doubleheader at Heman Park. First game starts at 2 p. m. and will be immediately followed by the Weber-Wagner and German Sports Club encounter.

The standings:

Metropolitan Billiard Event Begins This Week

A former veteran campaigner in the inter-city competition of yesteryears, Frank Benson, heads the list of 12 players who will comprise the field in the Metropolitan Elimination three-cushion billiard tournament, slated to start this week at the Charles C. Peterson Academy.

According to Herbert A. Peterson, head of the tourney committee and himself a former holder of the principal Metropolitan title, the field will be divided into two groups. The two players finishing on top of each group will automatically qualify along with six other selected performers for the Metropolitan championships which will begin in January. Each game of the elimination event will go 40 points.

In group No. 1 along with Benson are Ossie Barron, Ted Heiman, Jules Sussman, Homer Johnson and O. V. "Davey" Davidson. Bud Rombauer heads the list in group No. 2, consisting also of Mike Seimers, holder of the Metropolitan fancy-shot title; W. W. Smith, M. K. Stewart, Donald Cramer and Ray V. Smith.

Gene Deardorff, national amateur three-cushion titleholder; Elmer Farrar, Ed Calmer, Harold Wills, Leo M. Dieckmeyer and young Peterson comprise the field who are exempted from the elimination series. Deardorff won the principal Metropolitan tourney early last spring but lost the title to Farrar in a challenge match.

DARTMOUTH IS 27-0 WINNER OVER COLUMBIA FOR IVY TITLE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Dartmouth's Indians reached the end of their football warpath today with a 27 to 0 massacre of Columbia, an old fashioned tomahawking that gave them the Ivy League championship and their first unbeaten season since 1925.

As 17,000 spectators sat wet and shivering in the green stands of Baker Field, the big chiefs from Hanover twisted the Lions' tails like so much papier mache, scoring 21 of their points within a space of 5½ minutes from the close of the second to the start of the third periods.

The victory marked the first time since 1927 that Dartmouth had won its final game of the season. It also gave the Indians their second Ivy League title in a row and dropped Lou Little of Columbia to a new time low for his coaching career. It was the first time in 17 years that his team had been licked five times in one year though Stanford, here next week, may make it six.

A wild finish in the second period was all Dartmouth needed to polish off Columbia. The period had 1½ minutes to go when Fred Hollingworth of St. Louis passed to Bob MacLeod of Glen Ellyn, who caught the 17-yard aerial on the Columbia five-yard line and ran without interference for the first touchdown. Bob Gibson of Stamford, Conn., place-kicked the extra point.

GEORGIA BATTLES FAVORED AUBURN TO SCORELESS TIE

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, Ga., Nov. 20.—Auburn's favored Tigers and Georgia's Bulldogs, given little if any chance, battled to a scoreless tie today in their forty-second skirmish of a feud dating back to the gay nineties.

Some 16,000 spectators jammed the cold concrete stands of Memorial Stadium expecting an Auburn eleven that had bowled over Georgia Tech and Tennessee to win by from two to four touchdowns.

A gallant defensive display by the Bulldogs warded off three Auburn thrusts that failed to produce winning points when field goals missed.

Paid $50 for Trotter, Sold Him for $5000

By the Associated Press.

LEWISTON, ME., Nov. 20.

HANOVER PETERS, world's champion stallion trotter for half-mile tracks, today brought $5000 to the owner who purchased it for $50 four years ago.

Phil H. Stuart of Mechanics Falls, former Grand Circuit horseshoer, said he had sold the son of Gillon Axworthy-Florence Peters to a Rotterdam (Holland) importer named Vandam. The new owner will ship the horse from its stable here to New York City next week.

Stuart was the only trainer and driver of the speedy stallion while it was under his racing silks.

Hanover Peters' 2:03¼ world's mile record for half-mile tracks was set at Essex County, Vermont, Sept. 1, 1937. In 1936, it whirled around Old Orchard's mile "kite" track in 2:01¼ the best mark of that season for trotting stallions.

MICHIGAN BOWS TO OHIO STATE ELEVEN, 21-0

By the Associated Press.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 20.—Ohio State scored three touchdowns and a safety today to conquer Michigan for the fourth successive year, 21 to 0, before 65,000 spectators.

Jim Miller, Ohio State back, scored two of the touchdowns, and Dick Nardi the third on a pass from Nick Wasylik.

Ohio State scored on a safety in the second quarter when Norm Purucker, Michigan punter, was tackled by Charles Ream, Buckeye end, behind the Michigan goal line.

So tight was the Ohio State defense that Michigan had a net gain of only three yards from scrimmage and 38 yards from forward passes. The Buckeyes gained 194 yards from scrimmage and 91 yards from passes and made nine first downs to the Wolverines' three.

Benny Kessler to Speak.

Benny Kessler, director of Camp Waconda for boys, will talk Sunday afternoon at the Y. M. H. A. to the Abba Dabbas Club, one of the affiliated groups of the "Y." His subject will be "The Jewish Athlete of Tomorrow."

Probable Lineups

The St. Louis Gunners meet the Louisville Tanks in a Midwest League professional football game today at Walsh Stadium. The game is scheduled to start at 2:30 p. m. Louisville, 1936 champion of the league, is in second place at the present time and holds one victory over the Gunners this season. Early in October the Gunners lost to the Tanks at Louisville, 14 to 7.

Since that defeat the Gunner team has improved a great deal and six important players, including Ted Saussele and "Swede" Johnston, outstanding backfield stars, have been added to the line-up. So the St. Louis eleven figures to be able to meet the powerful Southerners on equal terms. A victory for the Gunners will give them a chance to get into the league's play-offs.

The latest addition to the Gunner ranks is a giant tackle, Bill Holcomb, who was signed yesterday by James "Bud" Yates, general manager. Holcomb, only one year out of Texas Tech where he was an outstanding star, has been playing a regular tackle position this season with the Pittsburgh Pirates, and is counted upon to add strength to the St. Louis forward wall. Holcomb has worked out with the Gunners but only reached an agreement with the Gunner management yesterday.

De Correvont Scores 30th Touchdown as Team Wins Title

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—WILD BILL DE CORREVONT, the prep star sought by several major universities, registered his thirtieth touchdown of the season today in leading Austin to the Chicago High School football championship for the second consecutive year.

The 17-year-old lad, the nation's leading scorer, pushed [illegible] to run his total up to 186 points.

Paid $50 for Trotter, Sold Him for $5000

By the Associated Press.

LEWISTON, ME., Nov. 20. HANOVER PETERS, world's champion stallion trotter for half-mile tracks, today brought $5000 to the owner who purchased it for $50 four years ago.

Phil H. Stuart of Mechanics Falls, former Grand Circuit horseshoer, said he had sold the son of Gillon Axworthy-Florence Peters to a Rotterdam (Holland) importer named Vandam.

The new owner will ship the horse from its stable here to New York City next week.

Stuart was the only trainer and driver of the speedy stallion while it was under his racing silks.

Hanover Peters' 2:03½ world's mile record for half-mile tracks was set at Essex County, Vermont, Sept. 1, 1937. In 1936, it whirled around Old Orchard's mile "kite" track in 2:01¼ for the best mark of that season for trotting stallions.

MICHIGAN BOWS TO OHIO STATE ELEVEN, 21-0

By the Associated Press.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 20.—Ohio State scored three touchdowns and a safety today to conquer Michigan for the fourth successive year, 21 to 0, before 65,000 spectators.

Jim Miller, Ohio State back, scored two of the touchdowns, and Dick Nardi the third on a pass from Nick Wasylik.

Ohio State scored on a safety in the second quarter when Norm Purucker, Michigan punter, was tackled by Charles Ream, Buckeye end, behind the Michigan goal line.

So tight was the Ohio State defense that Michigan had a net gain of only three yards from scrimmage and 38 yards from forward passes. The Buckeyes gained 194 yards from scrimmage and 91 yards from passes and made nine first downs to the Wolverines' three.

The St. Louis Gunners meet the Louisville Tanks in a Midwest League professional football game today at Walsh Stadium. The game is scheduled to start at 2:30 p. m. Holcomb has worked out with the Gunners but only reached an agreement with the Gunner management yesterday.

Good Reserves.

The Gunners are now well fortified in all positions and have plenty of reserve strength. Coach Babe Lyons has two good sets of backs. A change over last week will see "Cy" Casper at quarterback. Casper, who played quarter in his college days at Texas Christian has been running at halfback in former games. Last week he came into his own and played an outstanding game against the New York Yankees.

Ted Saussele probably will start the game, too. The red-head is in excellent shape, having played in the East most of the current season. East and Groth will be the other starting backs. If this combination does not click, the Gunners have "Swede" Johnston and Al Londe ready to rush into the contest.

The Gunner line, which will outweigh the Louisville forward wall, is counted upon to do its share. In fact, the linemen have played a fine defensive game all season.

Louisville is bringing an unusually large squad to St. Louis.

Outstanding Backfield.

The Louisville backfield is considered to be one of the most outstanding in the league. Heading the offensive is John "Stumpy" Thomason, former all-America fullback from Georgia Tech. Jack "Ripper" Roberts, a former all-America halfback from Georgia; Bud O'Neal, veteran Tank star, who was the league's leading scorer in 1936, and Eddie Crum, who was the big gun in Louisville's victory over Ashland last Sunday, are others in the backfield.

PITT DEFEATS PENN STATE ELEVEN, 28-7

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 20. — The football Panthers of the University of Pittsburgh, rolling along undefeated into the end of their home schedule, pummeled Penn State, 28 to 7, today before 23,000 spectators who braved snow and cold to see the old rivals in their forty-fourth annual battle.

Marshall (Biggie) Goldberg, the Elkins, W. Va., flash, scored two of the Panthers' four touchdowns and set up another as he uncovered one of his most sparkling exhibitions.

Pitt banged out 21 points in the first half to take a comfortable lead over a gallant but lightweight band of Lions from Mount Nittany, who achieved a lot of satisfaction by scoring against the Panthers on a 30-yard pass in the third period.

Nineteen seniors, making their last appearance in the big Pitt bowl, saw service in the contest with Coach Jock Sutherland making frequent substitutions.

The rugged Pitt machine started slowly, but showed all its vaunted power in a 55-yard march midway in the first period with Goldberg bounding 14 yards and 12 yards, and Frank Patrick passing to Bill Daddio for 11 yards in a drive to State's one-yard stripe, where Patrick plunged over the first score.

Another drive went 46 yards to a touchdown late in the same period with Goldberg going over from the one-yard line. Frank Souchak place-kicked both extra points.

The hard-running Goldberg collected his third touchdown early in the fourth period as the climax of a 54-yard drive, this time going seven yards through a gaping hole at right guard.

Dick Cassiano, the versatile understudy to Goldberg, raced 78 yards for a touchdown early in the second period after Penn State had thrust to Pitt's 34-yard line.

The Lions struggled valiantly throughout the contest and were rewarded with a score midway in the third period after taking advantage of one of the game's few breaks.

Forced to punt from deep in his own territory, Harry Harrison booted a high bounding kick to Pitt's 30, where it rolled against Dalle Tezze, Panther tackle, and Alex Barantovich recovered on the Pitt 24-yard line.

The Panthers threw one play for an eight-yard loss, yielded two on the second and then 135-pound Wendell. Wear, a substitute halfback, threw a long pass to Sid Alter in the end zone. Ben Pollock place-kicked the extra point.

MacKINNON TO RETIRE AS PLAYER AT END OF PRESENT SEASON

Johnny MacKinnon, coach of the St. Louis Flyers is to retire as a player at the end of this season and the plans now are for him to direct his players from the bench.

MacKinnon led the Flyers into first place in the American Association last season and during the play his club went 19 straight games without a defeat, winning 16 games and tying three.

MacKinnon is a veteran hockey player having spent a number of seasons in the major league and was with various association clubs for several seasons, playing at a defense post.

The Flyers, undefeated in four starts this season, with three victories and a tie to their credit oppose the Wichita Skyhawks Tuesday night. They play the Greyhounds at Kansas City Thursday night then return to the Arena to meet Tulsa Sunday night.

Harvard Defeats Yale, 13-6, Wins Big 3 Honors

this ancient match has known in years.

Yale's defeat at the close of a season marred only by a tie game with Dartmouth cost the Elis their chance to claim a major share of "Ivy League" honors.

Freezing weather and snow helped turn the gridiron into a muddy mess, but this coupled with a series of bad kicking breaks, failed to diminish either the spirit of the home forces or their resourcefulness in a game that saw Harvard out-play its old foe decisively most of the way.

Pass Dropped on Goal Line.

Only the combination of a poor piece of luck, when Daughters dropped a pass on the Eli goal line, and the defensive prowess of Yale's captain Frank kept Harvard from running up a bigger score. A hero in defeat as he ended his all-America career in blue, Frank twice broke up potential scoring plays in the latter stages of the first half, when Harvard was running wild through the sagging Eli line.

The Crimson turned on the power in sensational style in the second period after failing to capitalize a big early break, Foley's recovery of Al Hessberg's fumble on the Blues' 25-yard line. Three times, on drives featured by Torbie MacDonald's long, twisting rush and superb blocking, Harvard thrust deep into enemy territory but connected only once, on Foley's cross-over pass to Daughters, that completed a 57-yard march.

MacDonald reeled off dashes of 32, 24 and 25 yards on reverse plays that had the Elis on their heels. Frank twice brought down the Harvard speed merchant when it appeared he had a good chance to break away for a touchdown. The last of Harvard's drives carried 61 yards before it stalled on Yale's 16.

Play in Snowstorm.

The gridiron was half obscured by the snowstorm when Yale started the last half with a rush that, for the first time, penetrated Harvard's sturdy defense and resulted in the tying touchdown. Frank raced back 22 yards with the kick-off and the Elis paraded the remaining 67 yards in only seven plays.

Hessberg got away for runs of 27 and 26 yards, the second of which came on fourth down and put the ball on Harvard's two-yard line. Frank bucked over his own right guard on the next play. Dave Colwell's attempt to place-kick the extra point was blocked.

Yale got the benefit of a big break near the end of the third period when MacDonald fumbled a punt and the ball went to the Elis on Harvard's 23, after caroming out of bounds off Frank Gallagher's chest during the scramble for the loose pigskin. Frank ploughed to a first down on Harvard's 12 but the Blue attack was checked on the eight-yard mark. After a five-yard penalty was called against Yale, Colwell tried a placement field goal from the 21-yard line but it was just a trifle wide of the uprights.

Harvard's Winning Drive.

Harvard, from its own 20-yard line, put on the drive that won the game. It was a magnificent march, ably directed by Foley, punctuated by Vernon Struck's sharp thrusts from spinner plays, and climaxed by Foley's wide sprint around Yale's left end from Yale's 10-yard line for the touchdown.

Except for one pass, Foley to Green, that gained 18 yards and put the ball on Yale's 12, Harvard simply overpowered the Eli forwards on this 80-yard advance.

When Chief Boston, hard blocking quarterback, place-kicked the extra point, only six minutes remained but Harvard still had a defense job on its hands. Yale, shifting the passing responsibility from Frank to Gil Humphrey, struck dangerously in the closing stages.

Hessberg, whose catch of a long pass led to Yale's tying score against Dartmouth, chilled Harvard's rooters by grabbing a toss for a 27-yard gain, putting the ball on Harvard's 24. Hessberg nearly broke away from Foley's tackle but the Crimson defense held fast. Four succesive passes, two of them aimed at Frank, were knocked down.

O'BRIEN'S PASS ENABLES T. C. U TO BEAT RICE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Nov. 20.—Little Davey O'Brien starred gloriously here this afternoon as the Texas Christian Horned Frogs handed the Rice Owls their first Southwest Conference defeat, 7—2, and put themselves in line for a bid at the 1937 title.

After three scoreless periods, marred by frequent fumbling, O'Brien whipped a pass from his own 47-yard line to Spud Taylor, and Taylor raced to the Owl two-yard line before he was brought down. O'Brien then rammed the line twice and he was over. Then he kicked a perfect placement goal for the extra point.

Rice staged a march of its own in the closing minutes of the game, and T. C. U. finally managed to stop it on the six-yard line. O'Brien played smart by stalling for three downs and then stepping out of the end zone for an automatic safety, just before the gun went off.

Demonstration of Wrestling Holds At Benefit Show

Promoter Tom Packs reported to the committee in charge of Mayor Dickmann's annual Christmas dinner benefit show, to be held Dec. 3 at the Auditorium, that Everett Marshall will appear on the wrestling portion of the show card.

Marshall appeared here in the main event two years ago, disposing of Rasputin, the bearded Russian, with Danno O'Mahony's famous "Irish whip" hold.

Marshall will not participate in a wrestling contest, but will demonstrate to the audience many holds used by well-known masters of the wrestling world.

Billy Sandow, his wrestling manager, will do the announcing for Marshall's portion of the program.

The benefit show really will be three shows in one, with wrestling, boxing and entertainment sharing the same bill.

BURROUGHS TIES COUNTRY DAY, WINS TITLE IN "ABC" LEAGUE

John Burroughs battled Country Day to a 7-all tie yesterday afternoon but won the "A" football championship of the "ABC" League anyhow. The tie put Burroughs' final league record at two victories and a tie.

The winners needed a victory or a tie to gain the title, for Western Military Academy won two of its three league contests, while Country Day lost one and tied two of its games. Principia Academy, the fourth member of the circuit, finished with a tie and two losses.

Burroughs had to come from behind to tie, because Country Day counted in the opening period and converted the extra point. Burroughs then scored the tying points in the third quarter.

Country Day scored after marching straight down the field after it took the kick-off on its own 45-yard line. A series of short bucks and end runs moved the ball to the Burroughs 20-yard line from where an off-tackle play by Warner Elmer put the ball on the 10-yard line. Carl Lawton bucked the line to the five-yard mark and on the next play Elmer went over for the touchdown. Tom Collins was sent in to kick the extra point.

Country Day worked the ball to the Burroughs 20-yard line later in the quarter, but lacked the drive to put it across.

The Burroughs Bombers came back in the third quarter and took the kick-off on their 45-yard line and in four plays worked the ball to the Country Day 25-yard mark. Runs by Dick Sisler and Dick Hume placed the ball on the 10-yard mark from where Sisler carried it to the two-yard mark. On the next play Sisler went off left tackle for the score. Burroughs tried to place-kick the extra point, but the ball was wide. The play, was called back, however, because Country Day was offside and on the next try Sisler plunged the line for the extra point.

In the fourth quarter Hume took a lateral from Sisler on the Country Day 45-yard line and ran it to the Country Day 20-yard line but the Bombers lacked the scoring punch to put it over.

Burroughs 'B' Wins, 'C' Team Loses.

The Burroughs "B" team ended its season yesterday when it defeated the Country Day "B" team, 14 to 0, on the Burroughs field. Lively scored the first touchdown for Burroughs in the second quarter when he went over on a line buck from the two-yard line. Heineman blocked a punt on the Country Day 25-yard line which gave Burroughs a chance to score. Lively bucked the line for the extra point.

The last Burroughs score came in the fourth quarter when Guidi went off right tackle. Bronfrenner kicked the extra point. This was the "B" team's fifth victory in seven starts.

The Country Day "C" team romped to a 33-to-0 victory over the Burroughs "C" yesterday on the Burroughs field. Country Day scored in every quarter but the first. Brown and Boline accounted for the Country Day touchdowns.

PRINCETON WINS UPSET VICTORY OVER NAVY, 26-6

By the Associated Press.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 20.—At the tag end of a sorry season a football team was born today in Palmer Stadium.

It was a Princeton football team that, already soundly thrashed by Cornell, Dartmouth, Harvard and Yale, turned on what the experts thought was to have been another tormenter and gave Navy a 26-6 pasting.

Thus the Tigers salvaged some satisfaction since Fritz Crisler came to Princeton. They did so smartly and decisively and, from the time they scored their opening touchdown, didn't let Navy's reputed power get up even half a head of steam.

The Princeton line, emerged as a well knit, cohesive unit. Behind it the Princeton backs, notably sophomore Bob Hinchman, Junior Tom Mountain and Senior Jack White, worked smoothly to effect Navy's destruction.

The Princeton supporters in the crowd of 48,000 had turned out as much for the annual show put on by the Middies as for any other reason. They didn't expect their team to win, but, after that opening touchdown, scored in the first three minutes of play, they stayed in their seats until a Princeton interception halted Navy's last, gambling passing attack.

It was Hinchman who set the first scoring drive under way. He started it from the Tiger 34-yard line with a 14-yard end run, finished it with a 13-yard pass to Jack Daniel which the latter toted another 41 yards for the touchdown. Hinchman then added the extra point.

The sophomore halfback's passes also put the Tigers in position for their third score, made by Fullback Ashby Harper on the same fake reverse with which Ken Sandbach beat the Midshipmen a year ago.

White and Mountain combined for the other two.

Wood's 58-yard punt return for a touchdown, first Navy score on Princeton since 1931, was the only time they got by midfield in the second quarter.

Arkansas Held Scoreless First Time Since 1934

By the Associated Press.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 20.—George Washington University did today what no Southwest Conference eleven had done in three years—stopped the University of Arkansas' scoring attack—and held the Passing Porkers to a 0-0 tie.

Both teams tried and missed field goals after running and passing attacks fizzled in the shadow of the goal posts.

A soft and, in spots, muddy field handicaped both elevens, but proved particularly disastrous to the Arkansas team. Time and again passes were completed for long gains, only to have the receiver stumble and fall before a tackler reached him.

The temperature hovered in the low thirties, affecting the handling of the ball by the Razorbacks and making the 8000 spectators shiver.

ISBELL STARS, PURDUE BEATS INDIANA, 13-7

By the Associated Press.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Nov. 20.—Cecil Isbell, 190-pound Texan, ran, kicked and passed all over the frozen gridiron here this afternoon to give the down-trodden Boilermakers of old Purdue a 13-to-7 victory over their arch foe, Indiana University, before a crowd of 35,000. Snow fell throughout most of the game, turning at times into a driving storm.

In the first quarter Isbell's booming punts, traveling 50 to 60 yards, set Indiana back on its heels, and then from Indiana's 28 he faded back to his 40 and passed 35 yards to Jim Zachary, right end, who trotted the few remaining steps for a touchodwn. Isbell kicked the extra point.

Indiana tied the count in the second period on a pass from Frank Filchock to Kenderdine, and a place-kick for the extra point by George Fowler. Then in the final quarter, with only two minutes left to play, Isbell cracked off left tackle from the Indiana 10 to score the winning touchdown.

It was Purdue's first victory over an Indiana team coached by Bo McMillin, the old "Prayin' Colonel" of Centre College. McMillin's Indiana teams have whipped the Boilermakers twice and last year this traditional battle was a spectacular 20-20 tie.

his victory over Lewis and has held himself in readiness at all times for the return match, which he considered would be sure to be held.

Izzy is something of an old-time fighter and takes his engagements rather casually. He likes to follow his own rules of training, particularly as to diet, but he vows and declares he has been taking good care of himself recently.

Gastanaga has fought two matches here, dropping both to Otis Thomas, Negro heavyweight. The first time he was obviously out of condition. The second time he was winning until a punch from Thomas knocked a plate of teeth into the roof of his mouth and forced Izzy to retire.

Lewis Undefeated Here.

After that, he went to Detroit and knocked out Lorenzo Pack, Negro heavyweight, in two rounds, then was rematched there with Lewis, whom he defeated in 10 rounds.

Gastanaga's name was among five submitted to Max Schmeling for his bout in Madison Square Garden, Dec. 13, but Max passed him up in favor of Harry Thomas.

Lewis has boxed here numerous times since he defeated Bob Olin for the light-heavyweight championship at the Arena about two years ago, and has not lost a bout here.

The champion has announced that he would be here at least a week ahead of the match to complete his training.

UNDEFEATED ST. MATTHEWS OPPOSE BURKES; SHAMROCKS IDLE

In concluding their schedule of games at West Side Park, the St. Louis Soccer League teams offer this afternoon a double-header in which the undefeated St. Matthews oppose the Burkes of East St. Louis in the second and featured game. Next Sunday, the league transfers to Sportsman's Park where the St. Matthews will start off against an out-of-town club.

Loss of Goaltender Mil Valdez, Fullbacks Joe Garcia and Francis Lyons, and Center Halfback Julio Gonzales at the start of the season crippled the Burke club but Manager Emilio Cueto has made several good moves toward rebuilding his team. Of the four absentees, only two are now active, Valdez and Garcia, both with the Nebco club in the Carondelet group of the Municipal League. Neither Lyons nor Gonzales has played this season. They were sought by both the St. Patricks of the league and the Shamrocks. The Burkes will have to play a considerably improved game if they are to stop the young St. Matthew team today.

The South Side Club, with Tom Chartrand at center forward, will oppose the St. Patricks in the opening game of the league program, starting at 2 p. m.

Because of inclement weather and a prediction indicating a further drop in temperature, the Shamrocks called off their scheduled game with Sparta of Chicago which was to have been played at Public Schools Stadium. President Phil Riley, in announcing the cancellation, said that he hoped to have Sparta here next Sunday after which the St. Louis team will play at Chicago.

Opening the second half-season schedule, the St. Philip Neri League presents the following doubleheader: McNamaras vs. Sunrise; Holy Name vs. Dohle Auto.

Federation Schedule.

Two games will mark the opening of the Federation of Young Men's Clubs' Soccer League at Murphy Park, Nineteenth street and Cass avenue. The first game between the Dixie Knights and the Attics starts at 2 p. m. and the second at 3:30, brings together the Trojans and the Toppers.

Two other clubs, last year's champions, Columbus Square Pleasure Club and the Independent Pleasure Club, will swing into action the following Sunday, completing a six-club circuit. Joe Koblyinski will referee.

Hurlingham Wins In Semifinal of Argentine Polo

By the Associated Press.

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 20.—Hurlingham defeated Santa Paula, 9 to 8, in a semifinal match of the Argentine open polo championship today and qualified to meet either the invading North American team, Aurora, or Santa Ines in the final round. Aurora plays Santa Ines in the other semifinal tomorrow.

ILLINOIS COLLEGE TRIUMPHS, 32 TO 3, OVER McKENDREE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JACKSONVILLE, Ill., Nov. 20.—Scoring 26 points in a wild and wolly first half, the Illinois College Blue Boys defeated McKendree College, 32-3, and clinched the co-championship of the Little Nineteen Conference in a football battle waged on a snow-covered field here today.

Lambert scored two touchdowns and place-kicked two extra points to strengthen his claim to individual conference scoring honors. Tony Donat counted two six-pointers after catching passes. Augie Dicensco caught Lambert's 15-yard touchdown pass to wind up the Illinois scoring.

Capt. Benny Isselhardt's beautiful 24-yard place-kick late in the fourth period kept the McKendree boys from being shut out. Fullback Ed Posage set the Blue Boys back on more than one occasion with his long punts.

After a pass from Lambert to Donat had netted 30 yards and a touchdwon early in the first quarter, however, the Methodists were never in the game.

The lineups:

McKENDREE.	Pos.	ILLINOIS.
Bise	L. E.	Hartong
Weber	L. T.	McWard
Handlon	L. G.	Ballard
Sager	C.	Jones
Randall	R. G.	Mader
Doerner	R. T.	Peabody
Harmon	R. E.	Prosiz
Isselhardt	Q. B.	Donat
Long	L. H.	Fletcher
Martin	R. H.	Mangieri
Posage	F. B.	Lambert

Score by periods:

Illinois	12	14	6	0—32
McKendree	0	0	0	3— 3

Scoring—Illinois touchdowns, Donat 2, Lambert 2, Dicenso 1. Points after touchdown, Lambert 2 (placekicks). Field goal—Isselhardt.

Officials—Meyer Morton, Rock Island, referee; Autin, Rock Island, umpire; Omer, Carthage, linesman.

Interest in Fencing Growing.

Intercollegiate fencing is growing. Hopkins, Delaware, St. John's, Richmond, William and Mary have taken up the sport.

Reasons for Poor Shooting Conditions.

There are several reasons that might be advanced for poor shooting conditions that have been prevalent for the last few years. First, and most important, is the decrease in the number of fowl. This followed the huge drainage and reclamation program sponsored by the government. Coupled with severe drouths, this resulted in the loss of more than 70,000,000 acres of breeding area.

As a result of the breeding grounds of this section being no longer sufficient, ducks and geese were forced to find new grounds in Canada. For this purpose a group of U. S. sportsmen have banded together and are aiding in the construction of huge breeding areas in Canada. Within the next decade there should once again be abundant shooting.

St. Louis Problem.

Duck hunters in the eastern half of Missouri have a peculiar problem in regard to getting their limit bags, according to one of the federal game management agents who has been around these parts for the last 30 years. This has to do with the private clubs and the non-private blinds.

Hunters with the means necessary to belong to clubs have a decided advantage over those who must hunt on public property. However, the former do a great general service in getting the ducks up and flying. Conditions are usually as good as possible on club grounds and if there are any ducks flying, they will settle on waters near the club. They will remain there where feeding is good and shelter is excellent until driven away either by cold weather or, more often, on becoming the targets of club members. This is where the public shooter is benefited, as he is sitting in his blind nearby on the river, within range of the ducks winging from the guns of the clubmen.

There are many clubs lying along the Mississippi and the Missouri rivers and many non-club hunters are greatly benefited as above stated. The main trouble today is that the club is usually open only two or three days each week and as a result the ducks sit idly by, enjoying the wild rice and sheltered coves of the grounds for five days and moving only two.

Northern Mallards Due In.

There are mallards and . . . there are mallards, if we are to take the word of Ray Holland, editor of Field and Stream, who sends word from the North that large flights of Northern mallards, the choice of hunters, are on the way. The early mallards are the small, dark-legged fowl that are first to leave the chill country and seek warmer weather. The Northern mallard, stalking about on his bright orange-colored legs, is a tough fellow and stays until the bitter cold forces him on his way.

The orange legs are the ones most sought after by duck hunters throughout the country and news that the blizzards of Minnesota and Michigan have started them down the Mississippi flyways will be received as joyful tidings by all.

Hunting Par Excellence.

When the average person thinks of Pennsylvania he thinks usually of smoke-producing steel mills and other industrial plants. The sportsman, however, thinks of the Keystone State as THE leader in conservation. This was emphasized in the writer's mind recently while taking a route through the old Quaker villages and highways.

The first thing that caught the eye with a suddenness was a flaming red sign stating, "Closed season on men at all times." This was followed with signs such as "Look again before shooting a buck with two legs . . . it might be a man." These signs, and many others of similar nature, were placed along the highways at frequent intervals to remind hunters that accidents must be prevented.

Along with these signs were many others, announcing, "Warning . . . deer crossing within next two miles." These signals were to ask the motorist to slow down to where he could stop upon seeing a family of deer crossing the highway.

It actually seemed as if everyone in the country wore hunting clothes and it was better than an even money bet that the back of every jacket would show a hunting license sewn or pinned on. The tags were about three by five inches, with county, name, description and number plainly printed thereon. Protection from the elements was provided by a celluloid covering.

The final point of convincing was driven home when a small buck wandered boldly onto the highway about a hundred yards from where a group of road workers was engaged. Upon a shout from one of the workers Mr. Buck stepped over a four-strand barber wire fence and into a field of shocked corn. There is no question that the East, despite its heavy population, still has it over the Middle West when it comes to the game. Years of study and practice of conservation, along the very lines which Missouri is now following has made it possible for sportsmen to enjoy a full year of hunting and fishing.

Pot Shots.

It was also plainly visible from the drive through Pennsylvania that the estimate of 78,000,000 stray cats is not far from right. No telling how much destruction to wildlife is done by these homeless felines, which must forage for themselves. . . . The Quaker State estimates that more than 65,000 rabbits are killed annually by motorists in that State. . . . This is nearly as many as are imported each year. . . . The Board of Fish and Game Commissioners, Delaware, recently sent out 15,000 questionnaires to hunters to determine the favorite quarry. . . . Insurance rates on rabbits rose with over 50 per cent naming the cottontail, 30 per cent for quail and about 5 per cent for ducks, with the remainder being distributed among fox, grouse, etc.

Harrison Wins From Poe in Golf Playoff

By the Associated Press.

PINEHURST, N. C., Nov. 20.—E. J. (Dutch) Harrison of Little Rock, Ark., scored a birdie 3 on the home hole today to edge out Henry Clay Poe, Durham (N. C.) youngster, in a play-off for first place in the Midsouth Golf Tournament.

They ended the 36-hole tournament yesterday with scores of 142.

After a nip and tuck battle most of the way, Poe, 22-year-old former Duke University star, looked like a winner at the seventeenth when Harrison, trailing by a stroke, sent his tee shot into a bunker.

He made a great recovery, however, to within inches of the cup and got a halve in 3.

Poe hooked his drive into the rough on the eighteenth and failed to reach the green in two. Harrison was straight down the fairway and played a long iron to within 15 feet of the cup.

For the first time in the match, Poe approached poorly, leaving himself a 20-foot putt, which he missed. Harrison's roller was perfect, picking up the stroke he was in arrears and anothers one to win $250 top money. Poe got $200 in his first tournament test as a pro.

UNDEFEATED MARSHALL TRIMS DAYTON, 7 TO 0

By the Associated Press.

DAYTON, O., Nov. 20.—A spectacular 80-yard run over a snow-covered field by Sophomore Bob Adkins gave Marshall College a 7 to 0 triumph over the University of Dayton today and its first Buckeye Conference championship.

Adkins slipped through Dayton's left tackle five minutes after the game started and sprinted for the winning marker. Nelson Bragg, left guard, added the extra point with a place-kick.

Dayton made only one first down. Marshall has not lost a game this season, but a tie with Ohio University marked its record. Dayton has lost only to Toledo.

Carnegie Plays Holy Cross to a Scoreless Tie

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 20.—Carnegie Tech wound up its season today by playing undefeated Holy Cross to a scoreless tie before 15,000 persons who sat through a snowstorm. Holy Cross three times drove to within a few yards of a score, while Carnegie twice attempted field goals.

ANNUAL JAMBOREE OF BALL PLAYERS SCHEDULED TUESDAY

The annual get-together of members of the Professional Baseball Players' Association of this district, at which matters of interest to the organization are discussed and celebrated, will be held Tuesday, beginning at noon, at 1449A Warren street, with Pete Walsh as host.

Entertainment will include songs by ballplayer quartets, a speech by Marty McManus on the benefits of membership in the P. B. P. A., and a hot dog eating contest between Johnny Schulte and Heine Mueller. The organization assists aged and needy players. The association receives a big share of the receipts of the annual major league all-star game.

HIGH SCHOOL PLAYER DIES FROM INJURIES SUFFERED IN GAME

By the Associated Press.

LUFKIN, Tex., Nov. 20.—Marvin Marsh, 17-year-old first-string fullback for the Lufkin High School team, died tonight of internal injuries suffered yesterday in a football game.

The youth, son of Maj. Marvin W. Marsh, East Texas District C C C commander, was taken from the game with four broken ribs. His condition was not considered serious until complications developed today.

WEBER-DEIBEL MUST WIN TO STAY IN MUNY FOOTBALL RACE

A third meeting between the Food Center and the Weber-Deibel teams will feature the second round doubleheader of the Municipal Football Association this afternoon at the Drill Grounds in Forest Park. This contest, at 1 o'clock, will be followed by a 3 o'clock game between the Lennemann Motor Co. and the Stockham Legion Post No. 245. The Sentinel Chapter De Molay draw the bye.

Neither the Foods or the Webers has been able to defeat the other by a wide margin in the last two years of their rivalry. In the 1936 season their games resulted in a tie and a victory apiece, with the Webers winning the championship by a 6-0 score. This season in two meetings the Foods won, 12-,6 and afterwards tied, 7-7.

If the Webers lose they will be out of the title hunt this season. If the Foods lose, they will still have the chance to tie for the second half title when they play a final round game with the Lennemanns, first-half champs.

Benny La Presta, Food Center coach, was enthused last night when Dr. Hubert Prett, league surgeon, gave permission to Bob Grenia, leading team scorer, to play today. Grenia has been out for three weeks with a ruptured blood vessel in the right knee. The speedy halfback still ranks second to Carl Wood of the Lennemanns in the list of Muny scorers.

Grenia will start at right halfback, pairing with Charley Burgess, left halfback of Missouri University. Joe Kastranek will be at quarter and Dave Perkins at fullback. Line Coach Bill Montgomery plans to stand pat on the line he opened with last week.

Coach Les Haney, who makes few changes in his Weber lineups, is making only one for today—giving Bud Marshall, former Clayton High star, another try at fullback.

Sooners Defeat Oklahoma Aggies

By the Associated Press.

NORMAN, Ok., Nov. 20.—The University of Oklahoma Sooners defeated the Oklahoma Aggies, 16 to 0, in their thirty-second annual football game here today, with Jack Baer, brilliant senior quarterback, scoring all the points before a shivering homecoming crowd of 15,000 fans.

MISSOURI RUNNER IS FIRST, KANSAS STATE WINS TWO-MILE TITLE

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 20.—Kansas State cinder men spent 10 chilly minutes on a frozen track here today to retain their Big Six outdoor two-mile track championship and nose out the University of Missouri, 37 to 50.

"Lonesome John" Munski of Missouri finished first in a time of 9m. 44s., failing to touch the conference record of 9m. 32s. set by Glenn Cunningham of Kansas in 1932.

Iowa State ran third, and Nebraska finished fourth. Oklahoma placed fifth and the University of Kansas was last.

John Brownlee of Nebraska hit the finish line a few steps ahead of Mark Collins of Missouri, to take second place. Leonard Miller and Charles Mitchell of Kansas State ran fourth and fifth, and Wilson Andrews of Nebraska and Jacob Stimson of Iowa State placed sixth and seventh.

The 30 runners were hampered by snow and a stiff wind that swept the track.

TYPO ASSOCIATION TO HOLD MEETING TODAY

Bernard Mertens, president of the St. Louis Typo Athletic Association, sponser of the Union Printers' baseball team which plays in the Municipal League, has announced that the annual meeting of that organization will be held today at 2 p. m. at Typographical Union No. 8 Building 3745 West Pine boulevard. Election of officers for the ensuing year will take place and the manager of the 1938 printers team will be selected. Mertens invites all union printers and members of Mailers' Union No. 3 to attend.

Other business to be taken up will be the laying of plans for the midwinter meeting of the Union Printers' International Baseball League to be held in St. Louis for the first time Jan. 29-30. It is also planned to make tentative arrangements for the twenty-ninth annual tournament of the Union Printers' International Baseball League which will be held here next August. St. Louis entertained the national groups in 1911 and 1926.

Delegates from New York, Boston, Baltimore, Chicago, Pittsburgh, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Washington, St. Paul, Detroit and Hamilton, Canada, will attend the winter meeting.

Jaeger Plays, Colgate Wins

By the Associated Press.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 20.—One bold bid for victory midway through the second period carried Colgate's Red Raiders to a 7 to 0 triumph today over Syracuse and their first major triumph of the season.

A crowd of 35,000 sat in Archbold Stadium and watched the Maroon eleven come fighting back after a string of defeats to outplay and outfight the Orangemen in the midst of a swirling snowstorm.

Whit Jaeger, injured early in the season, came back with a magnificent display of ball-carrying to spark the winning drive. Until he led the Maroon offensive the visitors had been penned up in their own territory. There was every indication that the 13-year-old hoodoo held by Colgate over Syracuse was dead at last.

But Jaeger changed all that. Starting on their 30-yard line, the raiders charged to 70 yards on six plays for a touchdown.

Jaeger on a delayed buck went up to the 42-yard point. On a reverse he swept wide around his own left end and dashed down the sidelines over the goal line. The Colgate stands went wild, and were wilder when the play was called back for Jaeger went out of bounds at the 22-yard mark.

Wally Davids varied the attack by whipping a pass to Jaeger on the seven-yard line, where he was knocked out of bounds. Two savage smashes by Ed Lalor put the ball on the five-yard line and set up the touchdown play.

Jaeger took the ball on a reverse and sprinted out alone toward the goal. He shook off Les Balmer with a straight-arm and crashed over just as Babe Ruth, Syracuse's heavy duty back, hit him on the one-yard line. Red Chesbro kicked the point from placement.

That was the ball game.

BOSTON U. DEFEATS BOSTON COLLEGE, 13-6

BOSTON, Nov. 20.—Courageous Boston University ground out a 13-6 upset victory over a rugged Boston College eleven today. It was the Terrier's first victory over B. C. in years of Inter-City rivalary. A crowd of 12,000 at Fenway Park saw the game.

FAIRBANKS MORSE
TURRET SHIELDED RADIO

1. Turret Shielding—One of the four big reasons why you'll get more keen enjoyment from this than any other radio. Turret Shielding keeps out most of those popping and crackling noises that ruin foreign (short wave) reception. Paris—London—Berlin stations come in clear and strong. No other radio receiver offers you this plus-value feature. Turret Shielding is an exclusive development of Fairbanks-Morse radio engineers. It enables tubes, condensers and other delicately balanced electrical elements to function at maximum efficiency.

2. The Tone Projector is another exclusive Fairbanks-Morse feature. It gives the speaker the help it needs. Diffuses treble notes, placing them in their true ratio to the musical scale. Makes audible the overtones and soft lows lost in ordinary radio reception. Gives faithful tone a new meaning. Look at the back of this radio—the big tone projector is one of the first things you see. But wait! Seeing it is only part of the thrill. Now turn the set on and listen! Instantly you hear the difference it makes in tonal beauty. Never have you heard a radio voice so lifelike.

3. Automatic Tuning—With True Automatic Frequency Control. One flip of your finger brings in your favorite stations—perfectly. A new electrical circuit makes this receiver "adjust" itself to the signal of the station you want. You get the exact, precision tuning that is essential to best tone quality. One try and you'll know that this automatic tuning dial is built with the care and precision of a fine watch. It works smoothly, quietly, perfectly. The moment you operate this automatic dial you will appreciate what a difference Fairbanks-Morse precision engineering makes in this fine radio.

4. Wide Arc Tone Diffuser—Another exclusive new feature. You hear all of the music, no matter where you sit in the room. Wide Arc Tone Diffuser is a scientifically designed system of acoustic reflectors which spreads sounds of all pitches into all portions of the room.

This radio has everything worth-while known to the industry—plus these 4 major features, all of which are found in no other radio. And it costs no more. A very small down payment puts it in your home.

90 PCT. 30-YEAR LOANS ON REALTY PLAN PROTESTED

Mortgage Bankers' Officer Voices Opposition to a Proposed Reorganization Plan for F H A.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—Reorganization of the Federal Housing Administration to permit 90 per cent loans instead of 80 per cent and 30-year amortizations instead of 20-year, as well as lowered interest rates and junior liens and the organization of a central Federal mortgage bank as is now proposed by the national real estate interests would be a dangerous threat to the stability of the real estate and mortgage market and would promote very little sound building but a great deal of speculative, badly-financed construction of the type that caused the last real estate collapse, George H. Patterson, secretary of the Mortgage Bankers' Association of America, declared in a statement today. He said:

Lower Down-Payment Unsound.

"Lowering the down-payment from 20 per cent to 10 per cent on F H A insured mortgages is unsound mortgage practice, and is in line with the objectionable features in installment selling about which much official concern is expressed today. As long as building costs are high, as long as labor difficulties endure, this reduction would develop little sound construction but some speculative building of the type that caused the last real estate collapse.

"It is argued that four-fifths of the American people already buy their homes on the 10 per cent basis. If true, then these suggested changes would mean a straight 'charge account' basis for home financing—with the Federal Government the creditor. Nothing proposed in recent years is so basically unsound.

"Ninety per cent loans may very easily become 100 per cent loans or more—what with the hazards that can be expected in arriving at a true appraisal of the value of the ground and improvements, there being so little margin of equity remaining. And the downward fluctuation that can take place, in a very short time, relative to the costs of material and labor is also a predominating factor.

Sees It as a Mirage.

GROUP ACQUIRES APARTMENT IN CABANNE DISTRICT

Buys 12-Unit Building at 5730-40 Cates Avenue in Name of Banker's Secretary.

Adding to its extensive holdings in the apartment field, interests, represented by Delbert S. Wenzlick, president of the Wenzlick Real Estate Co., have purchased three story court structure at 5738-40 Cates avenue, in the Cabanne district. Title to the property has been vested in Mildred E. Foulks, secretary to J. Lionberger Davis, president of the Security Savings Bank & Trust Co.

The building contains 12 four-room apartments, with living room, bedroom, kitchen, dinette and bath. Modern appliances include electric refrigerators and other innovations. There are five garages in the rear of the premises. The lot is 45 by 135 feet.

The seller, the Kingsbury Realty & Investment Co. was represented by Duke Young Inc., in the transaction. No mention of the consideration was made.

The same interests recently purchased a 30-unit building at the northwest corner of Cabanne and Goodfellow, assessed at $97,450, and a 30-unit building at the northeast corner of Cabanne and Goodfellow avenues, the latter for $100,000, as indicated from the internal revenue stamps on the warranty deed. Mildred E. Foulks was the purchaser of record in both instances.

Negotiations Pending.

Negotiations are going forward for other apartment buildings in this section, including several taken in under mortgages during the depression period, and now available at attractive prices, as contrasted with their original cost, according to real estate circles.

Represented by Wenzlick, these interests have purchased between 18 and 20 apartment buildings in the city and suburbs during the last year through Delbert S. Wenzlick. Title in each instance was taken in the name of Mildred E. Foulks.

The Dimmitt-Rickhoff-Bayer Real Estate Co. has several deals well under way involving large apartment buildings recently completed in Moorlands Addition.

Higher rentals, as a result of the cessation in constructing during the depression period, have placed buildings of this character on a substantial dividend basis, which at prevailing sale prices, has challenged the attention of both speculators and investors, real estate men declare.

The large life insurance companies have been in keen competition for loans on well situated apartments on a modern scale in both the city and suburban additions. This refers especially to the New York Life, represented by the Hemmelmann-Spackler Real Estate Co., the Prudential Insurance Co. of America, by Franciscus-Maginn Inc., the Metropolitan, represented by the Laclede Bond & Mortgage Co., and the General American Insurance Co.

Inspiring renewed confidence in buildings in this category, the New York Life Co. recently made a loan of $400,000 on the 15-story Park Royal apartment at 4605 Lindell boulevard. Negotiated by Richard C. Spackler, this loan is for a term of 10 year, with interest at the rate of 4½ per cent. It provides for semi-annual payoffs.

General American Loans.

The General American has made numerous loans for apartment building projects in Blue Ridge terrace, through various real estate companies, noteworthy as reflecting its confidence in the future of real estate in the St. Louis area.

The Equitable Life Assurance Society of America has entered the St. Louis field for loans through

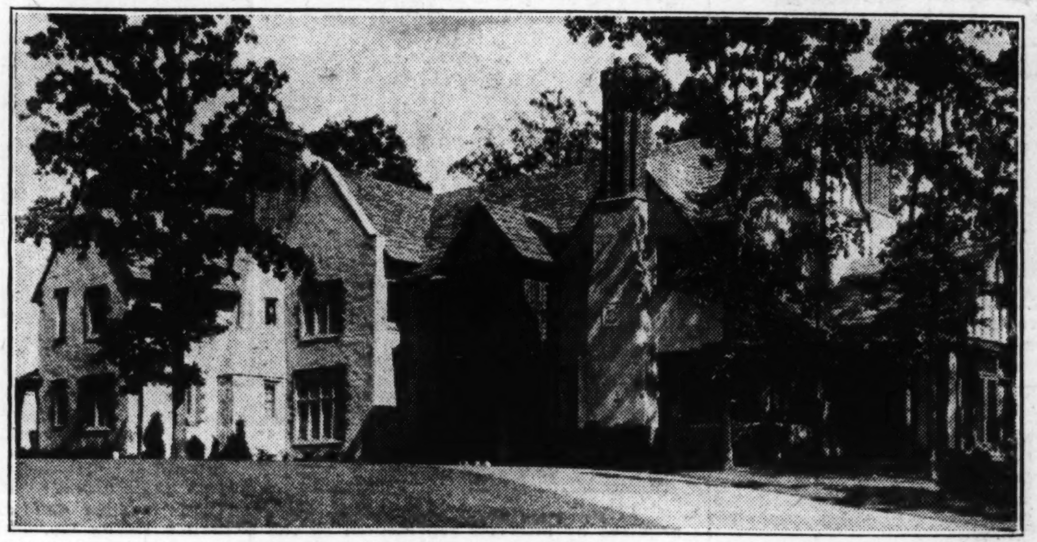
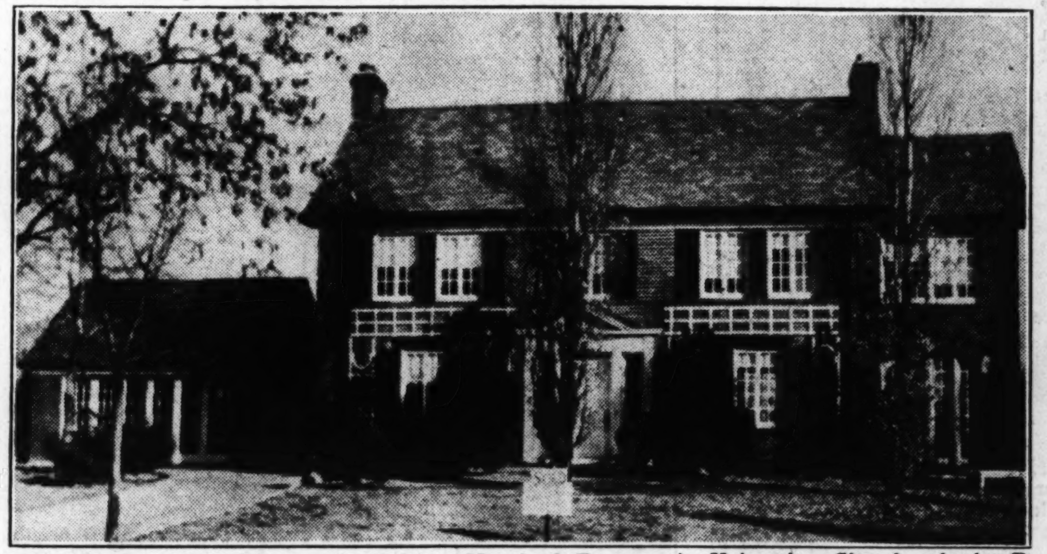
County Residences Recently Acquired



Residence of Otto L. Spaeth in St. Louis Country Club grounds purchased by Mrs. William D. Orthwein. It is on a two acre site. Edward L. Bakewell, realtor, represented the seller. A. T. and Whitelaw Terry represented the purchaser. The house was built several years ago by J. D. Wooster Lambert from plans by La Beaume and Klein, architects.



Residence at 7389 Westmoreland drive, Maryland Terrace, in University City bought by Dr. George A. Clipper. The Chauncey P. Heath Co. handled the transaction.

New Exchange Head

Edward L. Kuhs who was elected president of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange last week. He will take office Jan. 1.

EDWARD L. KUHS SUCCEEDS E. D. RUTH AS EXCHANGE HEAD

Edward L. Kuhs was elected president of St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, succeeding Eugene D. Ruth Jr. at its annual election held Tuesday. He was unopposed.

Those elected to the board of directors were Frank A. Gilbert, Arthur C. Hoehn, Minard T. MacCarthy, George S. Metcalfe, Dewey J. Schmoll and John A. Wehmeyer. Hoehn led the ticket, receiving 194 votes.

A rule forbidding a member of the organization to extend the life of a mortgage or deed of trust on property on which taxes are delinquent, without first informing the mortgage holder of the delinquency, was adopted. It will be included in the organization's code of ethics.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Exchange the following were admitted to active membership in the organization: Stanley Epstein, Glick & Steinbaum, Herman Glick and Morris Steinbaum, and the Waldheim Realty & Investment Co., composed of Aaron Waldheim, president, M. A. Waldheim, vice-president, Edward G. Platt, vice-president and L. L. Freund, secretary and treasurer.

The Lafayette Federal Savings & Loan Association of St. Louis was admitted to affiliated membership.

SPECULATOR BUYS 40 ACRES ON LINDBERGH BOULEVARD

An undisclosed client of the Dubinsky Realty Co. has purchased a 40-acre tract on the south side of Lindbergh boulevard, about a half mile east of the Tesson Ferry road.

The tract has a Lindbergh frontage of 1000 feet or more. It has a depth of more than 1500 feet. Approximately half of the land is under cultivation. The remainder is in timber.

The property was owned by May Steinhauer, a Sappington heir, who was represented by the Mercantile Commerce Bank and Trust Co. The purchase was made as speculation.

F.J. CONRAD CO. LEASES FIVE STORY BUILDING

Grocery Concern to Rent Structure at Southwest Corner of 7th and Clark.

The F. J. Conrad Grocery Co. has taken a long-term lease on the five-story slow combustion building at the southwest corner of Seventh street and Clark avenue, owned by Howard A. Benoist. Negotiations in this connection were handled by Cornet & Zeibig.

The building, occupying a lot 50 by 135 feet, is equipped with sprinkler system and heating plant, and there are both passenger and freight elevators. Improvements to be made will include the installation of a chute from the top to the first floor.

Plans of the company contemplated the addition of a retail department to be operated in conjunction with its wholesale business.

Established in 1864, the concern is one of the oldest grocery houses in St. Louis. It is now located at 13 North Sixth street.

ONLY SLIGHT INCREASE IN 1937 HOUSING CONSTRUCTION

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, Nov. 20. — Coleman Woodbury, director of the National Association of Housing Officials, told the group today that present prospects in private housing construction "are that the increase of 1937 over 1936 will be only a fraction of what was predicted."

Woodbury, from Chicago, made his report at the fifth annual meeting of local, state and Federal housing officials.

The three-day convention will be devoted to discussions of housing problems and governmental measures designed to aid construction.

TIRE CO. LEASES BUILDING ON LOCUST STREET CORNER

The S. and L. Tire Co. has taken a long term lease on the three-story fireproof building at the northeast corner of Locust and Cardinal avenue, owned by the Theuner estate.

The building occupying a lot 50 by 130 feet, contains approximately 18,000 square feet of available floor space. It has been remodeled by the lessee at a large outlay.

The concern operates a chain of automobile accessory stores. The Briett and Naumer Realty Co. negotiated the lease. Rental involved was not disclosed.

SIXTH STREET BUILDING FOCUSING ATTENTION

The five-story building at 13-15-17 North Sixth street is said to be attracting the attention of both wholesale and retail interests. It is equipped with both passenger and freight elevators and other labor-saving devices. The building, one of the largest buildings available in the central business district, is owned by George J. Wanstrath. It was occupied by a grocery store operated by the late David Nicholson.

C. H. KRAUS II BUYS BERRY ROAD TRACT

Gets 9 1-2 Acres Opposite Algonquin Club in Glendale — Other Recent Purchases.

Approximately 9½ acres on the west side of Berry road, opposite the Algonquin Country Club, in Glendale, has been purchased by Charles H. Krauss II of 637 West Polo drive, Clayton. Plans in connection with the purchase have not been disclosed. Mary Potter Love, Inc., handled the transaction.

Having a frontage of 1150 feet on Beverly avenue, the tract constitutes one of the most eligible in this site for a high-class residential development. It was owned by Mrs. Henry A. Cornet and her son, Marian George Cornet.

Milton Stahl, vice-president of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., recently purchased a residence, with two acres of ground, on Berry road, owned by Mrs. E. S. Hoffmann. Another Berry road purchase was that of the residence of Frank Sullivan, with five acres, by Dr. David P. Barr, professor of medicine at Washington University medical school. Both properties are in the vicinity of the Algonquin Club. Negotiations also handled by Mary Potter Love, Inc.

OFFICE BUILDING MANAGERS REPORT SURVEY FINDINGS

Improvement in Occupancy in Office Space Continues but With Tendency to Level Off—135 Cities Covered.

Three noteworthy facts feature the Oct. 1 survey of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers on office building occupancy:

First: The improvement in occupancy of office space continues but shows a tendency to level off.

Second: Cities from which reports were received for more than three buildings totaled 103, an all-time high, the figure for the first time passing the century mark; and the total number of cities from which reports were received was 135, another record.

Third: 783 buildings in 115 cities, with a total rentable area of 64,048,248 square feet, reported normal occupancy of 90 per cent or better.

The results of the nation-wide study are given in detail in a report by Lewis V. Echols of Memphis, Tenn., chairman of the association's committee on renting, in the current issue of Skyscraper Management, and for the eleventh time since highest point of vacancy was reached, on Jan. 1, 1934, show an improvement over the immediately preceding survey; in fact, occupancy is at its highest level, according to the association figures, since May 1, 1931.

Average Occupancy, 80.94 Pct.

An average occupancy of 81.78 per cent was reported from the 103 cities throughout the United States and Canada, as compared with 80.94 per cent occupancy shown in the May 1 survey. While the increase of .84 per cent is negligible and per-

POLL SHOWS DESIRE FOR HOME OWNERSHIP

Builders Are Advised to Cash In on Nation's Urge to Own.

"The Urge to Own—Four out of Five Have It."

This is the conclusion to be drawn from the results of the first nationwide poll of the U. S. home market ever taken, which reveals that "four out of every five middle class Americans would rather own their homes than rent them."

Presented by The Architectural Forum in its November issue, the survey further states that the principal cause underlying this indisputable urge to own is largely a "desire to have the feeling of ownership" and that the chief obstacle to home ownership on a vast scale today is "that the prospect thinks he cannot afford the kind of home he wants."

Reach "Under-$5000" Market.

"General statements about Building's consumers have been delivered as free and easy opinions within the industry from time out of mind," the magazine states, pointing out that "nobody knows—and, more curiously, nobody seems to care—whether they are true or not. Actually, their importance resides in the fact that in the final analysis it is the consumer's opinions which spend the consumer's dollars."

Based on 1003 face-to-face "sampling" interviews selected to account for variations in income, size of town and location, the survey was conducted in Wichita, Kan., Reading, Pa., Atlanta, Ga., Cleveland, O., Providence, R. I. Seattle, Wash., Beaumont, Tex., and Minneapolis, Minn., by trained investigators, who sought out what is loosely termed the market for the "under-$5000 house." Containing the greatest number of prospects, this "under-$5000" market has always, according to The Forum, been a marginal one—one where a sale involves stretching downward by the vendor and stretching upward by the buyer. Thus one major purpose of the survey is to "show the vendor how to stretch further down without splitting his business pants."

Home Still a Castle.

To most people, a home is still a castle first, and an economic method of keeping out the weather second, the survey results indicate, since the four out of five respondents favoring ownership gave as their two leading reasons "Like feeling of ownership" and "Like to fix to suit self," these two accounting for exactly 50 per cent of all motives for ownership. "Good investment," the answer which any business man is expected to give, ranked a poor third.

"The unexpectedly large role played by the emotions is even more clearly revealed in two sets of answers dealing with the financial responsibility involved in ownership," the article continues. "Among the fifth who 'prefer to rent,' the dislike of financial responsibility is the leading argument against buying a home. And yet among a group which differs only in that it would 'prefer to own,' the financial responsibility dwindles to almost no problem at all. A simple difference of feeling about ownership is apparently sufficient to conjure up a responsibility where none grew before.

"Significantly, all arguments in favor of ownership are positive ('like feeling of ownership,' 'more economical,' etc.) while almost all arguments in favor of renting are negative ('can't afford kind wanted,' 'dislike financial responsibility,' etc.). This suggests that whereas one out of four plumped for renting his home even he would still like to own one if it seemed at all possible.

haps indicates that the velocity of absorption may, at least temporarily, be reduced, it represents an impressive improvement over the low figure of 72.43 per cent shown in the survey of Jan. 1, 1934. Converting this ratio into terms representing the actual absorption of vacant rentable area since 1934, the figures approximate 34 per cent.

eports for the Oct. 1 survey were received from 2452 buildings with a total rentable area of 210,308,074 square feet. In these 2452 buildings there was a vacancy of 38,326,749 square feet, or 18.22 per cent.

Once more Canada leads the regions in rate of occupancy, a total of 88.59 per cent as compared with 87.85 per cent in May.

In the United States, the Southern region reported the highest rate of occupancy—86.69 per cent. Second to the Southern was the Southwest region with 85.06 per cent, an improvement of no little consequence over the total of 82.83 per cent, reported in May. The Middle Atlantic's average of 82.53 per cent was exactly 1 per cent better than that of the last previous study.

Midwest, Northern Group.

Slight increases were registered by the Midwest and Northern group, with 80.87 per cent, and the North Central, with 79.67 per cent occupancy. Negligible declines were shown by the Pacific Southwest, with 82.52 per cent, the Pacific Northwest, with 78.17 per cent, and New England, with 77.28 per cent. In each of these sections the decline as expressed in percentages was fractional.

Regional division of the reports on "90 per cent occupancy or better," indicating normal occupancy, were as follows: Middle Atlantic—230 buildings in 20 cities, 27,153,111 square feet of rentable area; Midwest and Northern 89 buildings in 12 cities, 6,044,374 square feet of rentable area; New England 10 buildings in the four cities, 679,901 square feet; North Central — 154 buildings in 29 cities, 11,364,031 square feet; Pacific Northwest—35 buildings in six cities, 1,209,413 square feet; Pacific Southwest—85 buildings in seven cities, 6,529,965 square feet; Southern—84 buildings in 23 cities, 4,001,306 square feet; Southwest—49 buildings in nine cities, 4,134,245 square feet; and Canada—47 buildings in five cities, 2,931,902 square feet; a total of 783 buildings in 115 cities, with 64,048,248 square feet of rentable area.

In view of the fact that the total rentable area in the reporting buildings was 210,308,074 square feet, this means that buildings containing 30.45 per cent of the rentable area upon which reports were received now may be assumed to have a normal occupancy.

gages must be attractive if these loans are to be purchased by those eligible to buy them. Were the rate reduced as proposed by certain interests there is grave doubt that those eligible to purchase would be interested in this type of investment.

"A prominent official of a large institution investing a large proportion of their funds in real estate securities stated to be a few days ago that all organizations of a similar nature must get a net rate of 3½ per cent on their mortgage investments. Mortgages to net 3½ per cent must yield a gross rate of not less than 4.1 per cent. Would these institutions then be interested in purchasing these mortgages if the rate were reduced? In my opinion, they would not.

"Creation of a Federal mortgage bank is likewise to be condemned as simply another step in leading the Federal Government further into private enterprise—particularly objectionable now because no acute national emergency in real estate or real estate financing exists that would make its organization necessary. There is no need whatever for a mortgage discount bank, as the demand for good loans is beyond the supply.

SELMA COURT RESIDENCES ARE ATTRACTING ATTENTION

A group of houses in the Colonial and New England styles, on display in Selma Court, a new development in Webster Groves district, is attracting general attention. Recently completed, the houses consist of seven and eight rooms and two baths, with special provisions for insulation. They are attractively arranged in the court which is in the form of a horseshoe.

Formerly owned by the Harrington estate, the tract was recently purchased by Wilbert L. Thomas, the developer, who has opened an office at 744 Tuxedo boulevard, Webster Groves.

Mr. Property Owner, keep your vacant property advertised in the Post-Dispatch Rental Columns to reach prospective tenants.

Powder Rooms Solve Extra Bath Problem

May Occupy Space of Clothes Closet and Should Have Its Own Color Scheme and Personality.

There just aren't enough bathrooms in this house! This has been the plaint of many a family for many and many a year. The answer to this great American problem seems to be the modern powder room, with its convenient facilities for washing and dressing, its own color schemes, its own personality. It contains a lavatory, closet, dressing table and bench, hamper and, perhaps, a shower. Furthermore, it helps to keep peace in the best regulated families.

Being tiny and immensely pleasing, this new room sometimes occupies the space of a recent clothes closet on the lower floor. Sometimes it is tucked inside on the basement floor so that hard-playing children have little excuse for dodging washing-up before meals. At other times it climbs aloft and takes over a walled-off portion of a bedroom. Or, a house may have all three and run extra smoothly.

To keep down initial expense, unfinished vanity, bench, hamper and medicine chest may be purchased and then enameled in the main color of the room. Inexpensive accessories such as towel bars, soap dishes, drinking glass holders are then painted in brilliant contrast. Another idea to simplify the color scheme is to do ceiling, walls, floor, in one cool color—the lightest tint of which is on the ceiling; the darkest, on the floor. Then the housewife selects a vivid contrast color for towels, small scatter rug and the shower curtain, and she may thus achieve a different-looking powder room by having more than one set of these simple contrasting accessories.

In a room where a ceiling is ice blue, walls are slightly deeper and the floor is a deep blue, there are cheerful rose-red towels lapping over ice blue towel bars and a rose-red chenille rug on the deep blue floor. Ice blue also backgorunds a balancing color like beige. Shades of gray in the background act as a demure foil for touches of rose pink or the new shade called dawn, which is a soft rose tone.

If you are considering a powder room, perhaps you'd like this new department of your household to have walls of peach color and the ceiling coated the color of rich cream. On a deep sea-green floor, a cream toned rug will stand out attractively while towels of sea-green and a dressing table and stationary fixtures of pale peach tint will complete the picture in most effective fashion.

Another room which has a white ceiling has woodwork and blinds of silver gray, a black floor with a formal border and center star design in white. The dressing table and chair are ivory white, while the top of the table is morning-glory blue, glassed over. The walls are also morning-glory blue.

In a Georgian house, the ceiling of the powder room is bright coral pink, the walls shell-white. The pale blue floor is covered with a bright coral rug. Woodwork, and blinds are enameled white and the towels are white and deep blue.

Terra cotta red is used for the dado and dado rail of the powder room in a modern dwelling. Walls are gray and white, marbleized with paint. There are vertical mouldings in terra cotta red running from ceiling to floor in each corner. The same hue is used in the enamel covering the dressing table and bench and the border around the mirror. The top of the bench is enameled black—as are the moulding and baseboard. The floor is deep gray.

Flowering Bulbs For Living Room

Women who want bright living rooms throughout the winter can have them from garden bulbs grown indoors. Blossoms can be had during the cold months, and windows may be filled much of the time with pots of brightly colored flowers.

Nearly all of the bulbs that can be grown in the garden may be forced into bloom indoors. Some are grown in water, such as narcissus and hyacinth, but most other bulbs do best if grown in soil that is rich and mellow.

Start with some of the simpler kinds, such as early tulips and hyacinths. Later, when more experienced, try fresias, anemones, and perhaps Easter lilies. A pot of crocuses on the table or a small dish of grape hyacinths, may add brightness to otherwise dull months.

For forcing, get the bulbs now, plant them in soil, water them, and set them in a cool dark place to develop the roots. This may take from two to 14 weeks, depending on the particular bulb. By bringing only a few pots out of storage at one time, continuous blooming can be had. When brought out of storage, the bulbs are put in a cool, sunny room to develop the tops. Finally they may be taken to a warmer room for blossoming.

Lilies-of-the-valley, though not grown from bulbs, may be forced indoors. A large clump may be dug from the garden after it has frozen several times, or root-like pips may be had from the florist.

When heating or cooling equipment is to be installed in a house, care must be taken to maintain the structural strength of the walls and partitions.

GLASER BROS. INC., LEASE NEW QUARTERS ON WASHINGTON

Glaser Bros., Inc., has leased 15,000 square feet comprising the entire sixth floor of the building at 1110-20 Washington avenue, extending through to St. Charles street. The concern is now located at 1312 Washington avenue.

The new quarters will be occupied as offices, sales and show rooms for men's clothing. The company was established in St. Louis 13 years ago. Its factories are located in other sections.

The property is owned by the Catalin estate. Arthur S. Martin & Son negotiated the lease.

Reports Recent Sales.

Bruch.

Holland Line Enlarges Quarters.

The Holland America Line has more than doubled its space on the fifth floor of the Arcade Building. The expansion was made necessary by its entry into the Caribbean winter cruise field and in anticipation of enlarged activity with completion of its new trans-Atlantic flag ship "New Amsterdam." The office is in charge of A. J. B. Van Herwynen, southwestern passenger agent, who is also consul of the Netherlands for several midwestern states.

A Rambling

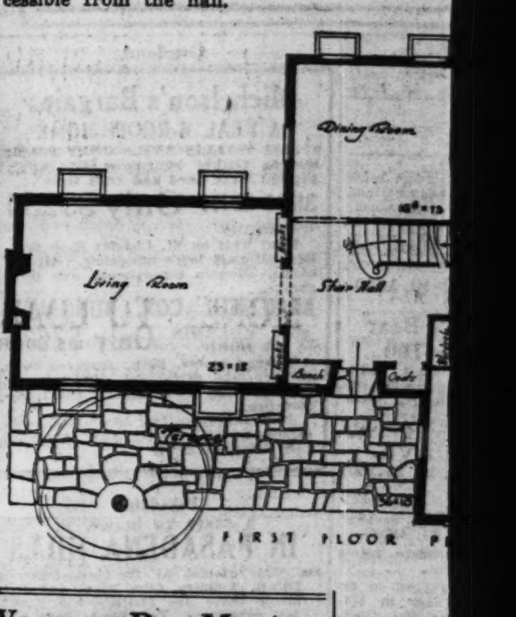
Planned Around a Family of Four Boys This House Embodies a Number of Unusual Points Which Make Pleasant Living for the Entire Household.

IT ISN'T often that a home is designed about the children in the family but when that is the case you may be sure that the house will be both unique and interesting. The American type house shown here had such a purpose and the result was a rambling structure with one entire floor given over to romping, healthy young Americans.

With four boys in the family the owner felt the need for a suite on the first floor. The natural propensity for boys to eat whenever they come indoors made a breakfast alcove imperative and with three bedrooms and a possible fourth on the second floor as well as a bath and ample closet space for the stowing of possessions this house becomes indeed a boys' paradise.

The house is an L-shaped dwelling with a long and more or less isolated living room on one side of a wide stair hall. A wooded bench with a window above it in this hall has a two-fold purpose. It is a place where the head of the house may transact business informally and have the telephone within easy reach on the wardrobe wall just outside the bedroom. The bench has a hinged seat and thus provides some storage space.

The entrance to the house is deeply recessed and has panelled jambs which coincide with the panels of the door. Illumination comes from a light concealed overhead. To the right of the entrance is the master suite consisting of bedroom, bath with tub and shower and two wardrobes. The bedroom has three exposures. The bathroom has a window on either side of the lavatory and a large linen closet. The wardrobes have sliding doors. The bathroom of this suite is also accessible from the hall.



Vacuum Bag Must Be Kept Clean

Are you spending too much energy vacuuming rugs these days? It may not be the fault of the vacuum cleaner if a great deal of work is required to use it effectively, but rather the way in which it is used, according to studies by State experiment station workers.

One test showed the value of a clean bag in efficient dirt removal. Two machines of the same make, but one with a clean and one with a dirty bag, were used on alternate strips of the same rug. The machine with the clean bag removed 12 grams of dirt. The one with the dirty bag removed only one gram. But when the dirty bag was emptied and brushed clean and the machine run over the same surface it had previously covered, 11 grams of dirt were removed.

The investigators who made this study reported that machines clean best if the bag is emptied after each using and brushed inside and out once or twice a month, but they advise against washing the bag, because this spoils the finish which helps to make the bag dust-proof.

Rugs and carpets in rooms used constantly should be cleaned every day. If the vacuum cleaner nozzle is properly adjusted, it is not necessary to go over the surface of a rug more than twice to remove threads, hair and other litter on top of the rug as well as dirt and grit in the pile.

Five minutes a day spent on a rug or carpet is far better for it than 15 minutes twice a week. The reason is plain enough. Get the dirt while it is on the surface and do not wait until several days of walking on the rug have tramped it down into the pile.

Run the cleaner at a moderate speed, just a little more slowly than you usually walk, and get into the habit of standing erect as you do. Avoid quick jerky strokes. They merely use up your energy and contribtute little to your cleaning.

If you have a maid, take the time to teach her these points about vacuum cleaning. She will take more pride in keeping your house clean.

Outlet for Iron.

An overhead outlet for an iron cord is conveniendt because it keeps the cord from dragging on the floor and twisting.

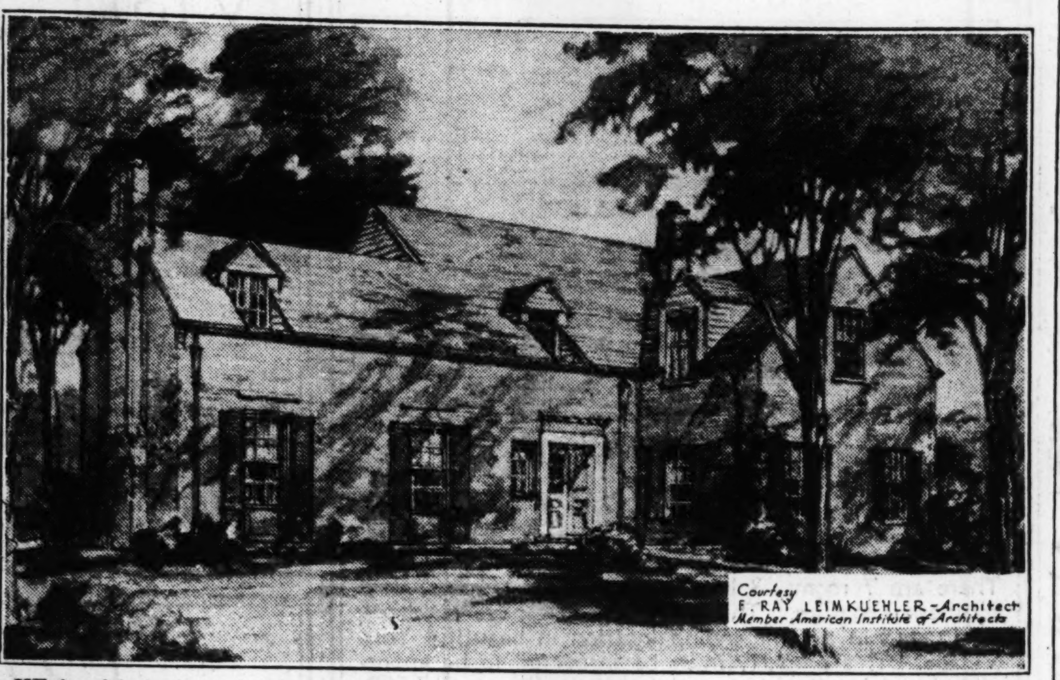
A Rambling American Type House of Brick

Planned Around a Family of Four Boys This House Embodies a Number of Unusual Points Which Make Pleasant Living for the Entire Household.



Courtesy
F. RAY LEIMKUEHLER—Architect
Member American Institute of Architects

IT ISN'T often that a home is designed about the children in the family but when that is the case you may be sure that the house will be both unique and interesting. The American type house shown here had such a purpose and the result was a rambling structure with one entire floor given over to romping, healthy young Americans.

With four boys in the family the owner felt the need for a suite on the first floor. The natural propensity for boys to eat whenever they come indoors made a breakfast alcove imperative and with three bedrooms and a possible fourth on the second floor as well as a bath and ample closet space for the stowing of possessions this house becomes indeed a boys' paradise.

The house is an L-shaped dwelling with a long and more or less isolated living room on one side of a wide stair hall. A wooded bench with a window above it in this hall has a two-fold purpose. It is a place where the head of the house may transact business informally and have the telephone within easy reach on the wardrobe wall just outside the bedroom. The bench has a hinged seat and thus provides some storage space.

The entrance to the house is deeply recessed and has panelled jambs which coincide with the panels of the door. Illumination comes from a light concealed overhead. To the right of the entrance is the master suite consisting of bedroom, bath with tub and shower and two wardrobes. The bedroom has three exposures. The bathroom has a window on either side of the lavatory and a large linen closet. The wardrobes have sliding doors. The bathroom of this suite is also accessible from the hall.

THE breakfast alcove is almost entirely bay window and has a good sized cabinet. The built-in corner cupboard just outside the dining room which may be used to store china and silver was the idea of the architect who does not like waste space of any kind. The kitchen has a double drainboard sink with cabinet space above. A work space with cabinets is just opposite.

The living room is a pleasant oblong room with a fireplace at one end. The windows are well spaced and look out on the garden, on the one side, and on the other on a long terrace flagged with Wisconsin limestone and shaded by tall trees. Book shelves occupy the wall space on either side of the entrance to this room and here the architect has again exercised some ingenuity. He has planned the heating ducts back of these book shelves with the warm air outlet in a decorative panel in the upper part. The fireplace has a wood mantel and light colored marble facing. There is a dado rail and a picture molding which takes the place of a cornice in a formal living room.

The staircase to the second floor has been planned to give easy ascent. The treads are of oak and the simple handrail is of walnut. All bedrooms on this floor have two exposures and ample closet space. A ship ladder leads to the attic which is used for storage purposes. The space over the living room, to be used for storage until some time in the near future, has been completely laid out.

The two-car garage with overhead doors is tied to the house by means of a small screened porch. This provides shelter against the weather and also gives space for a sun deck which opens from the north bedroom on the second floor. The space over the garage may be used for storage.

THE house is built of sand mold brick in red and light brown with brown mortar. The foundation is poured concrete which was vibrated. A drainage tile around the footing connects with the storm sewer. The roof is of brown asbestos shingles. All exterior wood trim is painted white. This includes the gables which are of wood siding. Windows in the living room on the terrace side have tall shutters which are painted green. A brick panel occupies the space below these windows while a brick course at the window heads gives additional height here and breaks what might be an uninteresting surface. The entrance likewise has the emphasis of two decorative brick courses above. The door frame is of wood, painted to match the window trims.

Windows in the living room bedrooms and dining room are double hung. All others are casement type. Interior wood trim is of gum which is stained. Bedroom wood trim is painted. Floors are oak throughout. A recreation room with fireplace occupies part of the basement. The large areas with utility windows allow ample light here. Areas in the terrace are grilled. The outside entrance to the basement is near the garage. The house is completely insulated and heated by a winter air conditioned furnace with bin-fed stoker.

The house faces south on a high lot with a gentle slope and has a number of fine old oak, elm and hickory trees. Cubage is 49,000 feet and the cost has been estimated roughly at 29 cents per cubic foot. The house was planned by F. Ray Leimkuehler, member of the St. Louis Chapter American Institute of Architects.

FOR BETTER LIVING

With winter ahead, it is wise to examine the condition of gutters and downspouts. If gutters are not well cleaned and painted, they will soon begin to decay and when they leak they help decay the woodwork of the structure, soon making expensive repairs necessary.

* * *

In providing a satisfactory method for heating low-priced houses three essential factors exist which not only affect the selection of the heating system itself but to a marked degree control the design of the dwelling as a whole. These factors are adequate capacity as relation to climatic severity, proper relation of heating-plant design to house design, and the use of an economical fuel.

There is a threefold purpose in using double floors when a new home is being built.

These floors act as a structural brace to the whole frame when put on diagonally; they tend to lessen sound and prove a protection against dust penetration. When economies are necessary, the subfloor on the second floor may be omitted.

A subfloor over the cellar will prevent dust from filtering through to the rest of the house.

Breakfast nooks save many steps for the housewife and minimize the effort required in serving the morning meal. Bench seats and a table may be built in the corner of a kitchen or pantry space may be converted to this use. If you plan to build a new home, the architect will be able to include a breakfast nook in the house plans, if you desire one.

* * *

Even colored telephones are available now to suit the complexion of your boudoir or study. They come enameled in old rose, ivory, gray-green, dark blue, yes—and even red.

* * *

In the building and owning of a house, land is the first item of cost and environment is the final source of value. No house can be considered apart from the land it occupies from the point of view of economy, or of satisfaction with a property, or of market-ability.

* * *

Large kitchens may be remodeled to include a dining alcove, pantry, or powder room, and at the same time the actual kitchen unit may be made more compact. Changes of this type may help in the sale of a home.

* * *

If your house is a small one sandwiched between two high buildings, a light paint will give it more prominence than a dark coating. If it is high and narrow, paint the shutters dark and trim with horizontal lines to "lower" the structure. Don't overlook the danger of creating a bad color harmony by disregarding the color schemes of your neighbor's houses. Be sure to take them into consideration when you plan your new color scheme.

Vacuum Bag Must Be Kept Clean

Are you spending too much energy vacuuming rugs these days? It may not be the fault of the vacuum cleaner if a great deal of work is required to use it effectively, but rather the way in which it is used, according to studies by State experiment station workers.

One test showed the value of a clean bag in efficient dirt removal. Two machines of the same make, but one with a clean and one with a dirty bag, were used on alternate strips of the same rug. The machine with the clean bag removed 12 grams of dirt. The one with the dirty bag removed only one gram. But when the dirty bag was emptied and brushed clean and the machine run over the same surface it had previously covered, 11 grams of dirt were removed.

The investigators who made this study reported that machines clean best if the bag is emptied after each using and brushed inside and out once or twice a month, but they advise against washing the bag, because this spoils the finish which helps to make the bag dustproof.

Rugs and carpets in rooms used constantly should be cleaned every day. If the vacuum cleaner nozzle is properly adjusted, it is not necessary to go over the surface of a rug more than twice to remove threads, hair and other litter on top of the rug as well as dirt and grit in the pile.

Five minutes a day spent on a rug or carpet is far better for it than 15 minutes twice a week. The reason is plain enough. Get the dirt while it is on the surface and do not wait until several days of walking on the rug have tramped it down into the pile.

Run the cleaner at a moderate speed, just a little more slowly than you usually walk, and get into the habit of standing erect as you do. Avoid quick jerky strokes. They merely use up your energy and contribtute little to your cleaning.

If you have a maid, take the time to teach her these points about vacuum cleaning. She will take more pride in keeping your house clean.

Outlet for Iron.

An overhead outlet for an iron cord is conveniendt because it keeps the cord from dragging on the floor and twisting.

QUESTIONS BEFORE THE HOUSE

Q. Is it possible to install an automatic stoker for any furnace?
F. H.

A. Almost all domestic heating boilers or furnaces are adaptable to automatic-stoker installation. The principal requirement for successful stoker operation is to have plenty of distance between the flame and the top of the firebox. Where this is lacking in the ordinary furnace it is often possible either to pit the stoker or raise the furnace or suspend a suitable baffle from the top of the firebox. Certain types of magazine-feed boilers are not adaptable to stoker installation without fairly complicated baffling of the magazine section. Many of the stoker companies furnish units especially designed for their product, and the additional expenditure for such a unit is often justified by greater operating efficiencies.

Q. Can stucco walls ever be cleaned satisfactorily?
HERBERT F.

A. Portland cement stucco is not injured by the application of water or by water and cleaning materials. It may be cleaned by hose application of water and brushing with a wire or fiber brush, or it may be first cleaned by vigorous scrubbing with soap solution and fiber brush and then thoroughly rinsed with clean cold water. These treatments will usually remove all dust and smoke stains. If the stucco is unusually dirty, it may be washed with a solution of muriatic acid, one part of acid to six or seven parts of water brushed on with a fiber broom, after which it should be thoroughly rinsed with cold water to remove all traces of acid. For white cement stucco it is better to use a sulphuric-acid solution, as the muriatic acid has a tendency to produce a yellowish tinge on white cement.

Q. What is your advice as to the best material to put on the outside of a brick wall that has become porous?
D. F.

A. A satisfactory way to refinish your brick wall is to have it gone over and all the joints pointed up with a cement mortar of one part portland cement and three parts sand mixed with just enough water to permit to be worked into the joints. Then paint the brick with a portland cement paint, which you can get from your local paint dealer, and use as directed by the manufacturers.

Q. Is it better to build the garage attached to the house or separate?
B. R.

A. If it can be located where it does not obstruct necessary light and air, it is better to build it as a part of the house. Separate garages cut up the yard and make it difficult to develop any scheme of yard layout. An attached garage is more convenient and often improves the architectural appearance of the house. Placing the garage at the back of the lot is merely a habit inherited from the days of horses and carriages.

SUBURBAN PROPERTY FOR SALE—Webster Groves

Warm and cozy in winter—ask Grandma what she thinks of a *TRIPLE-INSULATED HOUSE

* TRIPLE INSULATION MEANS a house that has been "insulated" or protected against fire, weather and wear with these 3 J-M materials:

1—Asbestos Shingles on the roof and Asbestos Siding‡ provide a fireproof, permanent shell.

2—Rock Wool Home Insulation in walls and attic protects against winter cold and summer heat, gives added protection against fire.

3—J-M Steeltex Plaster Base retards the spread of inside fires, reduces plaster-upkeep expense.

VISIT WEBSTER GROVES' TRIPLE INSULATED HOUSE!

Brick Colonial; living and dining room; the last word in a modern kitchen, breakfast room, lavatory on first floor, 4 bedrooms, 2 baths on second floor; rathskeller; 2-car garage in basement; gas heated; two blocks to junior and senior high school, also Holy Redeemer School, street car and bus. Open daily and Sunday.

LOOK FOR THIS SEAL It identifies every Triple-Insulated House

You'll be living in your new house a long time...make sure it's everything you want!

THE BEST WAY to safeguard your investment in a new home would be to live in it a year or so before making up your mind. You can't do that, but you can insist on the very latest and most up-to-date house—a Triple-Insulated House—that is, a house "insulated" or protected against fire, weather and wear.

The builder who uses Johns-Manville materials to give you that kind of house can promise you, in advance, a house comfortable winter and summer; a house that's easy and economical to heat, inexpensive to keep up; a house in which the fire hazard is reduced to a minimum. FREE BOOK tells the whole story; mail coupon.

STUDY HOW JOHNS-MANVILLE MATERIALS WILL TRIPLE INSULATE YOUR HOUSE

J-M ASBESTOS ROOF SHINGLES. Cannot burn, rot, split, wear out. Unharmed by ice or snow. No heavy repair bills.

J-M ASBESTOS SIDING‡. Looks like weathered wood — but fireproof; will not rot, split, or wear out.

J-M STEELTEX. Insures true reinforced plaster, adds strength, minimizes cracking. Retards interior fires.

J-M HOME INSULATION. Ful-Thik Rock Wool batts keep rooms up to 15° cooler in summer; cut fuel bills up to 30%—won't burn.

‡As an alternate for J-M Asbestos Siding, brick or stucco reinforced with J-M Steeltex insures permanent and firesafe exteriors.

IT'S A BRILLIANT IDEA

One of the new salesmen had seen the situation through new eyes and had told the house what to do to make the grade. Minor changes in production or selling plans often put a firm or product in the forefront. Men who can see and make good in selling positions are watching the Post-Dispatch for bigger and better opportunities. Post-Dispatch Help Wanted Columns bring the Help needed—quickly!

R. G. Riefling says:

A worn-out car spells plenty of grief for the driver. You can drive a better car home today without any cash down if your car will make the down payment on the car you select. Right now is bargain time. Act quick.

IN MEMORIAM

BERNHARDT, CLEMENCE FREDERICK—Departed this life Nov. 17, 1936:
Although you've gone one year today,
We still love you in the same sweet way;
But we know that God knew what was best
When He took you to your eternal rest.
Sadly missed by
WIFE, CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN AND ALL WHO LOVED HIM.

BOVERSMITH, ANNA E.—In loving memory of our dear mother, who passed away Nov. 19, 1934.
The depth of our sorrow we cannot tell,
In the loss of the dear one we loved so well.
Sadly missed by
CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN.

BUCHHOLZ, ANNA—In loving memory of our dear mother, who passed away Nov. 22, 1935.
My lips cannot tell how I miss her,
My heart cannot tell what to say;
God alone knows how I miss her,
In a home that is lonesome today.

The depths of sorrow we cannot tell,
Of the loss of one we loved so well.
And while she sleeps a peaceful sleep
Her memory we shall always keep.
Sadly missed by
CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN.

BURNER, EMMA (nee Lanfersieck) — In loving memory of our mother, departed this life Nov. 22, 1933.
CHILDREN.

GASTORF, HELEN (nee Carlsou)—In loving memory of our dear mother, who departed this life 12 years ago, Nov. 20, 1925. Sadly missed by CHILDREN.

GORTLAND, JOSEPH L.—Departed this life three years ago, Nov. 20, 1934.
No one knows the silent heartache;
Only those who have lost can tell
Of the grief that is borne in silence
For the one I loved so well.
Sadly missed by WIFE, and all who loved him.

LYNCH, JOSEPH F.—In loving memory of my devoted husband, who departed this life five years ago today, 1932.
Sadly missed by wife, ROSE.

MUELLER, LINA—In loving memory of our dear mother and wife, who passed away Nov. 23, 1935.
Gone, dear mother, gone forever.
How we miss your smiling face:
But you left us to remember
None on earth can take your place.
A happy home we once enjoyed;
How sweet the memory still;
But death has left a loneliness,
The world can never fill.
GOLDIE.

IN MEMORIAM

HEROLD, OTTO—In loving memory, who passed away Nov. 20, 1930.
His memory is as dear today
As in the hour he passed away.
Sadly missed by wife and son,
EDNA L. HEROLD AND ROY.

MARSH, JOHN H.—In loving memory of our dear father, who departed this life 16 years ago, Nov. 27, 1921.
Years may go, but memories stay.
Sadly missed by CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN.

MURPHY, MARY JANE—In loving memory of our darling baby's birthday, who departed this life Nov. 12, 1934.
Sadly missed by her loved ones.

NELSON, JAMES W.—In loving memory of my dear husband, who departed this life Nov. 20, 1927.
MARGARET NELSON.

NIBBERICH, MARGARET—In memory of our mother.
JOSEPH BERNARD AND ROBERT NIBBERICH.

SEIBERT, HENRY SR.—In loving memory of our darling baby's birthday, who departed from us Nov. 22, 1935.
MRS. CHRISTINA SEIBERT AND CHILDREN.

SIPPEL, WILLIAM F.—In loving memory of our beloved husband and father, who passed out of this life Nov. 24, 1934.
The flowers we placed upon your grave,
May wither and decay, but love for you
Who sleeps beneath, will never fade away.
WIFE AND FAMILY.

SPENGEMANN, WALTER E.—In loving memory of my beloved husband, who departed this life 7 years ago, Nov. 23, 1930. My memory is as dear today as in the hour he passed away.
Sadly missed by his wife,
BERTHA SPENGEMANN.

CARD OF THANKS

I WISH to express my appreciation of the kindness and sympathy shown us by our neighbors and friends during our sad bereavement in the loss of my beloved wife, Maude E. Jud. I wish to especially thank Rev. Theo. Braun for his service, the pallbearers for their kind attention and all others who so heartily assisted us during our bereavement.
JOHN G. JUD.

SINCEREST thanks to relatives and friends for sympathy shown in the loss of my beloved husband, Herman Mittendorf, for the beautiful floral offerings, to Rev. Overbeck, to Mrs. Weada, the Masonic orders, Woodworking Craftsmen of America and Carpenters' Union, Local No. 185, and Muellen Bros. for their courteous service.
MRS. BERTHA MITTENDORF.

THE wife and family of Jack O'Connor wish to extend their sincere thanks to their relatives and friends during their sad bereavement, also for the beautiful floral offerings, the prayers of the Fathers of the Blessed Sacrament Church, his loyal doctors and hospital attendants and Donnelly Undertaking Co.

"Finest Coals Since 1917"
Greatest Parade of Sensationally Low Ash Coals in St. Louis or County
Would you like easier and more comfortable heat? Are you tired of carrying out ashes? We have the answer. Try any one of our 4 leading fuels from Indiana Block up.
"Price Is No Substitute for Quality"
Sub-Anthracite Coal, $9.25
Hardracite Appalachian Bituminous $7.20 up
Virtually NO ash, or dirt. Fastest heat. The Aristocrat of American-Eastern coals. Hardracite will outlast any other and has often held fire for 3 days due to the hardness and purity of its seam. Why Hardracite rings like steel and at $7.20 is positively more economical than any Illinois coal around $6.00. As for ash, you might just as well say "there isn't any." Hardracite, account little smoke, vanishing ash and sensational heat is positively the finest allround satisfactory coal for city or county "The coal without a weakness."
ASIA, $4.75, $5.55, $5.85 up
Hottest from here to Appalachian Mountains. Don't shake down ashes as you would with Franklin County or Indiana Block. Simply move grate bar once and red coals will start to drop. Weekly ash removal.
Swell Ind. Block, $5.40 up
Tropical Heat Coal, $4.20 up
Inner Group 6-Inch $3.35 up
Prices C. O. D. per ton in 2-ton lots.

A CAPABLE SALESMAN
Is wanted by the Kemper-Thomas Co. of Cincinnati, O., to represent them in Southern Illinois; also a territory in Southeastern Missouri; our 53 years' experience in creating advertising services for American business has developed our copyrighted line of exclusive calendars and specialties of all types, sensationally salable and increasingly popular; the man selected must be reliable, intelligent, able to work hard and earnestly; he will receive a protected territory and every possible home office co-operation; drawing account against liberal commissions; the opening of the calendar-selling season in a few weeks makes this opportunity unusual and emphatic; yet this connection is year-around work, profitable from the beginning, with unlimited advancement possible.

RESIDENT REPRESENTATIVE.
This is an earnest endeavor to establish contact with a local salesman past 30, of worthwhile ability, to act as our representative and place on approval our extensive line of waterproofing and maintenance products, liquid and plastic roof coatings, with 10 years service guarantee, asphalt paints, caulking and glazing compounds and waterproofing chemicals. Among factories, public and private institutions, office and apartment buildings, hotels, mines and mills. We are one of the largest in this field; liberal commission advanced on trial orders; large repeat orders follow; steady customers and year-to-year income; experience in our line unnecessary; we teach and work with you. For a permanent and profitable position write P. O. Box 70, Dept. W., Long Island City, New York.

PIANIST RUBINSTEIN RETURNS TO AMERICA

Concert Star Arrives With Sausage Under His Arm, Spinach Waiting at Hotel.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Arthur Rubinstein, noted pianist, strolled down the Queen Mary's hooded gangplank the other day, carrying a sausage under his arm.

He was shortly installed in a Park avenue hotel, and there on a table in his drawing room stood a basket of fruit, with a gayly colored can of spinach in the middle.

Rubinstein carried the sausage into the United States because he likes that kind of sausage. The spinach was a gift, and this is the why of that: "I had a pupil, last summer from America," he explained. "She played well, but she didn't dig down into the keys enough, so I said to her, 'What you need is some of Popeye's spinach,' and when I arrived she sent me some spinach."

Rubinstein is reintroducing himself to America after a decade in other lands. He played the B flat Brahms concerto Thursday and yesterday with the New York Philharmonic Symphony under John Barbirolli. Tomorrow afternoon he will play the Tchaikowsky concerto with the same orchestra.

He has traveled more than a million miles giving concerts, although he is not yet 50 years old. Last season, up to last spring, he was giving concerts in Europe. He had given 192 of them in every European country but Germany. Before April 17 he had made another brief tour of Italy, and had played the length of North Africa. After a Paris concert on April 17 he took ship with his wife and two children for South America. There he played almost everywhere, flying the Andes four times. He returned to his Paris home (a former cobbler's shop atop Montmartre) for a day or so, and took a place once more, this time for Australia. He played in Australia until October; arrived early this month in Paris, and now is doing a transcontinental tour of the United States and Canada which will close late in February. After that he will go to the Orient.

Rubinstein says he works so hard for the kick of it.

"That's why artists sometimes keep going too long," he says. "You see actresses marry money, for example, and then see them steering back to the stage, not because they need money, but because they need applause. It's a drug."

Disconcertingly frank, Rubinstein confesses, that he is "99 per cent interested in women, and only 1 per cent in men."

One of the things out of his past which still makes him chuckle is his experience with Queen Victoria's piano. He played the piano for the present Duke of Windsor. Unfortunately he forgot the instrument was a museum piece—it literally fell to pieces under his hands. The Duke was affability itself, but each time he has seen Rubinstein since he has asked, "When did you last break a piano?"

PITTMAN WANTS BOUNTY PRICE KEPT ON U. S.-MINED SILVER

Nevada Senator Hopeful President Roosevelt Will Extend It Through 1939.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20. — A leader of the Senate silver bloc, Senator Pittman (Dem.), Nevada, advocated today extension of the bounty price for domestically mined silver to June 30, 1939.

Unless extended by presidential proclamation the price of slightly more than 77 cents an ounce will not be paid on silver mined after Dec. 31. The 77-cent price is substantially above the world silver price.

Pittman said that he was hopeful President Roosevelt would continue the bounty price until 1939, when his authority to fix such a price will expire.

The price has created mining activity which has given employment to 400,000 persons, Pittman said.

Ill After His Fifth Wedding.

CITIES TO TAKE OVER 51 HOUSING PROJECTS

Federal Authority to Sell or Lease P W A-Built Properties.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Federal Housing Authority aids said today the agency would relinquish management of 51 P W A low rent housing projects to local housing authorities set up by municipal governments.

The projects were transferred from P W A to the new housing authority by presidential order, and under the terms of the Wagner-Steagall bill which created the housing authority, the Housing Administrator, Nathan Straus, is authorized to dispose of the projects by sale or lease. He is already negotiating to lease three P W A housing projects in Chicago to the local housing authority.

Local housing authorities are set up by city officials as a branch of municipal government in states where enabling legislation has authorized their establishment.

Straus' aids said financial details and the date for relinquishment of the projects would be worked out with each local authority. A number of unfinished low rent projects are expected to be completed within the next eight months.

Out of the 51 projects inherited from P W A, the Straus agency still has 27 in the process of construction. The remainder have been completed, and until they are relinquished by lease or sale, the properties will be managed by agents for the housing authority.

PENITENTIARY GUARDS CALLED IN INQUIRY INTO ESCAPE

Special Grand Jury to Investigate Break Made by O'Connell Kidnapers.

By the Associated Press.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 20. — Guards who were on duty at Onondaga Penitentiary Tuesday morning when three O'Connell kidnapers made their escape were subpenaed today to appear before the special grand jury which is to start an investigation of the escape on Monday.

A subpena also was served on Merrick Emery, also known as "Bullet-proof Kelly," who was mentioned in the statement made to Syracuse police by Ivan Whiteford, whose tip led to capture of two of the fugitives Wednesday afternoon. Whiteford reported at that time that the kidnapers had asked him to get in touch with Emery.

As county officials pushed their investigation in preparation for the grand jury session, Federal Bureau of Investigation agents continued their independent inquiry, questioning guards and prisoners at the penitentiary.

JURY HOLDS FIRM THAT SOLD TRUCK LIABLE FOR ACCIDENT

Driver, Also a Defendant in Damage Suit, Said Steering Gear Was Defective.

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 20. — A United States District Court jury in a verdict returned today held a St. Paul automobile company responsible for a traffic accident because it had sold the driver a defective truck.

Damages totaling $11,800 for four Woodville (Wis.) residents were assessed against the Egan Chevrolet Co and Hyman Rutman of St. Paul, whose truck collided June 3 near Baldwin, Wis., with the plaintiff's machine. Rutman said that when he purchased the truck the day before the accident it had defective steering apparatus.

SURVIVOR OF ROMA DISASTER WANTS TO REJOIN AIR SERVICE

One of 11 Saved From Dirigible Crew of 45 Is Tired of Running Rooming House.

By the Associated Press.

DAYTON, O., Nov. 20.—Fifteen years ago Charles Dworack plunged to earth from the United States dirigible Roma when hydrogen exploded. Now, 51 years old, he is attempting to obtain employment in the air service again.

Only 11 of the Roma's crew of 45 survived the explosion Feb. 21, 1922, at Norfolk, Va. Dworack's hands and face still bear scars of burns which kept him in the hospital three months and prevented his return to active service for six additional months.

He says he is dissatisfied with his present job of running a rooming house.

MRS. ROOSEVELT VISITS BOY

Memphis Infantile Paralysis Sufferer Greeted by President's Wife.

By the Associated Press.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 20.—Bobby Holland, 13-year-old infantile paralysis sufferer, today welcomed his friend, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, to the crippled children's hospital. She gave him a box of candy and a book, then examined his scrapbook crammed with pictures of the President and letters from her.

Mrs. Roosevelt has known Bobby five years. She became interested in his case and sent the boy to the Warm Springs Foundation for treatment. Mrs. Roosevelt visited briefly other wards in the hospital, then made a two-hour inspection trip to the Shelby County penal farm, the Memphis Fairgrounds, where Christmas parade floats are being built, a school for Negroes, and P W A slum clearance projects.

SIX MISSOURI PAROLES UNDER NEW SYSTEM

Gov. Stark Approves Release of Convicts on Board's Recommendation.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 20.—Six convicts at the Missouri Penitentiary were ordered released last night under the State's new probation and parole system.

On recommendation of the recently created Parole Board, Gov. Stark approved the prisoners' release. These recommendations of the board were the first acted on by the executive.

The board, headed by Lieutenant-Governor Frank G. Harris, advised the Governor, after an investigation, that it was the board's opinion the men had been sufficiently punished and were ready to be returned to society.

Under the old system which was replaced Sept. 6, the paroles were recommended by the State Penal Board, after a hearing conducted by the Parole Commissioner. This latter job was abandoned and the duties were transferred by the last Legislature to the Probation and Parole Commission.

Through its executive director, Robert C. Edson of St. Joseph, the board announced recently it did not plan to recommend the "wholesale release" of convicts and that "menaces to society" would remain in prison, but added, "it's plain horse sense that since 98 per cent of the convicts eventually will be released, there would be no criticism to paroling them under proper supervision."

Gov. Stark has not been a paroling Governor. Except to release those who have completed their time under the seven-twelfths rule and an additional 15 who have been ill, the Governor, until yesterday, had paroled only three convicts since he took office Jan. 11.

As acting Governor during Stark's absence from the state in the last year, Harris paroled nine and granted seven sick paroles and a full pardon.

Since assuming his new duties as Parole Board chairman, Harris said he did not intend to pass on paroles in the future while acting as Governor.

Those paroled yesterday: Frederick Tyree, Greene County, two years, crime against nature; Charles Hoagland, Jasper County, five years, grand larceny; James Carrico, Newton County, 11 years, burglary and larceny and jail breaking; Curtis Mitchell, Lincoln County, two years, stealing chickens; Clarence La Rose, St. Francois County, two years, operating a motor vehicle when intoxicated, and Samuel D. Ham, Mercer County, two years, receiving stolen property.

OKLAHOMA SENATOR WANTS U. S. LIQUOR LAW AMENDED

Josh Lee Proposes to Require Prosecution of Persons Taking Alcohol Into Dry State.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Senator Josh Lee of Oklahoma asked the Justice Department today to draft amendments to the liquor laws to require Government prosecution of persons transporting or importing intoxicating liquors into a dry state.

Lee said the department had asked Whit Mauzy, United States Attorney at Tulsa, not to prosecute persons for importing liquor into Oklahoma, which is constitutionally dry.

Mauzy informed him, Lee said, the Treasury Department had ruled a state which did not have a permit system prohibiting liquor importation was not entitled to Federal protection. The Department of Justice concurred.

"While Oklahoma does bar all importation, it does not have a permit system," Lee told Attorney-General Cummings.

Curtis said she "apparently has a pretty good chance to live." Another baby, Jacqueline Jean Benson, weighed 12 ounces when she was born here Jan. 14, 1936. Her weight is now normal.

MILLIONAIRE SHARES HIS HOME WITH PUBLIC

Jules Bache Donates Art Collection, and 3 Floors of Mansion, to New York.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Jules Bache has retired to the upper floors of his Fifth avenue mansion, and the public has moved in below.

The flow of people is as yet small, for they are arriving by bus and afoot to see the Bache collection of art, which has been given to the State of New York, and was opened this week. And Bache is determined that people shall not crowd uncomfortably.

The reason is that the only New York millionaire who ever took the public as a joint tenant in his own house has opened his fabulously valuable collection to the public before, usually as a charity benefit. The jam was so great nobody had a fair chance to see.

Bache not only decided to live with the public; he has given the public the lion's share. There are five stories in the severely plain limestone house, and only two have been reserved for the owner.

Nor has he moved out anything in those three floors. The paintings, by Hals, Rembrandt, Goya, Titian, Velasquez, Raphael and many others, hang just where they hung while Bache was sole tenant. There are 64 in the catalogue, and since Bache believes that great art was meant to be lived with and used, his paintings were placed in the living quarters and made a part of his life routine.

Estimated at $10,000,000.

The total value is estimated at about $10,000,000, although nobody could guess within a million or two, the fluctuations of great art being what they are. But the visitor can have a fair sample without going farther than the entrance hall. On the left wall hangs Raphael's "Guiliano de Medici," for which Bache is said to have paid $600,000 in 1929.

The same room also contains such glories as Fra Filippo Lippi's "Madonna and Child;" Botticelli's "Coronation of the Virgin;" a Signorelli "Madonna and Child," and what is perhaps almost as important, the smaller art objects which went toward making the room a home and not a miniature louvre.

One (not precisely small) is a gothic Flemish tapestry something over 400 years old showing two scenes in the life of Christ. Another is a Roman krater vase dating from the third century B. C.

There also are two cabinets in which rest 39 magnificent Limoges enamels. A Madonna and child by Andrea Della Robbia hangs on the landing, and some other smaller objects of importance.

The back living-room on the second floor is given over to the Dutch painters—there are three Rembrands, two Van Dycks and two Hals, among others, and in addition a small collection of Italian Renaissance bronze statuettes.

The front room on the second floor is in cream, with gold trim, and as might be guessed, houses the French school in an atmosphere of Louis XVI furniture, Beauvais tapestry and some French sculpture.

Watteau's "The French Comedians" and three Fragonard are among the chief features of the room—not excepting the tapestry, which is "The Peep-Show," done in 1736 from a cartoon by Francois Boucher.

Flemish, German and English painters are similarly disposed in rooms designed to be lived in. Rugs are still in place, and lamps and furniture have not been disturbed.

It is as if the owner had stepped out to pay a call, and friends were wandering around the house awaiting his return.

SHIVA TEMPLE ANIMAL LIFE LIKE SURROUNDING AREA'S

Dr. H. E. Anthony Thinks His Expedition May Have Been "Some Centuries Too Early."

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Disclosing that animal life on Shiva Temple, an "island" in the Grand Canyon, is no different from that of surrounding areas, Dr. Harold E. Anthony said today his expedition was made "some centuries too early."

"Perhaps as time goes on and erosion gnaws away at the connecting ridge," he said in a report to the American Museum of Natural History," the present (animal) dwellers on Shiva may find it is not worthwhile to try to cross back and forth and then evolution may begin to work on this relatively small population.

"In which event our expedition will seem to have been some centuries too early, but until someone went to the top and secured the animals this could not be known."

Prior to his visit to Shiva Temple it had been thought that centuries of isolation might have produced there mammals distinctly different from those of the adjacent areas.

NEW DISPLAY AT JEWEL BOX

Late Blooming Chrysanthemums Replace Early Varieties.

About 2000 chrysanthemums of the late blooming varieties have been transferred to the Jewel Box in Forest Park to replace early-blooming plants. The new exhibit, which includes rich bronzes, purples and other dark colors, will be open from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. daily.

There will be a band concert at the Jewel Box from 2:30 to 5 o'clock this afternoon.

ST. LOUIS TO FIGHT PROPOSED BRIDGE APPROACH VALUATION

Hearing to Be Held by St. Clair County Board of Review on $360,000 Assessment Plan.

A hearing on the tentative assessed valuation of $360,000, placed on the north approach of the Municipal Bridge, will be held at 9:30 a. m. Tuesday in East St. Louis before the St. Clair County Board of Review.

Assessments on the approach for the last four years were omitted in litigation between St. Louis and the board, which fixed the assessment on the other portions of the bridge in St. Clair County.

The approach was built in connection with the proposed bridge exchange, and the plans of the Terminal Railroad to construct a new passenger station in East St. Louis. The approach is not complete and never has been used.

Emmett Costello of East St. Louis, attorney for St. Louis in the litigation, said he would oppose the $360,000 valuation as too high. As the tax rate exceeds $5 on $100 valuation, the assessment would mean not less than $18,000 a year in taxes, in addition to the tax averaging $83,000 paid on a $1,500,000 valuation annually during the last four years, for other East Side approaches to the bridge. This would make the total tax exceed $100,000.

SENATE COMMITTEE DISCUSSES SOCIAL SECURITY CHANGES

Elimination of Huge Reserve Fund Is Principal Revision Considered.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—A special Senate committee discussed informally today possible changes in the Social Security Act to eliminate provisions for building up huge reserves.

Senators Byrd (Dem.), Virginia, Vandenberg (Rep.), Michigan, and Harrison (Dem.), Mississippi, met with representatives of the social security advisory council to talk over the possibilities of puttting social security more nearly on a cash basis—with income from security taxes going only for the payment of benefits.

Under the present law, the tax collections flow into the treasury's general funds and are spent for ordinary government purposes.

TELEGRAPHERS' UNION FIGHT

N L R B Order for Postal Election to Be Taken to Supreme Court.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20. — Patrick Taft, attorney, said today the Commercial Telegrapher's Union would appeal to the Supreme Court for an injunction against the National Labor Relations Board's order for a collective bargaining election among Postal Telegraph Co. employes.

The District of Columbia Circuit Court of Appeals refused to stay the board's order, which authorized the Committee for Industrial Organization to file a petition for the election. The Commercial Telegrapher's Union said it had not been given notice in advance of the order.

COUNTY CLERKS' PRESIDENT

G. A. Berry of Miller Elected by Association at Jefferson City.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 20.—G. A. Berry of Miller County was elected president of the Missouri County Clerks' Association at the closing session of the group's thirty-first annual convention today.

Other officers named were: First vice-president, H. D. Allison of Buchanan County; second vice-president, J. E. Poole of Memphis County; third vice-president, George E. Napes of Grundy County; treasurer, W. J. Olenhouse of Livingston County, and secretary, Lloyd A. Dankers of Holt County. Olenhouse and Dankers were re-elected.

MICHIGAN U. SCIENTIST FINDS NEW RADIO WAVE

So Minutely Spaced It Must Be Measured in Millimeters, Prof. Williams Says.

By the Associated Press.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Nov. 20. — Prof. Neil H. Williams, a University of Michigan physicist, has produced radio waves so small they are measured in millimeters. They can be used in communication over short distances without interception and with little, if any, loss by absorption, he says, adding that they travel in virtually a straight line and can be guided in any direction.

The so-called "midget waves" were produced experimentally to substantiate a theory that ammonia gas would absorb ultra-short waves.

Their practical application, especially in the transmission of naval intelligence in war time, would be invaluable, he suggested in an interview recently.

"Ultra short wave messages would not reach distant enemy vessels," he explained, "and submarines with antennas lower than a ship's transmitter would be unable to intercept them at close range."

C. E. Cleeton, a former graduate student, built the tubes used to produce the short wave radiation. He employed the principle of the magnetron, a two-electrode tube which operates within a magnetic field. The frequency band which the waves represent is so broad that many channels are possible in a narrow range of wave lengths. Speech and music have been transmitted successfully, but such tests have been made only in the laboratory.

Prof. Williams' primary interest in ultra-short waves, however, is their relation to molecular structure. "In practical application," he said, "these waves, as a directed beam, may solve the problem of seeing through fog and ultimately may be adapted to television."

PROFESSOR SAYS LAWYERS DON'T TEACH DEMOCRACY

John M. Brewer of Harvard Thinks Schools Must Guide Next Generation.

By the Associated Press.

SALISBURY, Md., Nov. 20.—Prof. John M. Brewer of the Harvard University Graduate School of Education told Southeastern Maryland Teachers today that schools must guide the next generation in the use of procedures and tools of democracy.

He contended "America cannot rely" on the legal profession to teach and preserve democracy."

"No other profession than the legal has as much control over its own affairs," he said, and pointed to "the paucity of results as shown in the law's delays, criminal lawyers in partnership with crime and the needless complexities of the written laws."

He termed parliamentary law "an indispensable tool" of democracy and said lawyers "are not often conversant" with it.

"The law is practiced through the method of controversy, while democracy is founded on directness and must be practiced with frankness, co-operation and compromise," he said.

Oklahoma Steel Plant Walkout.

By the Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Nov. 20.—Operations at the Cap'tol Steel & Iron Co. here were shut down today when 100 employes walked out in protest to the dismissal of two union workers last spring. Lee Bruton, international representative of the Iron Workers' Union, charged the workers were dismissed because of union activity.

16TH ANNUAL COUNCIL ON SOCIAL STUDIES

Will Meet Friday and Saturday — Dean Schwitalla and Dean Irion to Speak.

The sixteenth annual meeting of the National Council for the Social Studies will be held next Friday and Saturday at Hotel Jefferson.

The Rev. Alphonse Schwitalla, S. J., dean of the St. Louis University School of Medicine, will discuss "Social Trends and Educational Problems" at the morning session when Dean Theophil W. H. Irion of the University of Missouri School of Education also will speak on "Social Studies from the Viewpoint of the Learner."

Speakers who are to take part in informal luncheon discussions include Daniel C. Knowlton, New York University; Howard E. Wilson and Wilbur F. Murra, Harvard Graduate School of Education; William W. Biddle, State Teachers' college, Milwaukee; Artur H. Moehlman, University School, Ohio State University, and Howard H. Anderson, Cornell University.

Elmer Ellis of the Universtiy of Missouri history department, president of the National Council for the Social Studies, and A. C. Krey of the University of Minnesota will be dinner speakers Friday evening after which research in the social studies will be discussed by C. C. Barnes of the Detroit Public Schools, Ernest Horn of the University of Iowa, Rolla M. Tryon of the University of Chicago and Edgar B. Wesley of the University of Minnesota.

Section meetings Saturday are to be addressed by Paul Hanna, Leland Stanford University; Edwin W. Pahlow, Ohio State University and Arthur C. Bining, University of Pennsylvania.

POPE UPHOLDS ARCHBISHOP'S REBUKE TO FATHER COUGHLIN

Apostolic Delegate Declares Action of Prelate Was "Just and Timely."

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Archbishop A. G. Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate to Washington from the Vatican, said today he had been instructed by the Pope to state that "corrections made by the Archbishop of Detroit to the remarks of Father Charles E. Coughlin published on Oct. 5, were just and timely."

The Archbishop said the Vatican had authorized him to make the statement in answer to messages received "from individuals and groups interested in the activities of Father Coughlin."

The Apostolic Delegate said the Vatican referred to a remark of Father Coughlin accusing President Roosevelt of "personal stupidity" in appointing Hugo L. Black to the Supreme Court.

Father Coughlin canceled his radio broadcasts after Archbishop Edward Mooney had "corrected" him. Claims were made by some of the radio priest's followers that he had been "ordered off the air" by the Archbishop. Archbishop Mooney denied this, asserting the Priest's decision was his own.

N L R B BEGINS INVESTIGATION INTO INTER-UNION FIGHT

CIO-A. F. of L. Dispute at Portland, Ore., Has Closed Seven Lumber Mills.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—The National Labor Relations Board placed Charles W. Hope of Seattle in charge of an investigation of an inter-union dispute which recently forced a shutdown of seven large lumber mills at Portland, Ore.

Hope, regional director for the N L R B, received his assignment 24 hours after the board dispatched E. J. Eagen, its regional counsel, to Portland, where members of the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization were at loggerheads.

Together, the board said, Hope and Eagen would attempt to reconcile the unions and determine which should be designated bargaining agency for the lumber workers.

ROOSEVELT HONORARY HEAD OF THREE-SECT COMMITTEE

Purpose Is to Organize Round-Table Talks by Catholics, Jews and Protestants.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20. — The National Conference of Jews and Christians announced today President Roosevelt had accepted the honorary chairmanship of a national committee to organize round-table talks among Catholics, Jews and Protestants.

The conferences, to be held in each community during a three-month period beginning Nov. 22, are intended to promote "amity and understanding" among the various religious groups.

MGR. TIMOTHY DEMPSEY FUND DRIVE NEXT MONTH

Samuel W. Fordyce Chairman of Group Soliciting Money for Charities.

The fifth annual campaign for funds for support of the various charities of the late Mgr. Timothy Dempsey will be conducted through December. Samuel W. Fordyce, attorney, will be in charge as chairman.

Father Dempsey's charitable organizations, the first of which was established in 1906, include a day nursery, a home for women, a convalescent home, a home for men, a lunchroom for unemployed, and the White Cross Crusade, which aids undernourished children and engages in tuberculosis prevention work.

The charities also distribute an average of 400 baskets of food each week to needy families, and supply coal, clothing and other necessaries. The Rev. James P. Johnston has been in charge of the organizations since Father Dempsey's death in 1936.

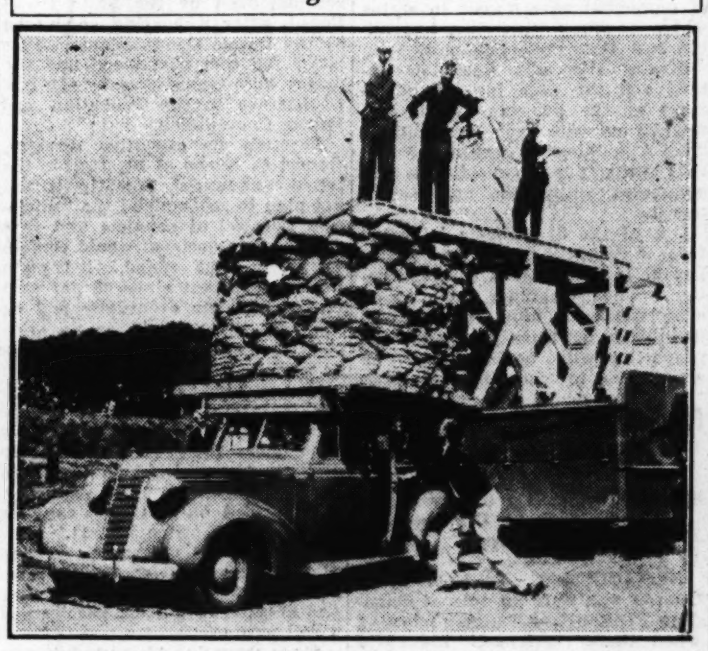
Stands Weight of Ten Tons



Twenty thousand pounds of sand, in 50-pound bags, on the top of a Studebaker closed car, whose body and frame withstand the weight so that it still is possible to open and close the doors. It was not until 24,750 pounds of sand had been piled on the roof that the car's rear end finally gave way.

Auto Firm, Airplane Line Co-operate in Plan for Car Buyers

Under an arrangement between the Oliver Cadillac Co. and Chicago and Southern Air Lines, buyers of new Cadillac and La Salle cars may fly to Detroit and take delivery of their cars with no extra cost for the trip. The plan, as worked out by E. C. Beaumer, sales manager for the auto firm, and J. W. Letzkus, district traffic manager for the airplane company, is said to enable motorists to make enough of a saving virtually to cover the expense of driving home from Detroit.

The Oliver Cadillac Co. offers the new car owner a one-way ticket, good for transportation on any one of Chicago & Southern Air Lines' three daily northbound flights which he may wish to use.

Upon arrival in Detroit the prospective purchaser may even see his new auto being assembled and inspected before delivery.

The co-operative plan is made possible by the saving of freight charges between Detroit and St. Louis.

Two-Toned Upholstery in Hudson 6's and 8's

The two-toned upholstery treatment in the new Hudson sixes and eights is highlighted by restrained use of satin-finish chromium, the modernistic simplicity observed in the decoration of smart home interiors.

The two-toned upholstery effect, carried out in the seats and at the top of the seat backs in a rich, flat, wool fabric, and further executed in assist cords, interior trim and in the harmonizing tone of the floor rug, is decidedly modish. Satin-finish chromium outlines the comfortable arm rests and the entire front seat, giving the impression of a picture of fabric in a silver frame. Interior hardware is also of satin-finish, with colored knobs harmonizing with the general color scheme.

The seats are smartly tailored with panels of narrow pleating. For greater driving comfort, the front seat is built like a divan, with the top rolling over softly into the supporting back framework. Arm rests, cushioned with sponge rubber, add to the comfort of the front seat.

Ash receivers and a cigar lighter placed in convenient locations contribute a final touch of convenience and thoughtfulness in appointment.

Hydraulic Action For Dodge Stop Lights

The brake system of the new Dodge cars is not the only operating detail functioning on the principle of hydraulics. The same pedal motion and the same hydraulic pressure which actuate the four-wheel brakes work the electric stop-light switch.

Just as the Dodge hydraulic brakes eliminate levers, clevis pins and rods, the hydraulic stop-light switch opens and closes its electric circuit without the intervention of springs, cables or other linkage likely to become disarranged in long continued service.

While the shock absorbers of the Dodge are also hydraulic, they are self-contained, automatic and independent of the hydraulic system operating the brakes and stop lights.

High Hill Man Wins Third Prize in Shell Nation-Wide Contest

District winners in a country-wide contest held by the Shell Petroleum Corporation, in which contestants had to unscramble and arrange a jumbled sales story and, in addition, make suggestions for better housekeeping and merchandising, were awarded recently by C. W. Manville, central division manager.

Some of the Shell dealers to whom the awards were made by Manville were Joseph Goodman, Paul Faust, Paul Johnson, Leo Waters, O. E. Brigham, Miro Brda and Robert Dunn. Waters, who lives at High Hill, Mo., won the third prize among all the contestants in this country.

New Type Insulation Makes De Soto Quieter

"Blindfold" tests, conducted in a sound-proofed room, proved the effectiveness of a newly-developed spray-on type of insulation used on the door and rear deck panels of the De Soto.

De Soto engineers hung two doors of exactly the same construction from the ceiling of the room—side by side. One was treated with ordinary sound-proofing material. The other was deadened with a new asphalt spray. L. M. Ball, De Soto insulation engineer, struck first one door and then the other with a heavy hammer. Blindfolded spectators were asked to point to the "deadest" door.

Tabulated results show that every person questioned pointed to the door treated with the new insulant as the least resonant of the two.

Further tests, made with an extremely sensitive cathode ray machine, revealed that the insulant was at least 15 per cent more effective than the specially treated padding used before and almost three times as efficient as spray-on materials developed heretofore.

As a result of these experiments, the new material was not only adopted for the doors but was also made standard for De Soto's rear deck lids, to make them even quieter than before.

Oldsmobiles Have Special Insulation

Oldsmobile's turret-top body by Fisher is so designed that it provides a very high degree of silence and protection from heat and cold. The use of a specific type of insulating material for each particular requirement results in a car body that is completely free from objectionable noise and provides maximum protection against temperature extremes.

The seamless steel top panel has a soft pad cemented to the under side to prevent drumming and conduction of heat or cold. The back, side and door panels have special mats cemented to them on the inside. Those mats are stamped with waffle-shaped impressions, which form dead-air spaces between the mats and the metal, providing further protection against heat and cold. The dash and cowl also are insulated with a thick mat.

The new racing cars of the Soviet Union are said to have a top speed of 130 kilometers per hour.

Automobile Show Open Today From 11 A. M. Until Late Tonight

Numerous Special Factory Exhibits in Addition to Displays of the 1938 Cars, Trucks, Accessories and Motor Boats —Free Parking on 40 Acres of Surfaced Space at Arena.

Today will be the last of the Auto Show in the Arena. The doors will be open from 11 o'clock this morning until 11 o'clock tonight, with the same provision of free parking on 40 acres of all-weather surfaced space that has obtained throughout the past week.

In addition to the displays of the 1938 cars, trucks, accessories, equipment, motor boats and some trailers, the show has the most elaborate special exhibits by the automobile factories seen in a St. Louis exposition of the kind.

The cost of the 17 special exhibits ranges from $6000 to $32,000, totaling around $250,000, Joseph A. Schlecht, manager of the show, said last night.

Buick's special display consists of a revolving chassis, in which the new rear end coil springing is a feature.

Chevrolet's factory exhibit, in the form of a large covered circle in chromium and blue with radiating arms, includes a revolving chassis on a turntable, knee action front springing, hydraulic brakes, a cut-away engine showing the oiling system and the new "tiptoe-matic" clutch.

In the Chrysler section, a cream-colored car is mounted no a turntable within a large cut-away crown decorated in purple and gold.

One whole side of a De Soto sedan, from rear bumper to front end, drops down at intervals to show the body construction, frame, springing, engine and other construction details.

Other Displays.

In the Dodge space, is a stripped chassis and a lecturer who explains every part of the mechanism of the car.

The Ford V-8 display includes an engine and transmission in operation, one of the new de luxe four-door sedans on a turntable and an exhibit of the brake mechanism, which spectators may work by pressing the pedal.

Graham has one of its distinctively styled cars, on a turntable and a supercharger engine mounted on a pedestal so that details of its operation may be studied.

Hudson displays engines and transmissions, the working of its three-years tested selective automatic shift and a car body from which one side has been sliced.

Among the exhibits of chassis is one of the La Salle with the new Cadillac-La Salle "syncromatic" shifting transmission.

Oldsmobile's display includes its knee action front springing, its engine with the automattic shifting transmission, a cutaway engine and a whirling wheel with hydraulic brake which may be stopped by pressing on a foot pedal.

Around the Show.

Packard shows a revolving chassis, its "Safe-T-flex" front end springing and its new rear end suspension.

In addition to a stripped chassis, Plymouth shows an aero-type hydraulic shock absorber made of glass so that its operation may be understood.

A Pontiac chassis display includes the front end, cowl and windshield.

Studebaker has a cream-colored President convertible model on a turntable.

In the Willys space, is a map and exhibit covering the Willys run of 3142 miles from New York to San Francisco with a gasoline consumption of only 105.1 gallons of gasoline.

In the motor boat section of the show, the Schneider Sales and Service Co. has an elaborate display of Chris Craft boats, Evinrude and Elto engines and other products.

The Shell Petroleum Corporation is featuring Norman Bel Geddes' diorama of the city of 1960 which was drawn to show what could be done in city layout and construction to provide for freely flowing traffic.

The Phillips Petroleum Co. shows the car which Ctp. Roy A. Good, a former army test engineer, has been driving 20,000 miles without a radiator and with holes bored in the water jacket, to prove the engine protection given by Phillips 66 motor oil.

Among the visiting factory officers were M. E. Coyle, president of Chevrolet, who arrived last night to attend the show and to speak tonight at the General Motors free concert in the Municipal Auditorium; Harry Moock, vice-president of the Plymouth division of the Chrysler Corporation; C. P. Simpson, general sales manager, and V. L. Murray, assistant general sales manager, of Pontiac, and R. M. Rowland, assistant general sales manager for De Soto.

Safety Type Tire Tube Designed to Prevent Failures From Pinching

A new U. S. Royal Master safety tube, with a laminated three-ply base which is said to overcome tube failures due to pinching, abrasion, rust and corrosion, is announced by U. S. Tire Dealers Mutual Corporation.

The new laminated construction gives extra protection at rim side, extending over that part of the tube which comes into contact with the steel rim, and on up the walls beyond the toes of the beads. Additional safety is provided through use of heavy gauge heat-resisting stock which withstands extreme tire heat and high brake drum temperatures.

The new U. S. Royal Master tube features an entire new line of U. S. safety tubes. Prominent in the line are the new U. S. Royal and U. S. Peerless tubes. The U. S. Royal is an all-black, high carbon, heat-resistant tube.

The new U. S. Peerless tube, new in construction, material and appearance, has a laminated two-ply base to protect against rim side wear. It has vented construction to prevent trapped air blowouts, and a molded rubber valve stem.

A new U. S. Guard tube completes the line.

Supplementary Schools For Chevrolet Service Men Held This Week

Special supplementary training schools will be held this week for nearly 10,000 Chevrolet dealerships in all parts of the United States, it is announced by C. W. Wood, manager of the Chevrolet service and mechanical department.

The schools are designed to supplement the training received by dealers' service and mechanical managers in the new product schools held for several weeks before the announcement of the new Chevrolet models for 1938.

Every dealer's service men will be schooled to give full and complete service on the 1938 cars at the conclusion of the training week, Wood said.

Special Cylinder Hone Developed by Hupmobile

An exclusive process designed to put thousands of miles of additional service in new Hupmobile motors has been developed by [illegible] Motor Car Corporation.

During the cylinder-honing process, a dummy "anti-distortion" head is fitted to the motor block. Exerting a pressure identical with the cylinder head of a running engine, the dummy head is said to eliminate virtually all warping, permitting tolerances of less than one ten thousandth of an inch.

Boosters' Club Party And Dinner Dance Dec. 16

The twelfth annual Boosters' Club party and dinner dance will be held Thursday night, Dec. 16, at the Coronado Hotel.

Mary Lee Smidt Is Presented At Silver Ball

Jane Sandford Scudder Makes Debut in Same Setting at Dinner Dance at St. Louis Country Club—Hosts for Parties Cousins.

A GLITTERING candle-lit silver ball was given at the St. Louis Country Club Friday night by Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Cupples Scudder to present to society their niece, Miss Mary Lee Smidt. Last night, in the same setting, but with a change in table decorations, Miss Jane Sandford Scudder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Anderson Scudder, made her debut. The hosts are cousins.

At Friday night's party the pale yellow light from many tapers gleamed against 1000 yards of silver fabric which lined walls, ceilings, doorways and windows of the entire club except in the lounge where the receiving party stood, and where cocktails were served before dinner. Giant candles four, six and eight feet tall, lighted by flame-shaped electric bulbs, stood in groups of three near glistening walls and doorways of all three dining rooms. Smaller tapers two feet tall gleamed in a semi-circle about the orchestra which played from a silver-covered platform, and hundreds of tall, cream-colored table candles were thrust into many branched silver candelabra as the sole decoration on dinner tables set for 300 guests. An arch of light was sprung over the silver-covered mantel back of the orchestra, and ceiling illumination was diffused upward by hexagonal mirror shades hung with silver leaves.

The receiving line, Mr. and Mrs. Scudder and the guest of honor, stood in a floral bower against the white grilled glass doors of the card room, facing the long, gleaming, candle-lit dining rooms. The debutante's gown, harmonizing with the setting, was filmy white tulle over satin, banded in silver sequins arranged horizontally from the low bodice top to the hem. In her hair she wore a chou of cream gros grain ribbon loops, and from her left shoulder a cascade of deep, almost wine-colored orchids sprayed low over her gown. During the receiving hours she carried a large old-fashioned nosegay of gardenias fringed with valley lilies. Mrs. Scudder wore cream-tinted crepe, floor length, the skirt falling full in front from a crushed silver girdle. At her shoulder she wore white orchids, the blossoms edged in purple, and at her belt a second cluster of purple orchids.

Sharing honors of the evening were Miss Smidt's two guests—Miss Janet Bromley of Philadelphia and Miss Harriet Millett of New York—former classmates of the guest of honor at Miss Porter's School, Farmington, Conn., who have arrived for a week of debutante festivities. Both were in tulle gowns, Miss Bromley's green and Miss Millett's dark blue, with which they, too, wore orchids.

Miss Smidt presided at the head of the large debutante table, set with four long wings in the main dining room. Yellow chair covers contrasted with white cloths and matched the many tiny yellow candle flames. Silver cloth was stretched across the bar on the porch back of the table and silver was paneled with blue on the back bar above. In the alcove, usually occupied by the debutantes, Mr. and Mrs. Scudder sat with more than 100 of their friends. Smaller groups were close by, and silver-topped cocktail tables occupied the smallest dining room.

Pink and white chrysanthemums, massed between silver candelabra, afforded a color note in the decorations for Miss Jane Scudder's debut last night. Two hundred guests were invited for 8:30 o'clock, and most of them arrived from Mr. and Mrs. Alfred H. Murphy's cocktail party. They were received by Miss Scudder and her parents in the flower-filled lounge, and afterward dined at tables arranged like those at Friday night's celebration.

Miss Jane wore the rhinestone-studded white marquisette gown in which she served as a maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet ball in October. Purple orchids were pinned to the shoulder of the close-fitting bodice, and over the full jewel-sprinkled skirt fell a cascade of flowers carried over her arm. A new arrangement in debutante bouquets, blossoms were white bouvardia and purple violets, heading sprays of Joanna Hill and Talisman roses.

Tables at both parties were removed for dancing after dinner, and breakfast was served early in the morning for those who remained late.

Before graduating from Miss Porter's School, Miss Smidt attended Villa Duchesne. Last year she traveled abroad with a group of subdebuntantes. Miss Jane Scudder is graduate of Mary Intsitute.

Yale Whiffenpoofs And Dramat to Play In St. Louis Dec. 21

ST. LOUIS alumni and patrons of Yale, who have had no chance to applaud the efforts of their favorite university's undergraduate musical organizations since the Glee Club sang at the old Odeon in 1929, will have double opportunity the night of Dec. 21. The Yale Dramat and the Whiffenpoofs, traveling together, de luxe, in a private car, are coming to play at the Municipal Auditorium.

The title of the show is "—And for Yale," end of a famous Yale slogan that begins, "For God, for Country—." Originally a Yale production, it was so successful that a New York producer bought it, changed its name to "Naughty Naught," and presented it to large audiences at a Broadway playhouse last year. Now it is back under university auspices, and will come here straight from New Haven. Like Princeton's Triangle Club, the Yale men have a holiday itinerary. From here they will go to Detroit, Chicago, Cincinnati, Milwaukee, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Cleveland.

A rollicking musical comedy, the show features songs by the Whiffenpoofs and a Yale-Harvard boat race in the 1900s. There are no St. Louis men in the cast, but local alumni are being divided into committees to help with arrangements by William Julius Polk Jr., impresario, and Henry Hitchcock, St. Louis alumni president. Debutantes will have a chance to meet the visitors twice, in the afternoon at Miss Sara Jane Avant's debut party at the St. Louis Woman's Club, and after the show as guests at Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Bascom's party for Miss Anne Wendling at the St. Louis Country Club.

Only 23 men comprise the cast and eight of them are Whiffenpoofs, a now famous octette which had its beginning just after the turn of the century when the original eight sang to customers at Mory's, New Haven's oldest restaurant, in return for the generosity of Proprietor Louie Linder for allowing them to run up large bills. Mory's soon became a rendezvous for undergraduates. After club and fraternity initiations students went there to hear the Whiffenpoofs sing their best known song, "We're Poor Little Sheep Who Have Lost Our Way—Bah, Bah, Bah!" Cole Porter, composer of current hits and many Yale songs, was a Whiffenpoof, as was Lanny Ross of motion pictures and radio. St. Louis members have included Arthur Hoskins, C. Drummond Jones, Edward Gillette Hotchkiss, the late Wallace D. Simmons, and his son, Ned.

The Whiffenpoofs, who still sing at Mory's, have become a club with membership still limited to eight. Mory's has grown up with the university. It is now almost 200 years old, and is a recognized eating club where students gather for luncheon before football games and on nights of notable college activities. Their songs include Mr. Porter's "Bingo, Bingo, Eli Yale," and "We're Off to New Haven," and audiences still sit at old oak tables, their tops carved into mosaics with many initials.

Yale Dramat, which exists on the interest of George Pierce Baker's million-dollar gift, gives plays in its own theater, said to be one of the best in America.

Charles E. Swingley, Dana von Schrader and George J. Jones are vice-presidents of the St. Louis Yale Club; William McRee Drew is secretary-treasurer in charge of tickets for the forthcoming production; Arthur B. Shepley heads the entertainment committee; Dickson Pierce, publicity, and David R. Francis III, transportation.

Debutante Luncheon For Esther Baker

A 1 O'CLOCK luncheon was given yesterday for Miss Esther Claire Baker, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred M. Baker Jr., at the Park Plaza by Mrs. Flavius G. Pernoud, 3615 Utah place, and Mrs. August B. Loud, Clarkson road.

Red and gold were combined in the color scheme chosen by the hostesses. On the debutante table, and the table seating Mrs. Pernoud, Mrs. Loud, Mrs. Baker and about 22 of their friends, red and gold roses formed centerpieces. Built high in the center, the flowers were fashioned into terraces at different levels, and gold-colored candles were arranged among the roses. Red and yellow mints marked with numbers served as place cards, guests matching their places from num-

Reception in Honor Of R. A. Blacks Jr.

ABOUT 125 friends of Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Black Jr., including debutantes and the young married crowd, congratulated them last night on their first wedding anniversary, at a reception given by Mr. and Mrs. Edwin McDonald Stevens, 6936 Pershing avenue, and their twin debutante daughters, Miss Bette and Miss Donne. Guests invited between the hours of 5 and 7 were received at the Stevens home before the French windows in the north end of the living room. White chrysanthemums ornamented the dining room, which was lit by ivory tapers.

Unusual Costumes Worn by Guests At Woman's Club Advertising Party

THE merits of the slogan, "It pays to advertise," were proved to the satisfaction of several hundred guests at the St. Louis Woman's Club last night. Juniors of the club, ingenious party-givers, backed the show, a masked costume ball, in which decorations, costumes and entertainment ballyhooed their husbands' businesses, their own or that of concerns which donated their own advertising.

Cardboard cutouts in the ball room, the long hall adjoining and the juniors' own room proclaimed the good points of commodities from foodstuffs and digestive aids to needles, newspapers and railroads. Advertising agency executives pointed with pride to long banners extolling the virtues of a breakfast food, tomato juice or a cigarette (if their companies controlled the advertising account). Salesmen found satisfaction in seeing their favorite cheese sampled on crackers from a heavily laden table. Public utility men dressed themselves and their wives to represent electric light bulbs, lightning and glass.

Masked guests began arriving shortly after 9 o'clock in order to be on time for the first of three floor shows, all donated by local radio stations. Small tables, decorated with horns in the shape of champagne bottles (300 of them were furnished), clappers and balloons, were set up in night club fashion about the ballroom as resting places between dances. Prizes for clever attire—case goods, mostly in liquid form donated among others by breweries and wine makers—adorned the stage, and overhead from strings criss-crossing the ceiling above the heads of the dancers hung cutout trademarks of spices,

Louise Kennard Is Married to W. W. Boyd III

Nuptials Celebrated at Church of Our Lady of Lourdes—Small Reception for Families at Home of Bride's Parents.

PALE yellow chrysanthemums and soft orange and deep bronze pompons decorated the three candle-lit altars of the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes for the wedding yesterday morning at 11:30 o'clock of Miss Louise Kennard and William Willard Boyd III. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Scruggs Kennard, 4970 Pershing avenue, and Mr. Boyd is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Boyd Jr., 4470 Westminster place. The Rev. Francis J. O'Connor officiated at the nuptial mass.

Vases of multi-toned chrysanthemums were arranged on the main altar, before which the ceremony took place, and tall standards of fall flowers rose high against the reredos. More of the blossoms adorned the side altars at either side of which stood standards of chrysanthemums.

Mr. Kennard gave his daughter in marriage. She was accompanied to the altar by Miss Augusta Walmsley, daughter of former Mayor and Mrs. T. Semmes Walmsley of New Orleans, as maid of honor, and by Miss Marjorie Chrisler, Miss Roberta Pierce and Miss Marcella Berkley as bridesmaids. Edward E. Haverstick Jr., was best man for Mr. Boyd, and John Hollingsworth Senseney, William Edwards and David Q. Wells were ushers.

The bride wore a gown of ivory toned faille taffeta fitted at the waist by gores into slim princesse lines, and held out at the hem by hoops, a revival of a quaint, old fashion note. A six-inch frill of cream-colored duchesse lace — an heirloom in her family—edged the low round neck, and clusters of orange blossoms trimmed the short puffed sleeves. The skirt, flaring from the hips into a long train, was flounced just above the hem in front with wide lace caught into scallops by small bouquets of orange blossoms. The gown was almost completely covered by two ivory tulle veils falling over the train from an orange blossom coronet. The face veil partly covered the bridal bouquet—a cascade of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Two shades of green were emphasized in the velvet gowns of the bride's attendants. The maid of honor was in apple green and the bridesmaids wore emerald. Shirring across the shoulder line achieved a softly draped bodice slashed to a deep V at the front. Vertical rows of shirring in the high puffed sleeves were repeated in crushed velvet girdles, the long ends of which were lined with rust. Fitted skirts flared into short trains. With these gowns the young women wore matching velvet wide-brimmed, high-crowned, poke bonnets, trimmed at the front with green and rust ostrich tips. Miss Walmsley carried a bouquet of gold, light bronze and white pompons and the bridesmaids' bouquets were gold rust and red daisy chrysanthemums. Mrs. Kennard wore black velvet with a small black velvet hat trimmed with a deep red flower.

After the ceremony a reception for the bridal party and the families was held at the Kennard home. The receiving line stood in the oval French drawing room before a mantel covered with chrysanthemums in autumn shades. The reception table in the dining room was centered with a wedding cake topped by lilies of the valley and white bouvardia. Four crystal cornucopias of garcia pompons and white snapdragon surrounded the floral arrangement, and crystal bowls of the flowers marked each end of the table.

The bride is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Casey Nugent and of the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel M. Kennard. She is a niece of John B. Kennard, Mrs. Luther Ely Smith, Mrs. James H. Brookmire and Mrs. Harry Brookings Wallace. After her graduation at Villa Duschesne she studied for a short time in New York. She was presented to society at a party at the St. Louis County Club several seasons ago and the following year became a member of the Junior League. Mr. Boyd is a graduate of Country Day School and Harvard University. His paternal grandparents are the late Mr. and Mrs. William Willard Boyd. On the return from the honeymoon he and his wife will live at 4396 Maryland avenue.

Supper Party for Debutantes.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo de Smet Carton of Huntleigh Village, will give a buffet supper, with dancing, at the Bridlespur Hunt Club Sunday evening, Dec. 26. The party will be given in honor of seven debutantes, Miss Dorothy Post, Miss Katharine Gratz Randolph, Miss Nancy Houser, Miss Eleanor Lee Carter, Miss Mildred Bakewell, Miss Virginia Holland and Miss Frances McPheeters.

Week-End Marked By Many Parties For Debutantes

MR. AND MRS. ALFRED H. MURPHY, 4396 Maryland avenue, entertained 70 young guests at a cocktail party last evening at their home in honor of their debutante cousin, Miss Mary Jane Primm, and the debutante daughters of Mrs. Robert A. Bagnell, 9 Clermont lane, Miss Mary Julia and Miss Anne Eugenia Sullivan.

Fall flowers decorated the Murphy home. Assisting Mr. and Mrs. Murphy were Mr. and Mrs. Bagnell and the latter's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Prenatt Green. All of the guests later attended the debut dinner dance of Miss Jane Sandford Scudder at the St. Louis Country Club.

Debutante parties will start today with a 12 o'clock breakfast, to be given at Bellerive Country Club by Mr. and Mrs. C. Earl Hulburd, 78 Vandeventer place, and their daughters, Miss Harriet and Miss Betty, in honor of Miss Sara Jane Avant. Miss Betty, who went East a few weeks ago, was not able to return in time for the party today.

Bowls of fruit will decorate the debutante table which has been set up in the west lounge. Miss Harriet and Miss Mary Alice Collins, a debutante of last season, and Miss Avant will be seated with the following of this year's girls and their escorts: Miss Susan Meston, Miss Elizabeth Hoerr, Miss Genevieve Mullins, Miss Alice Jane Meyer, Miss Dorothy Ann Mummert, Miss Augusta Connett, Miss Frances O'Reilly, Miss Katharine Randolph, Miss Frances Reyburn, Miss Anne Wendling, Miss Katharine Bernays, Miss Esther Claire Baker and Miss Dorothy Koken.

Mr. and Mrs. Forrest L. Avant, 6255 Pershing avenue, parents of the honor guest, will be seated with Mr. and Mrs. Hulburd.

A novelty pianist will entertain the guests after breakfast.

The Hulburds will entertain Miss Mullins and Miss Louise Steffens at a cocktail party at their home Saturday night, Dec. 11.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar M. Queeny of the Mason road will give a cocktail party at their home this afternoon in honor of Miss Elizabeth Hoerr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roland M. Hoerr, 18 Princeton place.

The host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Hoerr and their daughter, will informally receive guests from 5 to 7 o clock. Only debutantes and their escorts have been invited, with the exception of those who will serve—all debutantes of last year except Mrs. Brooke McBlair Payne, who made her bow in 1935. Those assisting will be: Miss Susan Thompson, Miss Miriam Wilson, Miss Effie Virginia Zeibig, Miss Grizelda Polk, Miss Anne Fisse, Miss Elaine Bonnet Meyer, Miss Miquette Magnus, Miss Florence Fleishel, Miss Virginia Fischel, Miss Frances Catlin and Mrs. Payne.

In the hallway of the Queeny home, two tall standards of white chrysanthemums, flanked by palms, will be on each side of the stairway, and a bouquet of white roses will decorate the console. White again will be used in the dining room, where snapdragon and roses will form a centerpiece for the long table, and more of the snapdragon with pompons will decorate the buffet.

An accordion player will be stationed in the English tap room of the house. Here the only decorations will be deep bronze window boxes of bright pink geraniums.

A buffet supper in honor of Miss Eunice Jackson Holderness will be given tonight at 8 o'clock by Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Clinton Sherrill at their home, 17 Southmoor.

Debutantes, who with their escorts will be guests, include: Miss Mary Julia and Miss Anne Sullivan, Miss Nancy Lee Morrill, Miss Nancy Houser, Miss Frances McPheeters, Miss Mildred Bakewell, Miss Mary Lee Smidt, Miss Georgia Wright Simmons, Miss Frances O'Neil, Miss Katharine Gratz Randolph, Miss Frances Reyburn and Miss Eleanor Lee Carter. Mr. and Mrs. Marvin E. Holderness, 17 Wydown terrace, parents of the guest of honor, will be included among the guests.

There will be piano music and songs after supper.

Another buffet supper will be given tonight by Mr. and Mrs. Alfred M. Baker Jr., Price and Ladue roads, for their daughter, Miss Esther Claire, and her house guest, Miss Machiela Armida of Mexico, D. F. About 20 debutantes and their escorts will be guests.

bered mints presented as they entered the crystal terrace. Red and gold plates completed the color motif.

Numerals on the mints were used again for choosing two surprise presents—crystal frames inclosing pictures of Miss Baker.

Seated at the debutante table were Miss Machiela Armida of Mexico, D. F., Miss Baker's house guest, Miss Sara Jane Avant, Miss Augusta Connett, Miss Dorothy Koken, Miss Alice Jane Meyer, Miss Genevieve Mullins, Miss Dorothy Ann Mummert, Miss Frances O'Reilly, Miss Anne Reinholdt, Miss Betty and Miss Donne Stevens, Miss Hester Stocker, Miss Margaret Cornwell, Miss Julia Marie Dearmont, Miss Mary Dubuque, Miss Mildred Manager, Miss Elizabeth Hoerr, Miss Angela McFadden, Miss Margaret and Miss Abigail Gross, Miss Josephine Fusz, Miss Adele Bauer, Mrs. Benjamin H. Reese of Nice, France, who is visiting her mother, Mrs. F. R. Meyer; Mrs. Robert A. Black Jr., Mrs. Albert Hanser, Mrs. A. L. Galbreath and Miss Sally Avery.

Mrs. George Frierson Jr., and Her Attendants

sausage, starch, canned milk and medicine.

A basket of a toast substitute stood at the feet of a life-sized figure of an opera star who sings on a radio program sponsored by the cracker makers. Across the way a newspaper's masthead, 15 feet long, held up quotations by famous men which told of the papers accomplishments.

The juniors did all the work. For weeks they clipped appropriate advertisements from magazines to reprint on the invitations, persuaded advertisers to give them trial packages of chewing gum, salt, grapefruit juice and staples, and finally climbed stepladders to nail up rows of kitchen cleanser, bleach and cigar signs, and in some instances original paintings by noted poster artists.

The shows were of 25-minute duration, one from 9:35 to 10 o'clock, and the other two at the corresponding time in the succeeding hours. Entertainers, in charge of a professional master of ceremonies, included tenors, dance teams, baritones, singers of Negro spirituals and a monologuist impersonating Mae West, who used the names of man guests in discussing former friends. The last program ended with music by a "hill-billy" band, after which guests unmasked and marched before the judges—two senior members—who awarded prizes. Midnight supper was served buffet style in the downstairs banquet hall.

One young matron, Mrs. Louis Dennig, in white tulle, was the ballet girl who sits on the elephant's trunk in a chewing gum parade.

Mrs. Arthur H. Feuerbacher Jr. was the bottle in which a new perfume is advertised, in the shape of a dressmaker's form. A black mask covered her face and highly dressed hair to portray the stopper; there were flowers at her neck, a tape measure down her back and a red heart at her bodice. Her husband was a laundry, his costume a cleaner's bag and his equipment boxes for finished articles through which his arms were thrust.

A gown of spun glass fabric was worn by Mrs. T. Middleton Levis, who fastened a crystal pin at her bodice and covered her hair with a curled wig of glass wool. Mr. Levis wore a butcher's costume "to remind the guests of a certain packing company."

Mrs. Jerome F. Kircher, adviser to the juniors and one of the organization's hardest workers, and Mrs. Walter La Driere were chicken feed twins, the one in red and white checked bagging material and the other in green and white, with advertising lettering printed all over them. Corsages of radishes and carrots replaced the usual flowers. Mr. Kircher's beer jacket was pasted with the trademarks of every account controlled by the agency of which he is an executive.

A likeness of a tomato can was slipped over the head of Mrs. Roy Wilcox Jordan, who wore long black silk stockings and red tomato paper mache headgear with green leaves. Mr. Jordan was rum, in white duck trousers and white sport shirt encircled by a red sash, and a wicker-encased bottle of the product slung over his shoulder.

Mrs. Frederick V. Armistead was a radiant bride, attempting to prove to the guests that she preserved her complexion by using a special brand of soap. As power, Mr. Armistead carried a five-foot electric light bulb. Electrical appliances were painted on his shirt and trousers, and lightning flashed across his back.

Mrs. Robert A. Black Jr. attended the party as a modern Dutch Girl, advertising a cleanser, in a green bodice with yellow puffed sleeves and full green skirt bordered by yellow oil cloth, with a white organdie apron trimmed in tulips. She wore silver Dutch shoes and carried a green dish mop.

Mr. Black and his brother, David, were two of the famous brothers on cough drop boxes and Mrs. Oliver M. Evans was the page boy who calls the name of a popular cigarette.

Mrs. Alfred White distributed her wares from a drum as the original factory model advertising a chewing gum.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Emerson carried insurance policies displayed on sandwich boards. Mrs. Walter Muckerman advertised beer.

Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Rolwing were opposites. She dressed as pearls, strands of which were wound around her arms and neck over a white satin evening gown, and in her hair, while her husband went as the victim of a wreck to advertise automobile insurance. His clothes were torn to tatters, adhesive tape was plastered over his face and one eye was bandaged.

Junior League to Hear Lady Drummond-Hay

LADY DRUMMOND-HAY, English journalist and airplane riding enthusiast, will come to St. Louis tomorrow to lecture under the auspices of the Junior League at its clubroom at 11 o'clock in the morning. Her topic is "My Adventure with People."

Lady Drummond-Hay has covered assignments from the Orient and the Philippines, through India, Palestine, Turkey and Egypt and for one year traveled an average of 195 miles per day in her work. There are few places on the map she has not visited. In her lecture she will tell of adventures in odd corners of the world. This is her first American lecture tour.

The annual Thanksgiving luncheon will be served at the league tea room at 12:30 o'clock Tuesday, with special decorations and entertainment. One of the largest parties will be given by Mrs. Parker H. Woods of Bellerive Acres, who will have 16 guests. Junior League members will be waitresses.

Eppenberger-Hurd Wedding This Week

THE marriage of Miss Emily Vaughan Hurd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carlos F. Hurd, 6641 Waterman avenue, and Frederick A. Eppenberger will take place at 8 o'clock Friday evening at Pilgrim Congregational Church, Union boulevard and Kensington avenue. The Rev. Dr. Truman B. Douglass will officiate.

Miss Frances Hurd will be her sister's maid of honor. The bride's other attendants will be Miss Abigail Holmes, Mrs. Allan Edward Clark and Miss Mary Reed Simpson of Eagle Pass, Tex. The bridegroom's brother, Charles F. Eppenberger, will be best man. The ushers will be Gerald E. Ulrici, Thomas C. Rostron, Allan E. Clark, Harold L. Harvey, Alan MacEwan and Clement R. Hurd, the prospective bride's brother.

After a brief honeymoon, the pair will reside in St. Louis.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Eppenberger, 6220 Northwood avenue, entertained Friday night at Hotel Chase in honor of the prospective bride and bridegroom.

Mary Institute Open House Dec. 3

MARY INSTITUTE will keep open house Friday evening, Dec. 3, for parents of students of both upper and lower school departments. The period, at which parents may meet and confer with teachers, will begin at 7:45 o'clock.

"A Galaxy of Women Writers," a play including dancing by one of the gymnasium classes, will be given by the alumnae at 8:30 o'clock for the benefit of the scholarship fund. At the conclusion of the play teachers will again be in their class rooms for another hour to meet parents.

Parents of the students have also been invited to attend the Thanksgiving College Club play "Stolen Fruit," to be given in the chapel Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

St. Louisans at Princeton Party

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 20.

ELSA MAXWELL, the party-giver, featured one of the most successful functions in Princeton University social history when she collaborated with the combined board of the Daily Princetonian and the Princeton Tiger, undergraduate publications, in staging the annual Prince-Tiger Promenade last night at the university gymnasium.

Coming on the eve of the Princeton-Navy football game this afternoon, the ball was attended by some 400 couples, who danced to the music of three different orchestras. Miss Maxwell brought a well-known New York orchestra to vie with Negro swingsters and the Princeton Tigers, student band. Girls from St. Louis attending the prom included Miss Mary Caroline Morrison, Miss Laura Rand, Miss Ann Stoughton and Miss Virginia Weber. Princeton undergraduates from St. Louis at the dance were Lewis W. Baldwin, Ross A. Woolsey Jr., Alexander W. Morris III and Wilbur T. Trueblood Jr.

Sheila Barrett, mimic, and a dance team from a New York hotel were on hand to entertain the guests. To add to the evening's entertainment Miss Maxwell obtained the services of a troupe of Big Apple exponents from dance studios in New York.

Princeton colors, orange and black, featured decorations in the gymnasium.

An informal dance tonight will be given at the gymnasium after the football game, and another production of Ben Johnson's "Volpone" will be given. It was also presented last night, both productions given by Theater Intime, undergraduate dramatic organization.

Haeussler Reception.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Haeussler, 5767 Lindell boulevard, will be at home to their friends this afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock Assisting Mrs. Haeussler in serving will be Mrs. Roland Baer, Mrs. Frank Alewell, Mrs. William Stubblefield and Mrs. Mabel Cramer. White chrysanthemums will decorate the dining room table, the living room and the sun room.

Miss Lois Wichman, Russell K. Schulze Engaged to Marry

THE engagement of Miss Lois Betty Wichman, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. August G. Wichman, 7221 Greenway drive, and Russell Koeneman Schulze, son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Schulze, 4571 Holly avenue, was announced yesterday afternoon at a tea given by Mrs. Wichman at her home.

About 200 guests were invited to call between 3 and 6 o'clock. The lower floor of the house was decorated with bouquets of chrysanthemums in tones ranging from pale yellow to gold and bronze. In the reception hall was a large lighted pumpkin on which the names of Miss Wichman and her fiance were carved. There were two tea tables, one in the dining room and another in the sunroom, decorated with clusters of fall flowers and lighted by ivory tapers.

Mrs. Wichman and her daughter received in the living room before a bower of chrysanthemums arranged over the mantel and about the fireplace. The prospective bride wore an afternoon gown of green sheer crepe with a short jacket of green and silver lame. Her flowers were purple orchids in a corsage. She attended Washington University and was pledged to Gamma Phi Beta. Mr. Schulze was graduated from Washington University, where he became a member of Sigma Xi and Tau Beta fraternities. The wedding will take place in the spring.

Among those who assisted in serving at the tea tables were the following: Miss Helen Wichman, Mrs. Harry B. Johansen, Miss Betty Hinds, Miss Louise Johansen, Mrs. Jack Werber, Mrs. Paul Johansen, Miss Jean Simpson, Mrs. J. Roger Johansen, Miss Jane Smith, Mrs. M. Hamilton Hall, Miss Dorothy Marshall, Miss Elsie Schoenthaler, Mrs. Lee randenburger, Mrs. G. M. Johansen, Mrs. Robert E. Schluster, Mrs. Harry D. Corley and Mrs. T. E. Rassieur.

Dorothy La Fonte and M. M. Wachowiak Wed

MISS DOROTHY MARIE LA FONTE, daughter of Mrs. M. L. La Fonte, 4228 Flad avenue, became the bride of Maxwell Marion Wachowiak at 8 o'clock last night. The ceremony was performed by Dean Sidney E. Sweet at Christ Church Cathedral.

Dr. Carl H. Wachenfeld gave the bride in marriage. She was gowned in ivory taffeta, made along colonial lines with a pleated dropped shoulder effect. The skirt was full and pleated at the tight-fitting basque. From a camellia colored taffeta bonnet, that tied at the neck in a soft velvet bow, an ivory tulle veil hung to the floor. The bride carried a bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley and white button chrysanthemums.

Her three attendants wore rust shades of taffeta, cut on princesse lines with V necklines and a full skirt. They wore camellia colored bonnets without crowns and carried small bouquets of rust colored button chrysanthemums. Miss Dorothy Mast and Miss Ruth Bullard were bridesmaids and Mrs. John Hampton, cousin of the bride, was matron of honor. The flower girl, Shirley Hampton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hampton, wore a banana pink taffeta gown and carried small chrysanthemums in a colonial bouquet.

Mr. Wachowiak is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Marion Wachowiak, 5938 Waterman avenue. Lawrence McDaniel Jr., was best man. Groomsmen were: Thomas P. McNearney, Robert Wind, Robert Gough, Lester Schuermann and Gerhardt Oscarson.

Mrs. La Fonte, mother of the bride, wore black chiffon combined with black lace, and Mrs. Wachowiak wore black chantilly lace. Both wore orchids.

EXPERT CORSETIERES

. . . to analyze your figure and fit you whether you're one of the four types above or one of the many others. Sizes from 56 to 60 ordered special.

Sara Drew, after a long study, designed these Foundations for large women who have always thought they had "difficult" figures. These garments, made of high quality fabrics tested for strength and durability, have plenty of style appeal, too. Designed in fourteen different models, these Foundations redistribute and control proportions to perfection, thus improving the silhouette and giving the wearer the utmost in comfort. Priced to suit every budget.

"Satinizes" YOUR SKIN

From office to office everywhere, the glad news about Chamberlain's Lotion has spread. Now, thousands of girls in offices know that they can avoid the annoyance of having things stick to their fingers. Everywhere, you see Chamberlain's Lotion, the clear, golden liquid lotion which is never sticky, greasy, gummy nor "messy," dries quickly, leaves the fingers smooth. Chamberlain's Lotion is also popular among business women because it is an effective cosmetic. It keeps hands, arms and skin smooth and attractive, because it satinizes. At all toilet goods counters.

ST. CHARLES ITEMS

MISS ANN VIRGINIA BURKE, daughter of Mrs. Cassell H. Burke, 219 North Kingshighway, became the bride of Robert Joseph Knies of Pulaski, Tenn., the son of Mr. and Mrs. Casper Knies of Winchester, Tenn., at 10 o'clock yesterday morning at the St. Charles Borromeo Church. The Rev. J. Hamilton was in charge of the mass.

The bride was given in marriage by her elder brother, Edmund Burke. She wore a white satin dress made on princesse lines, with a flowing train and long veil and carried large white chrysanthemums. Attending her as maid of honor was her sister, Miss Mary Ethel Burke, dressed in blue moire with full skirt and tiny jacket. The bridesmaid, Miss Mary Louise Denker, wore wine colored moire and both of them used gold slippers and metallic lace veils with chrysanthemums of this shade on their arms. A nephew of the bridegroom, Cottam Knies, was best man and Warren Dinan groomsman. Eugene Williams and Carl Wentker were ushers.

Following the wedding a small reception was held at the home of the bride's mother. Among those attending the wedding from out of town were: Mrs. Arthur Brandt, her daughter, Mrs. William Kaiser, and Mrs. L. L. Burke, all from Aurora, Ill. Mr. and Mrs. Knies will make their home in Pulaski, Tenn., following a honeymoon trip.

The wedding of Miss Ruby Griffin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Griffin, 307 North Fifth street, and Elmer L. Hollander, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hollander, 303 South Main street, was held at the St. Peter's Catholic Church at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning. The nuptial mass was said by a great-uncle of the bridegroom, the Rev. Frank Hollander. After the ceremony there was a wedding breakfast at the home of the bridegroom. The bride's parents gave a dinner and reception at 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

The bride wore white satin with Duchesse lace forming the yoke and high wing collar, also the insets in the train. A short tulle veil was attached to a Juliet cap of shirred net. She carried white chrysanthemums. Her bridesmaid, Miss Hazel Tally, wore a lace frock of coral pink and a velvet Juliet cap of violet shade. Her nosegay was composed of violets. Lester Hollander, brother of the bridegroom, was best man, and another brother, Anthony and Gilbert Griffin, the bride's brother, served as ushers.

Mr. and Mrs. Hollander left on a western trip. They will be at home on their return at 307A North Fifth street.

Miss Isabel Schellert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schellert, of Old Monroe, Mo., and Sylvester Machens, son of Mr. Andrew Machens Sr., of Machens, Mo., were married in the Immaculate Conception Church at Old Monroe on Wednesday, Nov. 10. Mass was performed by the Rev. William Reef, assisted by the Rev. L. Puffer, of Portage des Sioux, Mo.

Two cousins of the bride, Miss Catherine Bader of St. Louis, and Miss Eleanore Heitmann of Old Monroe, were her attendants while the bridegroom's brothers, Luke and Francis Machens, were his attendants. Lawrence Heitmann and Henry Spellbrink were ushers.

The bride's gown was of ivory satin, with Duchesse and rosepoint lace forming a deep V yoke in front and an inset in the full skirt which extended into a long train. Her tulle veil was caught to the head with a halo cap of seed pearls. She carried white and her bridesmaid bronze chrysanthemums. The latter wore sapphire velvet and a shoulder length tulle veil of the same shade. Miss Heitmann's dress was of wine-colored velvet with veil and she carried pink chrysanthemums. There was a wedding breakfast at the home of the bride's parents and a reception in the evening. Following a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Machens will be at home in Machens.

The annual Thanksgiving dance at the St. Charles Country Club has been taken over this year by the St. Charles Junior Service League and will be held in the club ballroom Wednesday night. This dance was arranged by the activities committee of the League for the benefit of Christmas charities and is open to club members and guests. Composing the activities' committee are: Miss Marie Reichert, chairman; Miss De Lillis Buse, Miss Mathilda Moerschel, Miss Louise Wolf, Miss Miriam Achelpohl, Miss Theo Ahrens and Miss Nell Vass Martin.

Plans were made at the monthly meeting of the League last Tuesday, which followed dinner for new members at Hotel St. Charles. A private Christmas dance for members and guests also was planned.

The Sophomores gave a date dance for other students at Lindenwood College last night, in Butler gymnasium. Cutouts of turkeys, cornucopias and two lifesize Pilgrim figures were used for decorations. Thanksgiving holidays will begin Wednesday and last until the following Tuesday. In the receiving line were: Miss Kay Wagner, president of the class, Dr. and Mrs. John L. Roemer, Dean Alice Gipson and Dr. Kate Gregg, class sponsor.

Two members of the Lindenwood College faculty gave talks at the Missouri Educational convention in St. Louis. Dean Alice Gipson spoke during a Vocational Guidance session at a breakfast held at the Coronado Hotel Friday morning and Mrs. Elmer S. Ordelheide spoke at the close of the morning to the Missouri Association of Collegiate Registrars.

NURO-SHEEN

Permanent Wave Protection!

If you were 100% satisfied with your last permanent wave—that is, if it had body enough—if it left your hair soft and natural looking, full of life and sheen—then, by all means, that's the wave for you.

But if, after your last permanent, your hair was dry and straw-like, dull and perhaps a bit kinky or frizzy, guard against this on your next wave—protect YOUR hair with a genuine NURO-SHEEN permanent.

The waving materials used in the lovely Nuro-Sheen Croquignole are now supplied beauty shops ONLY IN INDIVIDUAL CARTONS—that is, just enough of the very choicest of supplies in each individual carton for one outstanding permanent—a wave of sterling character.

Make your permanent a genuine Nuro-Sheen, but here's a WORD OF CAUTION — DON'T BE MISLED—be positively sure it comes from the doubly sealed INDIVIDUAL CARTON and for further protection, insist upon breaking those seals yourself—your permanent will be lovelier than you ever dreamed possible.

THIS NEW YORK

By LUCIUS BEEBE

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.

AT the opening of Tallulah Bankhead's short-lived "Antony and Cleopatra" it was hard to tell whether the shambles was worse on the lighted side of the footlamps or among the chivalry that had turned out to cheer for a popular favorite and remained no longer than necessary. Most of the reviewers were of the mind that the staging and presentation of the play was one of the most comprehensive essays in destruction in recent theatrical years. But the carnage among the audience was really on a Genghis Kahn scale, the more so since it was a house of enthusiastic Tallulah fans. At the entr'acte there was a notable tendency not to look anybody in the face, and nobody in the house had the hardihood to mention the play itself. There was, in fact, a frozen silence. Somebody tentatively asked Steve Wiman what sort of an evening she was having. "Ghastly," she said, and added hastily, "I had sauerkraut for dinner." In the front row Herman Sartorius and Clara Bell Walsh snoozed intermittently, but the smoke from the bivouac scene blew offstage and roused Dwight Fisk into strange wakefulness. Catastrophe at the Mansfield seemed universal. The evening came to a panicky close with the final curtain as Fiske, who had sent Miss Bankhead a good luck wire, hurried into the night, screaming: "I want my telegram back."

● ONE OF THIS DEPARTMENTS correspondents recently ran across a fabulous survivor of the Scott Fitzgerald era in the person of Biltmore Bill van Urk, who was a legend of the early '20s when the undergraduate New York scene was peopled with Jack Thomas, Junius Brown, Jimmy Farrell and Phil Plant. In an age when Winkle's and Moriarty's were the smartest gentlemen's clubs in America, when every week end came to a finish only when you contrived to overturn a Stutz Bearcat roadster on yourself on the Bridgeport highway and when "under the clock at the Biltmore" was the password of a now vanished civilization, Biltmore Bill (he was known at Princeton as Big Jack) was a hero of Paul Bunyan dimensions. The Palais Royal, the Pre Cat, the Montmartre, Plaza and Lorraine grills, the Rendezvous and Club de Vingt were his stamping ground and the milk train to Princeton Junction his habitat. It was doubted if he owned anything except evening clothes.

Jim Williamson, the artist, Stanley Sackett, those Bailey twins, Cyril Hume, Dick Barthelmess and other regulars at Winkle's were his associates and the roof of the world was his dance floor. Our correspondent deposes that since the wonderful '20s Mel Van Urk has been living on ancestral acres in Holland on the shore of the Zuider Zee. His only comment on the new times was to ask if there are still any night clubs where regular customers keep lockers for their business clothes so they can change at breakfast time. The answer, sadly, is no, and the town is the poorer for it. Jack Thomas is dead; Jimmy Farrell is with him, Phil Plant is a rustic poultry fancier, and Junius Brown, God help us, is a professor of psychology at the University of Kansas. Talk about things coming to a pretty pass!

● AN ALL-TIME HIGH in fantastic copy is supplied by a recent issue of "Picture Play," wherein a writer who shall be nameless, treats the illiterates to the lowdown on candid camera photography among the Hollywood ape farms. "In the past," he writes feelingly, "some photographers have set a bad record by trying to mingle with the guests (at film parties). At one party a few years ago I remember a group of photographers gathering around a piano at a fashionable affair and trying to join with the stars." Get him! As though there existed, even in Los Angeles, a news photographer who would be seen dead in the company of a film actor, and as though there were ever a communal gathering of the baboons of Beverly Hills where photographers were not the most touted, flattered and goose-greased guests of honor! News camera men have to suffer plenty, but there isn't a managing editor extant brutal enough to make them "mingle with film stars" on a social basis.

● THE WORLD'S FIRST AMATEUR GOURMET, Andre Simon, is revisiting the land after an absence of three years, and such a round of dinners hasn't been heard of since Brillat Savarin was on the town and shooting turkeys in the Bronx 140 years ago. Brillat Savarin's most celebrated exploits in America included teaching Julien, the Boston restaurateur how to build a cheese fondue and drinking a Jamaica planter under the table in a widely touted rum shrub festival in a New York ordinary, a round-by-round chronicle of which may be found in the local gazettes of the period. M. Simon's eating and drinking records are less spacious and gaudy, but still entirely in the tradition of truly urbane gastronomy and his arrival on these shores has been the signal for gustatory amateurs to trot out their last bottles of Medford rum and Lafitte '99 in his honor. Within eight days of landing he has been guest of honor at six monstrous elegant dinners and no doubt his schedule, as accredited ambassador of the Wine and Food Society, will be equally truffle-spangled for weeks to come.

WHERE STUDENTS TRADE WORK for WISDOM

At Blackburn College, You've Got to Want an Education so Badly That You Will Do Hard Manual Labor to Get It.

By VIRGINIA IRWIN

CARLINVILLE, Ill.
Nov. 20, 1937.

IF YOU had to get up and milk a cow every day before dawn in order to get a college education, would you do it? Would you bend over sinks of dirty dishes 15 hours out of every week for the privilege of attending an institution of higher learning? Would you bear without complaining the crick in your back that comes from pushing a flat iron over never-ending baskets of laundry for two and one-half hours six days a week?

If you would, you're unusual—as unusual as the students who attend Blackburn College, a Presbyterian school dedicated to young people who have everything but money.

I have just spent the day at Blackburn, beauty spot on the outskirts of this pleasant little town of Carlinville, Ill., and watched the wheels go smoothly around in this university where 304 young men and women trade work for wisdom—where young men pour concrete and milk cows in exchange for the privilege of studying philosophy and chemistry and animal husbandry and where young women wash dishes and make beds and do the college laundry in exchange for the privilege of studying French and psychology and home economics.

At Blackburn you've got to want an education so badly you'll work for it. The affluent state of your family's finances cuts no swath on this campus; in fact, if your father has a well-padded purse, you're automatically ineligible to this institution, which is more exclusive than the swankiest of Eastern schools. Money may buy your way into a school with a fashionable name, but to get into Blackburn you've got to prove that scraping up the $225 which covers your room, board and tuition for one whole school year meant a real sacrifice to your family. In addition, your record must show that you ranked in the upper third of your high school class; you must have good health and a character that your minister, doctor, banker and the man for whom you did odd jobs during vacation can speak of as "excellent" when questioned by the college authorities. And besides all this you must, of course, be willing to work 15 hours a week at whatever task you are assigned once you are lucky enough to be enrolled in Blackburn.

"Those requirements for admission need but little qualifying," explained Dr. William M. Hudson, the man who pulled Blackburn out of its educational doldrums and made it a 'self-help" college 25 years ago. "Besides that $225 for room, board and tuition, a student should have at least $50 and not more than $75 a year extra to cover books and pin money expenses. If he can afford to spend more than this, he or she should go some place else. And then about the scholarship—worthy students ranking in the upper third of their high school class are, of course, given preference. In some exceptional cases we do consider some who have ranked only in the middle third, but those students must pass an intelligence test."

For the past four years, Dr. Hudson has been receiving on an average of 4000 applications a year from young men and young women who see in Blackburn their only hope of getting a college education. Out of these thousands, some 300 of the most worthy are sifted and in September arrive at Carlinville from all parts of the United States to take part in what was once considered a fantastic and impracticable educational idea.

At the beginning of the school year, a list of work to be done about the college is handed to each student. If a young woman is interested in cake baking and thinks she can bake a decent cake, she is put in the bakery. If she likes fixing up pretty salads, she is made salad girl in the kitchen. If a boy is clever at electricity, he is made electrician, or if he likes outdoor work, he is placed in some job on one of the college farms. If it can be arranged, each student is allowed to choose the work he or she prefers doing.

At Blackburn, the students not only do all the work, but plan and manage it, too. A "work committee" of four students plans the work program and doles out the various jobs. It's up to this committee to organize the work groups and see that everybody works, and works hard for 15 hours a week.

Here's a list of the work groups to give you an idea of the various jobs these Blackburn boys and girls sandwich in between classes and study hours: Breakfast, lunch and dinner cooks, bread baking force, pie and cake baking squad, table waitresses, dish washers, boiler and stove firing squad, janitors, secretaries, librarians, farmers and dairy workers, laundry workers, construction gangs, odd jobs force.

After the "work committee" had explained the divisions of labor at Blackburn, Dr. Hudson piloted me around the campus.

"I want you to see how cheerfully they go about their work," he smiled. "There's not a glum face in the lot."

And there wasn't. Back of the administration building, an overalled and sweaty gang was at work pouring concrete for the floor of the new gymnasium, which is being built, except for the brick laying, entirely by student labor. In the laundry, three cheerful young women were ironing. In the kitchen, two salad girls were putting the finishing touches on some 300 carrot and raisin salads, the lunch cooks were stirring away at great pots of creamed corn and buttered beets, and in the dining room white uniformed waitresses were setting places for the 300 hungry young men and women who would arrive as soon as noonday chapel was over.

Nowhere was there any sign of loafing. There were no little groups clustered here and there, sitting on steps or strolling about the campus, simply because every minute counts at Blackburn. When not in classes or studying, these young men and women are busy turning out the work that has been assigned to them.

"We're pretty proud of our rating," Dr. Hudson boasted as he explained that this combination of working with both mind and muscle seems to produce superior students. "You know, students who have completed our junior college course are admitted without examination and without condition to colleges and universities throughout the United States. Blackburn is rated as a Class A Junior College by the North Central Association, the University of Illinois, and the Illinois Examining Board. A lot of people have the idea that Blackburn is a College of Agriculture or Home Economics and another idea they have is that we're still conducting college in a lot of old Pullman cars. Both are wrong."

The old Pullman cars to which Dr. Hudson referred still stand back of the dairy barn, grim reminders of the fire that almost, but not quite, paralyzed Blackburn College just three weeks before school was to open in 1927. It was in these Pullman cars that Dr. Hudson carried on until new dormitories and an administration building could be erected. Dr. Hudson's own office was in the women's washroom of a parlor car, the library and reading room were in two day coaches and other coaches housed class rooms and administration offices. Today three beautiful, modern red brick buildings, all built by student labor, adorn Blackburn campus in addition to old Robertson Hall which was spared in the fire.

WHEN the new $60,000 gymnasium which the students are building is completed, Dr. Hudson hopes to be able to raise enough money to begin construction of a building to house dining hall, kitchen and home economics department of the college. At present the dining hall and kitchen are in the basement of the girls' dormitory.

"We never run any deficit," Dr. Hudson explained. "We do without what we can't pay for. The student pays $225 a year for room, board and tuition and it costs the college about $200 more a year per student to operate. We have an $800,000 endowment from which our income is $35,000 a year and last year we had cash donations of $23,000. G. H. Jones of Chicago, founder of the Inland Steel Co., has offered us $150,000 on the condition that we raise an additional $150,000. We've still got $98,000 to rake up."

Although Blackburn College is 100 years old, the "self-help" phase of its life did not begin until 1912, when Dr. Hudson and his wife, Florence Barclay Hudson, took hold of the reins and gave the sleepy institution a shot in the arm by instituting the self-help idea. Thus, the latter-day saga of Blackburn College is simply the story of Dr. Hudson, a small man with a bristly white mustache who has dedicated his life to helping 'young people who have everything but money."

In all this emphasis on the work done by the students at Blackburn, it should not be supposed that life

MY OPINION
by Martha Carr

Dear Mrs. Carr:

WILL you please let me know if it is customary for a husband and wife to exchange gifts on Easter, Valentine day and wedding anniversaries?

I am employed as a stenographer, do the cooking, housekeeping and some of the ironing, and I am of the opinion, that to show his appreciation, my husband should give me some little gift on these special days. However, if he does give me anything and I do not have some gift for him in return, he spoils everything by making a remark such as "he is going to stop his 'one-sided' giving on 'off-days.' Do you think this is fair? As far as I am concerned, it is one-sided, only it is all in his favor. I usually give him some little gift on these special days but sometimes I don't have the time, as I only get an hour for lunch, and something I don't have the money with me, as he handles all of the money that we make.

I was always of the opinion that a husband should give her some little present on Easter, Valentine day and wedding anniversaries, and sometimes a box of candy in between; but my husband has never bought me a box of candy since we have been married (except on my birthday). Don't you think that a husband should show his love for his wife in some little way such as mentioned above? Do you think that a husband should expect gifts from his wife every time he gives her something? What is your opinion?

A WIFE.

Of course your husband should remember these special days (and every other woman would say "of course"); but men are notoriously forgetful and unromantic sometimes, about these reminders of the sentiment of such celebrations. Many a woman feels that she would be content, if the remembrance were no more than a "tuppenny sweet." And of course it is nice, if a woman has the means at her disposal, to give him a reminder of the day and the romance.

I do think, in the situation, since you are doing so much toward the livelihood, that your husband should feel it in order for him to make this special effort (perhaps carry a card around in his pocket-book or put a ring around these calendar days). If he has the guardianship of the bank account, then he should give and not expect to receive.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● WHEN I WAS QUITE YOUNG my mother and father separated. For several years she has been receiving telephone calls from a source unknown to me. When I ask her who called, she will not tell me who it is. I think it is my father. She also receives letters written in a strange hand. How can I find out who this person is?

T. C.

I believe your mother must have your happiness at heart and she may think it not best for your happiness, as yet, while you are so young, to look into past history. Perhaps your father thinks the same, or he would find a way to communicate with you. The Board of Children's Guardians might be willing to look into the matter and advise you.

—o—o—

Dear Mrs. Carr:

WHAT, IN YOUR OPINION, would be a nice inexpensive Christmas gift for my father? Your faithful. M. A. K.

Couldn't you play detective a little through your mother or some older person? I can suggest a few things, but keep a keen eye on his belongings and be sure he has none of these and also find out what his pet hates are. A wool muffler, a tie (but not too giddy, unless he wears that kind), wool gloves, monogrammed handkerchiefs, pipe or pipe tobacco, cigars or a carton of cigarettes. If he travels, a leather case of some kind.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

● IN ANSWER to "Nancy P.," if she is desirous of getting in the Navy, I suggest that she write to the United States Navy and ask the requirements for becoming a nurse. Just because she isn't a boy is no excuse; the Army and the Navy need nurses, and it would give her a chance to travel and see the world. She must have four years high school and one year of college before she can do this, however. She must be single and be willing to go anywhere she is sent. Yours truly,

A NURSE.

—o—o—

Dear Martha Carr:

COULD YOU PLEASE TELL ME the age of Margaret Sullavan? 2. Where I could reach her? 3. The name of some of the pictures she has played in.

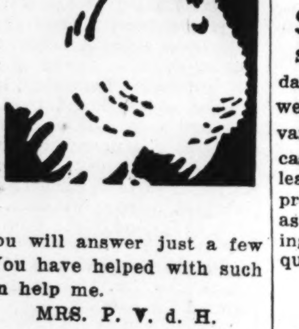
V. B.

Miss Sullavan's age is 26. 2. Paramount Studio. 3. "I Loved a Soldier," "The Moon's Our Home," "Next Time We Love, "So Red the Rose," "The Good Fairy," "Little Man What Now," "Only Yesterday."

—o—o—

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I INTEND TO BUY a new bedroom set in the near future and I would appreciate your advice. The furniture I have in mind is walnut with a honey-colored surface and finish. The wood, stained walnut is accented by highlights of honey color, giving the impression of old, well-worn, mellow wood. I am having this made by hand and it will take six months as I want a hand-rubbed patina when finished. And I really hope it will be something that my descendants will be proud to own. Can you suggest a style?



You see we intend to buy the home in about a year and the plans are nearly ready. The house itself is colonial and I want my bedroom furniture to be appropriate. The bed will be over-size, because my husband is more than six feet tall, and does not sleep well in regular beds.

I realize my letter is long, but if you will answer just a few lines, I shall appreciate it very much. You have helped with such a variety of problems, I feel sure you can help me.

MRS. P. V. d. H.

Since the general style is colonial, a four-poster would be the ideal type (either the large single or the twin beds in four poster style). Some of the old beauties of four-posters were long enough for a man seven feet tall, it seems to me. Then, too, furniture in the style of Sheraton, Chippendale, Duncan Phyfe and others of early design always goes well with this type of bed.

THE WORLD AS WOMEN SEE IT

Message for Persons Who Dread Future

Words of Encouragement for Elderly, Discouraged Individuals.

By Elsie Robinson

ARE you growing old . . . becoming discouraged . . . did you watch the turning leaves this fall with a dread of what lies ahead? Then I'm writing this for you—as well as for myself. For I, too, am growing old . . . and sometimes I, too, am afraid. But—I have seen the springtime come with the fall . . . seen the green grass springing up beneath the snow. Life going on, even while we stupid mortals think it is ending. Will you see it with me?

At last—it's rained!
November rain?
The year's dread end,
With Winter's death
Around the bend?
"It's time," you cry,
"For all to die!"
But not where rain
Means Spring again!
Listen, and see
How life
Was meant to be!

Hot . . . hot . . . hot . . .
Parched day on day on day
Of desert Summer,
With its constant sun,
Its ceaseless labor
Till the year's near done—

And then,
Across the parched arroya
And the work-worn field,
Drained by the travail
Of the Summer's yield,
There falls a silence
And a deepening gloom,
A restless stirring
Through the thirsty loam;
Then—with a flash that breaks
The earth's long strain—
There comes the gleaming
Loveliness of rain!

It rains!
The trampled trails,
The dusty fields awake.
The dried seeds swell,
The hidden waters break—
And through the fainting soil
There runs a sheen of yearning life,
An eager quickening,
And each seared rut
Is edged with thrusting green!

Rain on dry dust—
On powdered dust that holds
The treasured essence
Of the year's long growth—
The flagrant, fallen loot
Of flower and fruit,
Petal and pollen,
Gum and gilded grass.
Through all the blazing months
Since April passed
All these have crumbled,
Burned to mingled ash
Od'ous as incense.
Now, at the first lash
Their prisoned perfumes sing,
And all the air
Is sweet again with spring;
Each cluttered clearing
And each arid slope
Burns with new green fire,
Leaps with new-born hope!

Spring time in fall!
New growth before
November leaves are shed?
New hope while yet
The Winter looms ahead?
New birth before
The sad, old life
Is dead?
I think that age
Should come to us
Like that!

Young laughter leaping
Like November grass
Thrusting its promise
Through life's mingled ash;
Young courage springing
From the soul's deep loam—
I think it should Be that way
As we turn toward home!

God—
As I pass
From this familiar scene,
Quicken my heart
Until life's deathless green
Leaps through the litter
Of old waste and pain,
And, in my autumn,
Make me young again!
Amen.

Sheer Stockings Popular

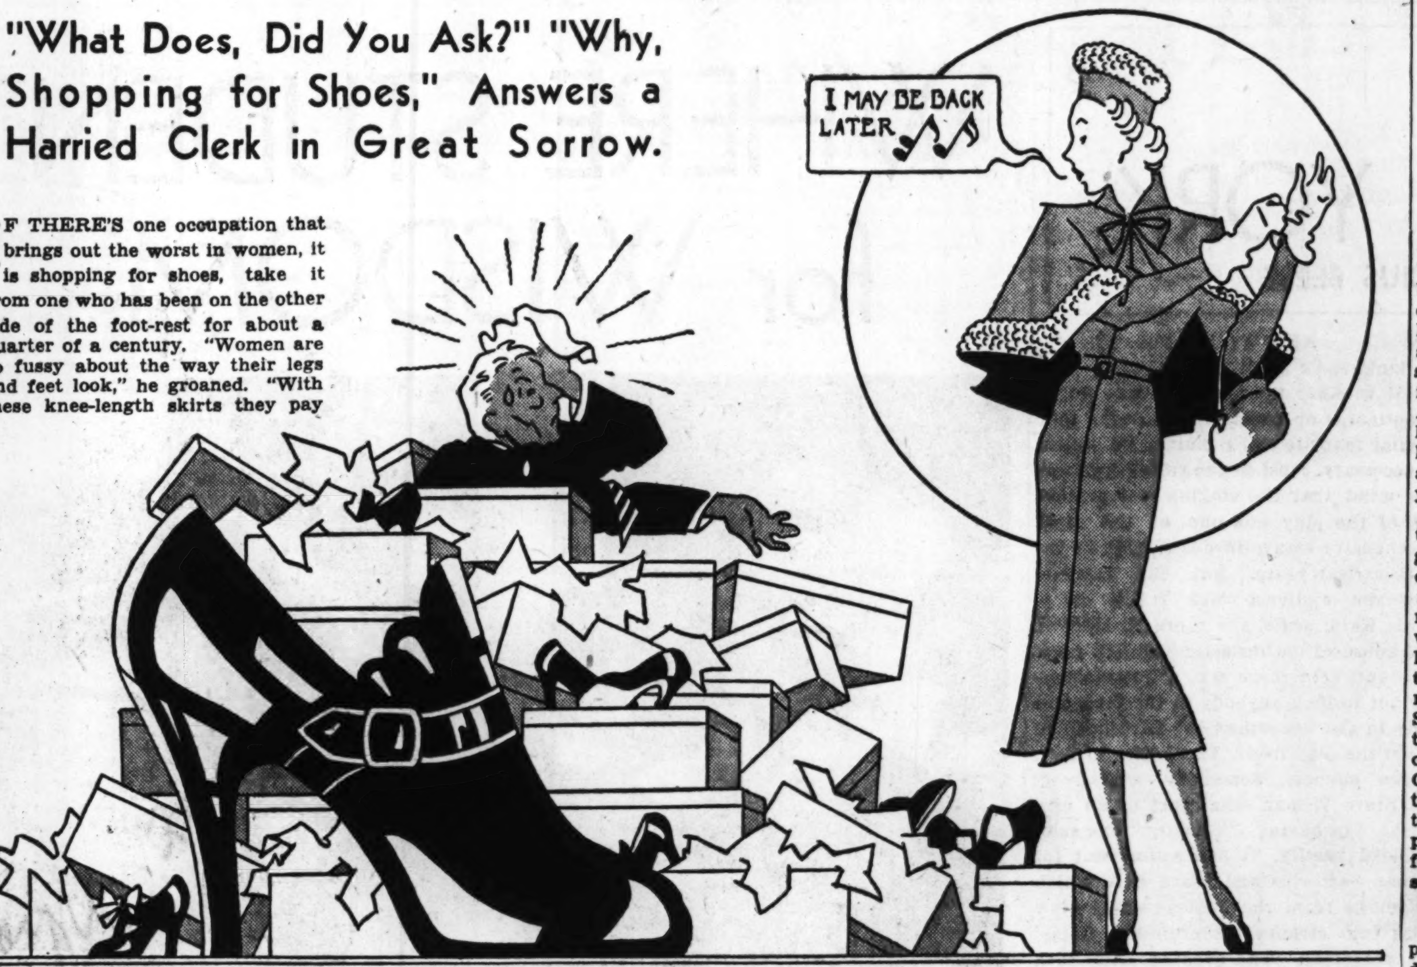
Sheer stockings are the rage these days regardless of the threatening weather. The usual two-thread variety preferred for dressy occasions no longer suits the fashion leaders, so the designers now have produced a filmy stocking designed as one and one-half thread. Nothing has been said about its wearing qualities!

Glove Decorations

Black suede gloves aren't recognized as important in the current era of luxurious fashions unless they have some glittering decorations. Silver or gold kid trims the more conservative types, while glistening sequins adorn the most elegant variety. Long and short lengths display the striking ornaments.

IT BRINGS Out Worst IN WOMEN

"What Does, Did You Ask?" "Why, Shopping for Shoes," Answers a Harried Clerk in Great Sorrow.



I MAY BE BACK LATER

THE SHOPPER FREQUENTLY LEAVES THE CLERK HOPELESSLY STRANDED ON HIS FOOTSTOOL, SURROUNDED BY DOZENS OF SHOES.

IF THERE'S one occupation that brings out the worst in women, it is shopping for shoes, take it from one who has been on the other side of the foot-rest for about a quarter of a century. "Women are so fussy about the way their legs and feet look," he groaned. "With these knee-length skirts they pay as much attention to their shoes and stockings as they do their makeup and hats. It's a good thing for business, I suppose, but it sure is tough on us salesmen."

The woman who breezes in, flings herself into a chair and simpers, "I don't care what size you put on me, just so it's a 4-B," is one of the worst types he has to deal with. "She can't get over the memory of that old 1½ when she was married, even though she has put on weight and spread her feet to a 6-C and has bunions that it's worth your life to touch accidentally.

"One afternoon a Negro couple came in, the woman to buy shoes. When I asked her what size, she replied, 'always buy a 7-A.' At which her husband spoke up, 'You buys a 7-A, you buys plenty of 7-A's. But you never wears a 7-A. Woman, you got my attic full of 7-A's.'

"You can't convince a woman that her foot would look a lot better in the right size shoes," this salesman continued. "Her stock protest is, 'Well, if you can't fit me in my size, I'll go somewhere else.'"

Frequently she does, once she sees the clerk is hopelessly stranded on his footstool, surrounded by dozens of shoes she has tried on and discarded, or simply flung on the floor without so much as looking at them.

She will leave even faster, the salesman grimaced, if you try to tell her she needs an arch-preserver shoe. "Ridiculous," says she. "I never have worn anything but the lightest of shoes and I certainly don't intend to begin wearing something else now."

"What she doesn't realize," he resumed, "is that we are trying to help her. With the right kind of shoes, a foot that is all worn out and blah can be repoised. It doesn't make any difference to the salesperson what kinds of shoes she buys. But any conscientious clerk wants to see a customer properly fitted, even though it would be a lot easier to give her exactly what she asks for."

Few women buy the shoes they came into a shop to get. And it isn't always the clerks who influence their decision. It's just their inability to make up their minds ahead of time, and not change them. That traditional failing makes the shoe salesman's job all the tougher.

A SMOKER SELDOM PREFERS AN ASHTRAY TO THE FLOOR.

"Most customers come in wholly unprepared to shop for shoes," the salesman explained, in the same tone one might use to scold a schoolboy for not having read the lesson before class. "Yes, sir, they come in here without a ghost of an idea of what they need or want. Lots of times they don't intend to buy anything, anyway. They only want to kill a few minutes before it's time for the next show down the street. Sure, we can spot that kind right off. They look at everything in the place, then get up and walk out, without so much as a 'thank you' for all the time we spend on them. But I'm talking now about the woman who shops everywhere in town before she finally buys. She doesn't even need to set foot in this shop to find out what we have. That's what our windows are for. We spent a lot of money fixing up that store front. Almost every type of shoe we have is displayed out there in such a way that the customer can walk practically all the way around it, examine the height of the heel, the vamp, the color and the price."

But it's asking too much of women, he shrugged, to expect them to prepare for a shopping expedition. It is so much easier to flop down in an arm chair, light up a gasper, and leave the rest to the clerk. A customer may throw out a few hints, such as, "Let me see. I do have a black street dress, but I can wear my old patent leather pumps with that. And besides, it's a year old. I don't want to get anything more to go with it. How about something in brown? What? Oh dear no! I never wore a Cuban heel in my life. On second thought, brown won't do either. Then I'd have to get a brown bag and gloves. You have? Well, now there's an idea. All right, show me something in brown." Then as the bewildered salesman heads for the stacks, she fires after him, "Don't bring me alligator. I've loathed crawling things since I was a child!"

It isn't any easier for the clerk when a friend comes along to act in an advisory capacity. Mostly she just doubles the trouble with chatter on irrelevant subjects and inane suggestions about which shoes do most for the feet. Anything that takes a customer's mind off the subject works a hardship on her salesman. For that reason, this clerk, for one, would rather she didn't smoke while she's being fitted, especially when the shop is busy. It always necessitates chasing after an ashtray—which, incidentally, she seldom prefers to the floor—and fishing in all his pockets for matches. As if he were hired to act as butler and nursemaid for pampered matrons!

SMOKING, however, is one of the minor offenses of his difficult women customers, Mr. Salesman allowed, with some show of annoyance. "They can be so utterly unreasonable—and discourteous. Now, for instance, if I am waiting on a customer and the shop manager or someone else important asks to speak to me, wouldn't you think she could be civil when I ask to be excused for a moment? But no. She often gets uppity, and snaps, 'I haven't any time to waste; I am due at a meeting at 2 o'clock,' or something like that. You know perfectly well she's faking. She can't let you go for a couple of minutes on perfectly legitimate business. But then when she gets through looking at shoes she wants you to hang around and let her talk about her dogs or her kids. It's a pain in the neck."

"Most women," he went on, "don't seem to realize that we salesmen are working on commissions. That means our earnings depend on the sales we make. They take the attitude that it doesn't matter how much of our time they waste because we're paid to stick around indefinitely and be accommodating. Meanwhile two or three other customers, good ones, may be waiting for us."

The customer who has several pairs of shoes sent out on approval with no intention of keeping any of them is another nightmare to the clerk, who may have his budget all figured out on the basis of commissions due, and then gets a load of returns. But he soon learns which women are given to that sort of practice and fights shy of them the next time they come in.

He fights shy, too, of the customer who opens with, "I have here a pair of shoes from another store. I've just bought them. But I thought if you had something I like better I'd take them back." That puts the salesman who waits on her at a dreadful disadvantage. He can't help hoping, a little maliciously, that she will have a hole or three in the toe of her stocking which will cause her all kinds of embarrassment.

On Buying Shoes

BE OPEN-MINDED about shoe sizes. They do vary with lasts and vamps.

Don't blame your aching bunions on the salesman.

Make up your mind what you want or need before you take a clerk's time.

Don't pretend you didn't know you had a hole in your stocking toe. You won't fool a soul.

Leave your friends at home when you go out to shop seriously.

Try to get on without a cigarette for the few minutes you are being fitted.

Don't take advantage of the clerk's amiability to bore him with stories about your kids or your dogs (i. e. spaniels, wire-hairs, daschunds).

FRYING PAN vs. FIRE -:- -:- -:- By Helen Rowland

DIVORCE is a disease that is "catching;" but it will never reach the epidemic stage as long as the normal woman can find 40 knots binding her to marriage, to the one loose end which might encourage her to get a divorce.

There is something awfully binding about the marriage-tie. It is full of ought-nots, wilt-nots, shalt-nots and what-nots which you never discover until you try to unravel it.

There are only two or three good reasons for getting a divorce, but there are a hundred valid and hole-proof reasons why the average woman weathers the matrimonial storms and "sticks to the ship"—and the man—until she reaches the placid harbor of middle-age content.

Why? Oh well, because she is a woman and her code, her conscience and her natural instincts are all against the idea of deserting the man she has promised to love, honor and abide with;

Because she has got that "married feeling" and she shudders when she visualizes herself as "nobody's wife" or "nobody's widow;"

Because divorce is a major operation—and it's going to be hard to prove that her husband is "cruel" to her when she is really only weary of the way he grumbles about wiping the dishes, or picks on her at bridge;

Because she sees few husbands for whom she'd care to exchange her own, and few marriages that appear to have any more glamor or to be any nearer to perfection, than hers;

Because, in spite of her short skirts and her new hair-do, she knows that middle-age is on the way, and her chances of finding a Prince Charming are as slim and uncertain as a tearoom sandwich;

Because she is "used to that man," and the vision of adjusting herself to another husband gives her a chill;

Because breaking up your own home requires the callousness of an auctioneer and the courage of an executioner;

Because sweet, dead memories of a tender courtship and an ardent honeymoon—all those early golden days together — arise and clutch at her heart;

Because her vanity and her pride won't let her admit herself a "failure" in marriage, the only job she has ever tried.

All these are reasons "why that woman goes on living with that man!"

Graceful Hands

Perhaps you have never noticed the movements of your hands, the poses assumed by thumbs and fingers. Make it a habit to observe them. Note how you pick up a book, how you turn the pages when you read. There's a graceful way and a clumsy way to turn the handle of a door. Manipulating the knife and fork at the table is a test. What about hand behavior at the bridge table?

Graceful movement, like many another beauty quality, begins in the mind. Desire to be graceful, cultivate a feeling of beauty. Awkwardness is not natural, it is a bad habit. Children and animals are nearly always graceful. They have a sense of freedom, move naturally.

Black Oilskin Coat

If you are tired of your leather jackets and as weary of regulation oilskin slickers to weather the winter sports, you might try a windbreaker of black oilskin. Such a one is available at the smartest shops and offers an interesting diversion in the way of rain-proof sports togs. Knitted waistband and wrists do their part toward keeping the elements at a proper distance. A zipper closing does the rest.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Dorothy Coleman

ALL RIGHT, boys. Now let's see what whizzes you really are in the kitchen. We've listened too long to Ralph's boasts about his brand of Welsh rarebit and smacked our lips too often over Tom's monologue on the way he has with onion soup, not to be entitled to a demonstration. In "For Men Only," with its blunt subtitle, "A Cook Book," Achmed Abdullah and John Kenny have reduced instructions practically to words of one syllable to make a first-rate exhibition easier for you.

The writers may have intended their little volume as a culinary guide for the bachelor, the widower, or the married man sick of family fare, but they have incidentally rendered a great service to the women who are concerned in the last instance, at any rate. Gee, think of not having to get up any more Thursday night dinners or Sunday evening suppers. We'll just tie the apron strings about the head of the house, toss him "For Men Only," and skip back to our tapestry piece, which because of domestic interruptions in the past is competing with the medieval cathedrals for number of years under construction.

LET HIM FIX exactly what he pleases. It will be preferable any day to having our menus censored when the souffle is in and the apples are peeled for salad. You won't hear a peep out of us—not if we choke over Hubby's rendition of Kidney Au Diable, and find his raw spinach salad too disgustingly body-building. If that's the way he wants his food—it's O. K. with the little woman, as Abdullah and Kenny insist upon referring to us. No offense to them intended, honestly, We are too much in their debt.

For one thing, they have devoted their opening chapter to drinks—the alcoholic variety. Every man thinks he is a natural-born bartender, just because he survived the bathtub gin-grapefruit juice decade without a zinc-lined stomach. The truth of the matter is that it's a rare one who can turn out enough potable old-fashioneds for a dinner party for eight, on schedule, no matter if you start him on them the minute he sets foot inside the door, loaded with bottles. (If, indeed, he hasn't forgotten this one party duty assigned to him!) As for Martinis! Well, something about the intricacy of mixing them seems to justify him in sampling so generously that he monopolizes the conversation until you get to the table.

IF THE COMPOSITORS of this little cookbook have made no other contribution to a well-ordered society they have, with their ABC directions, reduced to a minimum the time the bartender of the household need be in the kitchen during the last critical hour before serving. Nor has he any longer an excuse for losing the place in the family cookbook while he tracks down a recipe for his concoctions. Our one regret in this respect is that Abdullah and Kenny have offered no solution to that ever-present problem: how to keep husband in ice for cocktails on a two-tray refrigerator, holding back a square or two for the water pitcher, and still have enough for highballs later in the evening, without paying the corner drug store altogether too much for a carton of cubes. That, however, is an engineering, rather than a culinary matter, and is a little out of their scope.

They are especially helpful in their chapter on "tools and seasoning," although it is hard to see why they overlooked the dry stores as essential as seasonings in any well-stocked cupboard, if not more so. (Hear, hear, ye sauce and dressing gourmets!). Just call those lists to the attention of the man who considers himself your meal ticket. If they don't arouse in him a glimmer of appreciation for the culinary masterpieces you have turned out without benefit of "wooden chopping bowl with chopper," "roasting rack and pan," "heavy covered stewing pot," "oven thermometer," "curry powder," "horseradish, cooking sherry and preferably the dark French mustard," the wretch lacks any of the finer feelings. Once he realizes under what serious handicaps you have been operating he may loosen up and present you with a dollar's worth of spices, and some dime-store equipment, who knows?

—o-o—

YOU CAN SEE our interest in "For Men Only" is a purely selfish one. We can't help realizing that it serves the women in a way the authors probably did not intend. Now, for instance, if the lord and master embarks on a full-fledged cooking spree—say he has a yen to try his hand at Bouillabaisse Prunier (a whole lobster is only one of the ingredients)—he is going to learn lots of things. Encourage him to do the marketing himself and he will discover that lobsters don't come five for a quart in the hinterland, which may be the reason he hasn't been getting them every other week. After he has fooled around with fish heads, mashed garlic cloves, and olive oil

CLOSE-UP of ST. LOUIS FASHIONS

HATS FOR AFTERNOON

Pillboxes Are Beginning to Compete With High Crowns

By Kay Thomas

GEORGE JEAN NATHAN, who has a reputation for knowing a beautiful woman as well as a good play when he sees one, has definite ideas on women's hats. Corralled at a cocktail party in New York, he had this to say:

"A hat, which attracts more attention to itself than to the woman who wears it, is not an effective hat. And unless a woman is sure that her designer is an artist and can make hats which consider her features, it is safer for her to wear simple and flattering, rather than daring and extreme hats."

At this party a woman, who attracted much attention for her hat alone, wore a high, peaked affair in turquoise jersey, with a long silver fox tail falling down one side. It was effective from the costume standpoint, for she had the wit to repeat the color of the hat in a jersey blouse and suede afternoon gloves. But for the life of me, I can't remember the face under the hat.

On the other hand, the actress, Mary Rockwell, at the same party, was the center of interest because of her blonde beauty. And yet her hat, which was one of those high, black felts, in the silhouette of a Grecian headdress, enhanced the classic features of her face.

Most fashionable women this season in New York prefer, obviously, to be conspicuous for their hats rather than their beauty. At lunch at the Colony, or "21," at dinner at the Stork Club, it's the hats of the women patrons, not their looks, which is the subject of much discussion. Extremely high crowns, feathers, flowers, veils, provocative bonnets have been on the most unsuitable heads, much to the merriment of strangers, as well as their intimates. The heights of the brow, the length of the nose and face, the spacing of the eyes, the size of the head, the height of the wearer, all should be considered in buying a hat. Once you're sure of yourself then you can let yourself go.

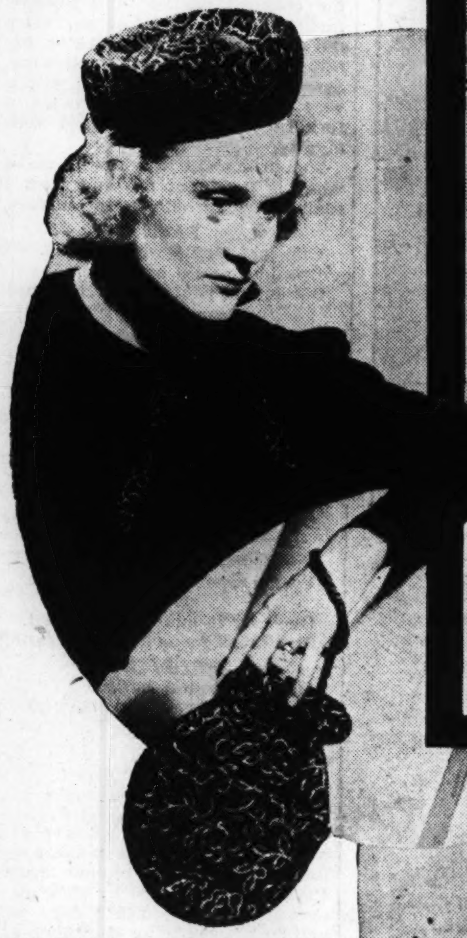
Little tilted pillboxes with chin bows are beginning to compete with high crowns for afternoon. Most of the newer high crowns are in the classic Greek tradition. The newest fabrics are velvet, jersey, velours, belting.

And the newer hats, for wear in midwinter, when the days are cold and gray, are more and more colorful. Gold embroidery, cut-out bright felt flowers, multi-colored sequins, these enhance them. Enormous jeweled clips, too, appear on velvet berets, or on the crowns and under the wide brims of dinner hats.

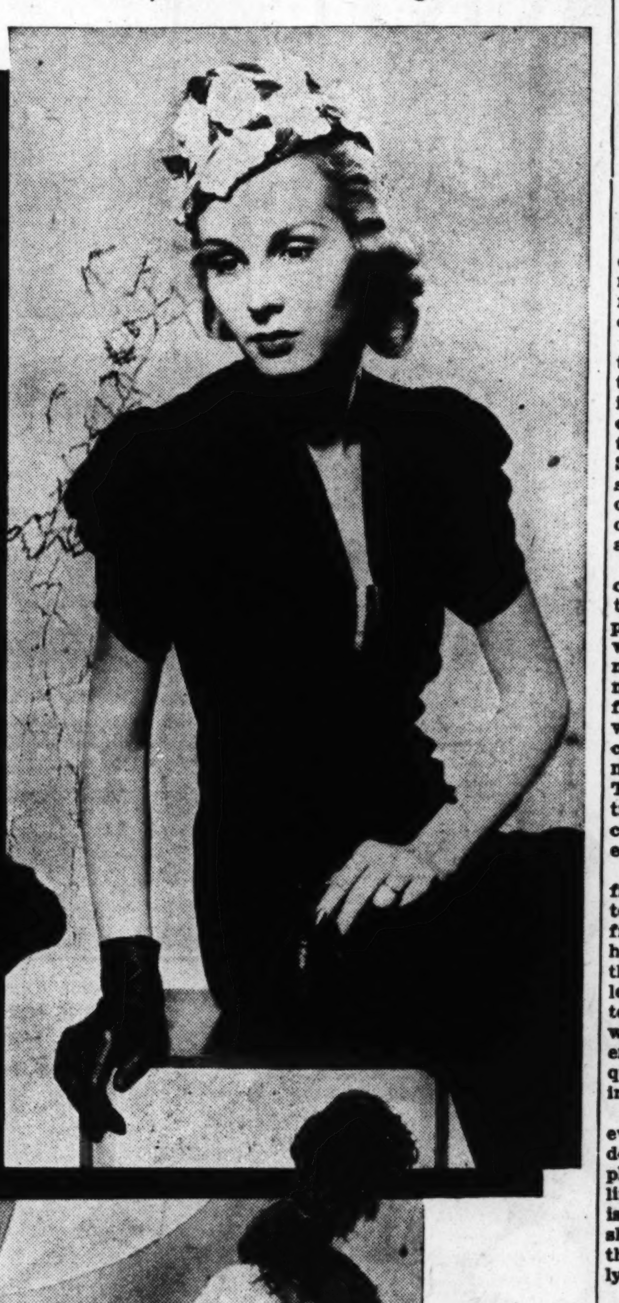
Flowers are used in wide bands to encircle toques, or large clusters of them stand above a pillbox silhouette. Veils fall down to the wrist, or are content with framing the face.

Brims are still being shown by the leading New York designers. But these hats have an off-the-face look, due either to the bonnet shape or the fact that the brim is cut away in the center over the brow. This can be especially dramatic if the eyes are the focal feature of the face.

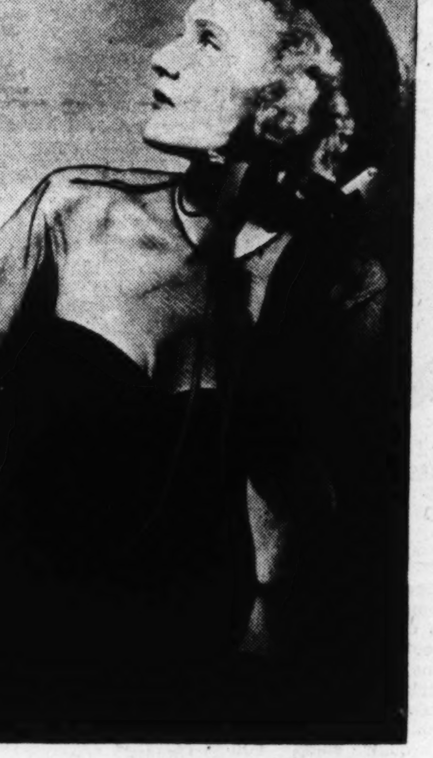
When hats are brightly trimmed, the costume is ever so much more charming if the color of the trim is picked up in glove, in blouse or in dress ornament. Large dress clips to match clips on hats are a nice, new note.



PILLBOXES HAVE BECOME SUDDENLY IMPORTANT IN THE AFTERNOON HAT PICTURE. THE ONE ABOVE IS OF BROWN VELVET, EMBROIDERED ALL OVER IN GOLD THREAD, AND IS MADE PROVOCATIVE BY A CHIN BOW AND PRACTICAL BY A MATCHING HANDBAG.



WIDE IS THE BAND OF WHITE GARDENIAS WHICH ALMOST ENCIRCLES THE BLACK VELVET TOQUE, ABOVE.



FUCHSIA AND PURPLE OSTRICH FEATHERS SWEEP UP FROM THE CROWN OF THE PURPLE FELT AFTERNOON HAT, LEFT.

A GIRL ABOUT TOWN

he may understand why the little woman's hands are not always as fragrant as tube-roses. From a mere glance at the list of ingredients he may also catch on to the reason why such fancy dishes cannot be conjured up from supplies on hand in the scant half-hour between the time the Jones' telephoned that they were stopping by and their arrival on the landing.

The chapter on carving—which the writers hail as "the manliest of arts"—is a special boon to the housewife who has seen many a prime roast of beef mutilated until it was fit for nothing but scrappy hash on Monday, and who, in defense of the budget, is now having the meat sliced before it comes to the table. The fault does not always lie in a dull knife, either. (And anyway, why doesn't the head of the house sharpen it himself? A perfectly adequate steel came with the set, didn't it?)

WE would call the attention of men who cannot be reached by any other appeal—not even by the come-on of the title—to the challenge in the opening paragraphs of chapter 12. "Rarely if ever is the modern male called upon to defend himself, his hearth and dependents with his brawn," say Messrs. Abdullah and Kenny, "but civilization still expects him to bring home the bacon, and justly apportion it according to the wants of his household and guests. It is one of the few duties and privileges still exclusively retained by the modern counterpart of the Lord of the Manor. Therefore it behooves the male sex to hang onto his trappings of past glory, before the women and purveyors of foodstuffs reduce the head of the table to a mere geographical phrase. As it is, too many wives seem to think that the famous expression is 'where Mrs. MacGregor sits, THERE is the head of the table.' Besides, expert carving not only makes meat more appetizing to look at and better to taste, but it also means economy by preventing undue waste."

That's telling your brothers, Abdullah, Kenny!

Tomorrow You'll Wear—

LIGHT coats with dark frocks; favorite colors are string over brown or pastels over black.

Pleats in the hem of your skirt, under skirts with pleated skirt section.

Coats and dresses with back and shoulder in one color, front in second color.

Evening coats in renaissance theme with sleeves caught in a series of small puffs.

Wool dresses with silk tops and smartly checked tweed jackets in contrasting color. Light blue wool, for instance, with printed silk top in blue and dark blue plaid tweed jacket.

Hats with a forward and upward swing, a fashion receiving increasing acceptance.

Evening Frocks Of White are Now in Vogue

The More Ethereal and Frothy They Look, the Greater Their Success.

EVERY girl with more engagements than she can handle is clamoring for a white evening dress. White is the vogue of the moment and the more ethereal and frothy it looks, the greater its success in November and December.

The sheer fabrics such as net, tulle, chiffon and lace are claiming the most attention but taffeta that is light of weight has its exponents, especially when the material is patterned with star dust or tinsel. Some like the bodice plain and the skirt cluttered with briliants while others prefer a top that glistens all over and is joined by a billowy, unadorned skirt.

If chiffon happens to be the choice for the new evening frock, then there is the alternative of pleats or godets to add yards to the width of its hemline. The pleated mode is gaining favor and everyone must admit that it has a certain flattering quality. Chiffon, by the way, can be dressed up with bright colored sashes although it doesn't need any help in supplying glamor. The sashes are a way of adding extra service to a frock because each change of color suggests a different dress entirely.

Marquisette is another of the filmy fabrics that is being used extensively for youthful evening frocks. One interesting material has an embroidered surface so that the result is a matelasse effect. A leaf design forms an allover pattern as well as adding a definite weight to the fabric. Silver thread embroidery enhances other marquisettes that are sufficiently alluring to please young sophisticates.

The majority of these sheer white evening frocks have covered shoulders. The one exception is the pleated dress which follows Grecian lines with a surplice V neckline that is low at front and back and is sleeveless. Short puffed sleeves are the rule and all skirts are extremely bouffant.

Where Students Work Their Way Through College

here is all work and no play. Somehow, somewhere, between classes and studying and construction work and dishwashing and laundry and the hundreds of other jobs these youngsters work at, they find time for fun. Almost every Saturday night there is a dance in the big pleasant living room of Butler Hall. There are special parties on holidays and there are little get-togethers of the French Club, the German Club, and the Home Economics Club. There are three concrete tennis courts for the tennis-minded athletes, and there is archery, track and basketball in competition with neighboring colleges.

In fact the atmosphere of Blackburn is not unlike that of any other school, except that you see no Betty Co-eds in expensive sweaters with a string of pearls or Little Joe Colleges in Gabardine suit coats and gray flannel trousers. Blackburn youngsters are dressed for service and not for style or show-off, and they act like men and women instead of irresponsible kids. They are busy living up to the pledge they signed in September when they came to Carlinville to take their place in this institution: "If admited to Blackburn I promise to be a diligent and honest student and worker. In the event of failure to keep this pledge I agree to give up my place in the self-help community."

This seriousness with which these youngsters attack their studies and work was evident also in their behavior in noon-day chapel. In the small but exquisite Gothic chapel on the third floor of the administration building, I watched the 300 of them listen with you-could-hear-a-pin-drop attention to a sermonette, the text for which was Matthew 5:13 from "The Sermon on the Mount." Probably student groups in chapel have listened since the first university was built to inspirational talks based on "Ye are the salt of the earth," but it is likely that no gathering of college youngsters ever gave a speaker closer attention than these Blackburn students accorded Dr. Hudson.

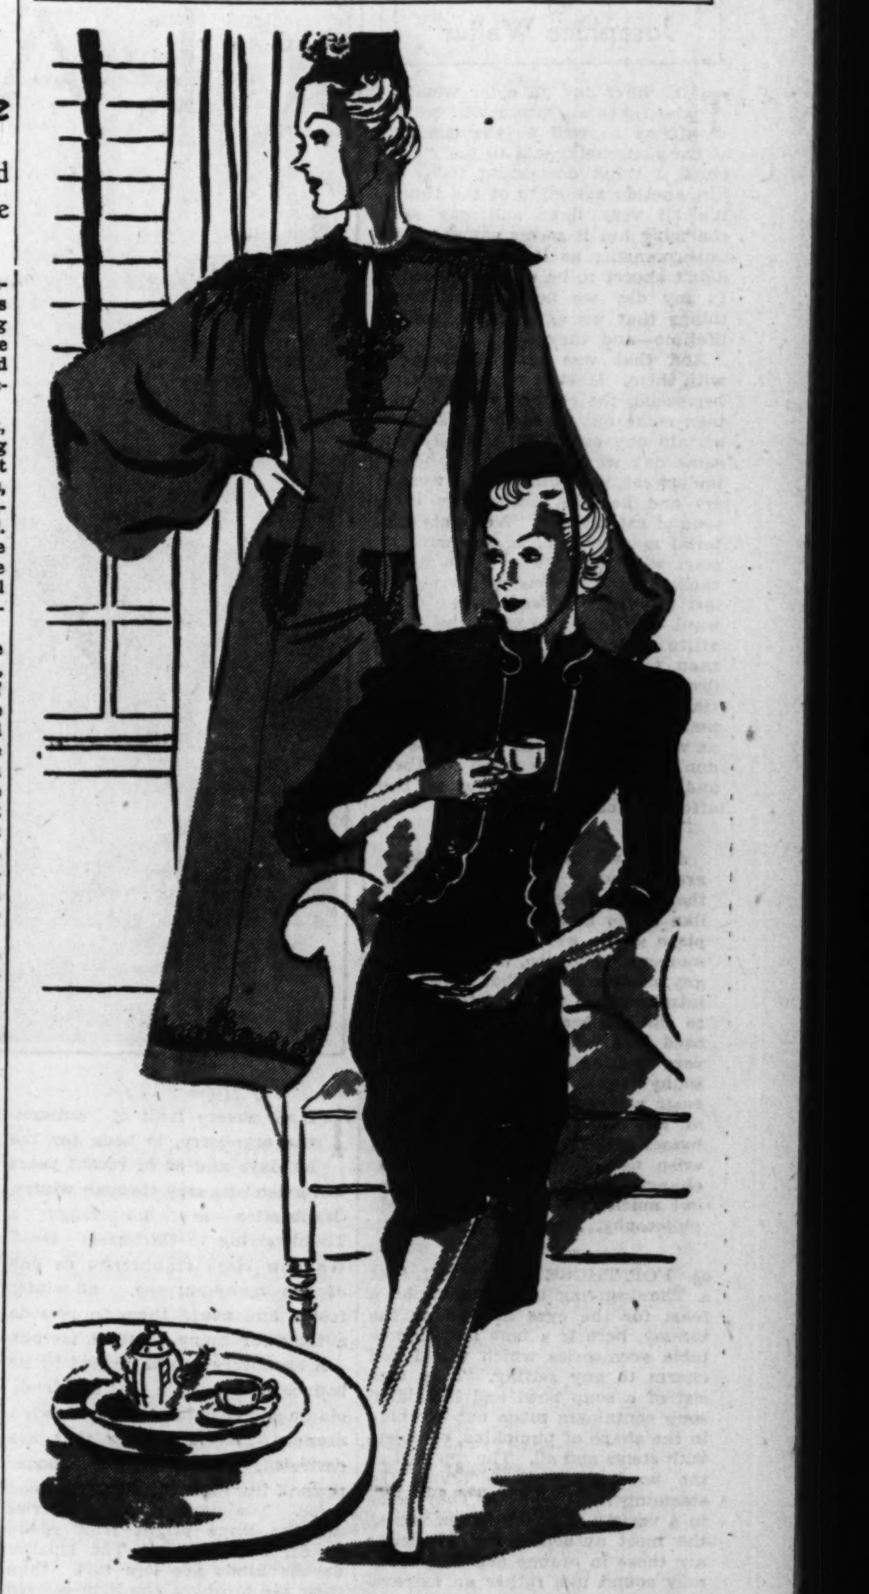
Why? It may be because these 300 students appreciate the fact that they were chosen from among several thousand to attend this college "dedicated to young people who have everything but money."

Cuff on Hem of Skirt

A cuff on the hem of a skirt is something to consider if you are looking for new fashion themes. Several smartly dressed women recently arrived from Europe indorse the novel trimming on narrow wool frocks.

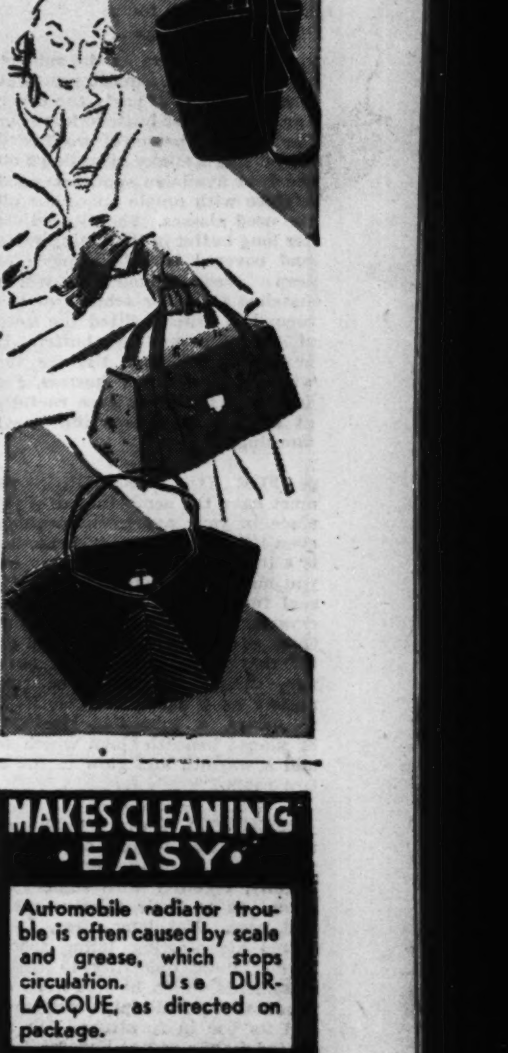
Another little trick of making a costume different is to roll up the sleeves in the casual manner of active sports enthusiasts. Some of the newest dresses have sleeves with this rolled-up feature.

NEW DAYTIME DRESSES



THE DRESS AT TOP EMPLOYS SOUTACHE BRAID IN SCROLL BORDER ON THE COLLAR, BELT, SLEEVES AND HEM OF SKIRT. NOTE THE VOLUMINOUS SLEEVES. THE FABRIC USED IS CELANESE CREPE WITH A WOOLLY LOOK. THE SEATED FIGURE WEARS A TWO-PIECE DRESS USING APPLIQUE IN COLOR IN SCROLL EFFECT DOWN THE FRONT OF THE BLOUSE, CLIMAXED BY TWO VERY HANDSOME VELVET POCKETS AT SIDE. BOTH DRESSES DISPLAY THE CHARM OF THE BELTLESS SILHOUETTE WHICH IS GAINING INCREASED ACCEPTANCE.

HANDBAGS THIS SEASON UNMISTAKABLY LARGER



THE smartly dressed woman today gives as much thought to the handbag she carries as she does to the hat she wears. Handbags are designed to go with a costume. The bag carried with a tweed sports suit is very different from the bag chosen for a soft, afternoon dress; the evening bag carried with a filmy net is very different from the bag chosen for a trim lame.

On one idea, however, all handbags agree. In size they are unmistakably larger. From the little evening pouch in beads to the business-like daytime bag in calf, proportions grow definitely important. Inside fittings, too, are cleverly styled so that the new bag serves as a reticule for everything from lipstick to engagement book.

Color appears in bags as an indispensable accent to the ensemble. A bright bag and matching gloves worn with a mink coat brings distinction to this otherwise classic costume.

Unusual fabrics, too, appear in the new handbags, though calf, suede and crocodile continue to hold first place. These leathers, however, are used as a fabric with pleats, shirrings and stitchings to give a soft look to the daytime bags.

Handles, too, get longer. From Schiaparelli's shoulder strap to a very sturdy double top handle, the bags are easy and comfortable to carry.

Unusual shapes with a deep nod to the modern inspire many of the new afternoon bags, while the box and satchel are copied for daytime bags.

The business-like gloves and satchel-shaped bag shown in the drawing meet exactly the requirements of the modern club woman. The single button suede glove matches perfectly the color of the sculptured calf bag which is large enough to hold the requirements for an overnight visit, if necessary. The bag is fitted with roomy pockets for lipstick, compact, comb and cigarettes.

The afternoon bags in suede adapt the flower pot and peach basket shapes to charming purpose. These are bags to carry with one's bridge frock and dinner dress. They are all bags of importance that women like as gifts at Christmas.

LET ME SUGGEST

by

Josephine Walter

THE other day an older woman, who takes an interest in world affairs as well as the conduct of her household, said to me, "You know, I think decorating today is just another symptom of the times. It's all very light and gay and charming but it seems somehow so impermanent; as if the occupants didn't expect to be there very long. In my day we bought and used things that we expected to last a lifetime—and they did."

And that was just the trouble with them. Most of us can remember seeing the old red velvet hangings come out of moth balls on a certain day every fall (usually the same day we had to put on heavy underwear, regardless of the weather) and hearing mother say in a tone of satisfaction, "Well, this material may have been expensive to start with but it was worth it because these curtains will probably last forever." Nowadays, we don't want our houses to wear the same attire year after year any more than we want to wear the same dress forever. It may sound extravagant but it really isn't for the materials we select may not wear as well as the old red velvet but we don't pay nearly as much for them and therefore we feel that we can afford to change oftener.

Also, we are apt to move around much more often than the last generation did and we like to do new things to fit the place where we are living at the moment. Then, too, we prefer the gay, modern colors that have been introduced in the past few years to the somber colors formerly used that were practical but not very exciting. The modern philosophy seems to be to buy good basic pieces that we will not tire of, but change the moods of our homes with bright, gay colors and crisp new fabrics that may be changed every few years without much cost, and a darn good philosophy, I calls it.

● FOR THOSE WHO FEEL that a Thanksgiving table should be a feast for the eyes as well as the tummy, here is a note about some table accessories which would add charm to any setting. They consist of a soup bowl and individual soup containers made out of china in the shape of pumpkins, complete with stems and all. The top part of the bowl lifts off to reveal the steaming soup within. They come in a variety of colors but of course the most authentic and attractive are those in orange and brown. It may sound like rather an extravagant idea for Thanksgiving dinner but there are many other times during the fall season when they could be used effectively, or they might become one of those family traditions that the world is rather lacking in today.

Much simpler and practically at no cost, you may make your Thanksgiving table festive with a pumpkin of the garden variety and four oranges. The pumpkin may be hollowed out with a handle left across the top and filled with a variety of fruits and nuts and the oranges may be made into practical candle-holders merely by cutting a hole in the top of them and putting in a candle, preferably in a matching orange tone.

And, while we're on the subject of tables, I saw a most practical idea at a cocktail party the other day. The clever hostess, knowing the average person's propensity for putting a sticky glass down on the first available spot, arranged a place with ample space for all the used glasses. She cleared off her long buffet in the dining room and covered it with a piece of deep green linoleum which matched the color scheme of the room and exactly fitted the lines of the top of the buffet. It proved an adequate bar for the whole party and the hostess, I'm sure, didn't have to gaze ruefully at all her table tops the next morning.

● FOR YOU FIRE BUGS who must have the semblance of a fireplace in your apartment or home, even if it won't actually burn, here is a little suggestion that may help you not to regret the absence of a real fire. Fill your fireplace with crystal logs which will add something of the same sparkle and glitter that is provided by an actual fire. These logs may be used merely as a decoration, or, if you so desire, a concealed light may be placed beneath them which will add a warmth and glow to the entire room.

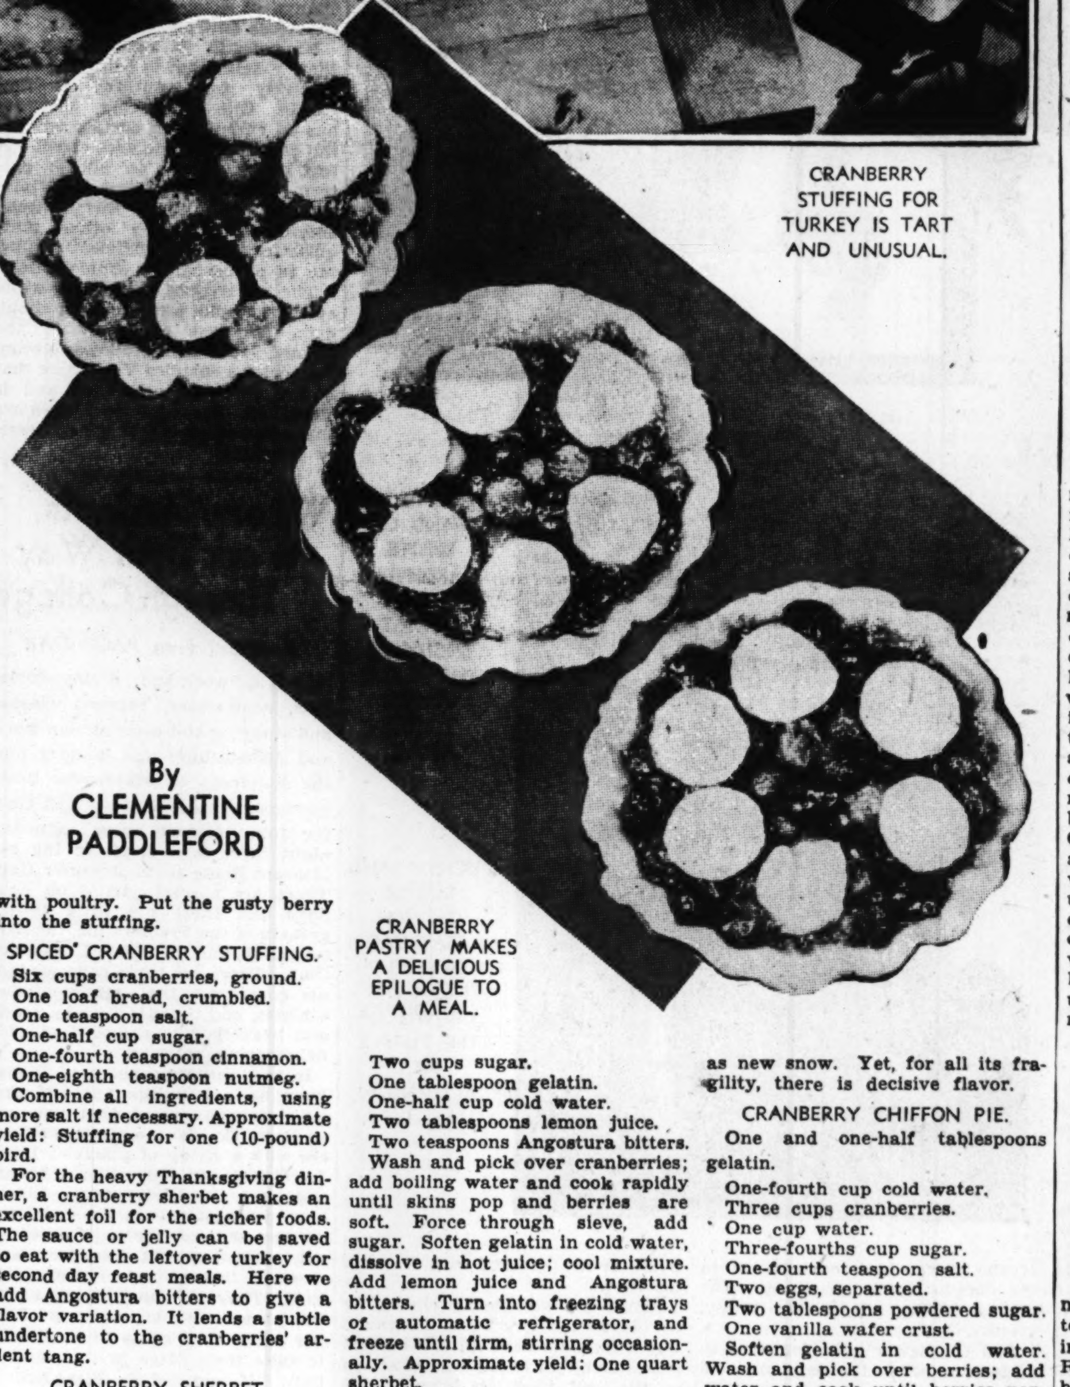
RECENTLY, I wrote in this column, at some length, on the subject of the various species of mahogany, together with some statements as to their relative merits and uses. Not long after, I received a protesting letter from a lumber man, objecting to certain statements which he felt were detrimental to Philippine mahogany and its use in furniture. He also quoted from a recent Federal Trade Commission hearing which stated that "Philippine mahogany was entitled to the use of the word 'mahogany' as long as the prefix 'Philippine' was used." I assure my correspondent and all others who read my article that I in no way intended to be disparaging to "Philippine mahogany" which is often used in preference to other woods because of its beautiful grain and figure.

CRANBERRIES!



CRANBERRY STUFFING FOR TURKEY IS TART AND UNUSUAL.

CRANBERRY PASTRY MAKES A DELICIOUS EPILOGUE TO A MEAL.

By

CLEMENTINE PADDLEFORD

THAT cheery fruit of autumn. the cranberry, is back for the holidays and as of recent years will extend its stay through winter. Cranberries are no longer a Thanksgiving to Christmas treat. We now class cranberries as one of the many-purpose, all-winter fruits, and adapt them to provide a tang for many unusual recipes.

A cranberry can be judged by its bounce. Only those that are fresh, plump and firm have rebound when dropped. Avoid berries that are shriveled, soft or moist. Choose those with high luster and good color. The most common berries are the large bright fruit ruddy as St. Nick's nose. The smaller darker kinds are less tart than their big brothers, the light-colored sorts. In the markets the berries are kept in a dry, cool place until they are sold. When the fruit is delivered to you, hurry it into the refrigerator, otherwise moisture in the warm kitchen air will condense on the berries and cause them to sweat and decay.

Bright color and sparkling taste make this berry an excellent appetizer. Use the bottled juice thoroughly chilled to precede a roast meat dinner, either alone or mixed with sweet pineapple juice, with cider, or with ginger ale. Merrily it smacks you on the tongue. Colorful is the appetizer of chilled grapefruit sections well doused with the red juice.

And here is a recipe for processing your own cranberry juice from the fresh or the quick-frozen fruit.

CRANBERRY COCKTAIL.

Four cups cranberries.
One cup sugar.
Six cups water.
One-third cup lemon juice.

Wash, pick over and grind cranberries. Add sugar and water, bring to boiling point and boil three minutes. Strain, add lemon juice and chill. Approximate yield: One and one-half quarts cocktail. The recipe may be tripled, if desired, and the cocktail bottled.

Cranberry sauce and jelly are not the only cranberry relishes to serve with poultry. Put the gusty berry into the stuffing.

SPICED CRANBERRY STUFFING.

Six cups cranberries, ground.
One loaf bread, crumbled.
One teaspoon salt.
One-half cup sugar.
One-fourth teaspoon cinnamon.
One-eighth teaspoon nutmeg.

Combine all ingredients, using more salt if necessary. Approximate yield: Stuffing for one (10-pound) bird.

For the heavy Thanksgiving dinner, a cranberry sherbet makes an excellent foil for the richer foods. The sauce or jelly can be saved to eat with the leftover turkey for second day feast meals. Here we add Angostura bitters to give a flavor variation. It lends a subtle undertone to the cranberries' ardent tang.

CRANBERRY SHERBET.

Four cups cranberries.
Three cups boiling water.
Two cups sugar.
One tablespoon gelatin.
One-half cup cold water.
Two tablespoons lemon juice.
Two teaspoons Angostura bitters.

Wash and pick over cranberries; add boiling water and cook rapidly until skins pop and berries are soft. Force through sieve, add sugar. Soften gelatin in cold water, dissolve in hot juice; cool mixture. Add lemon juice and Angostura bitters. Turn into freezing trays of automatic refrigerator, and freeze until firm, stirring occasionally. Approximate yield: One quart sherbet.

Have you tried the berries in muffins? Break into one of these hot from the oven, and the steamy substance is almost heady with the penetrating fragrance of the fruit.

CRANBERRY MUFFINS.

Two cups sifted flour.
Three teaspoons baking powder.
One-half teaspoon salt.
One-fourth cup sugar.
One cup cranberries.
One egg, slightly beaten.
Three-fourths cup milk.
One-fourth cup butter, melted.

Mix and sift together flour, baking powder, salt and sugar three times. Wash and pick over berries, chop very fine and add to dry ingredients. Combine egg, milk and butter. Add to dry ingredients, mixing only until all flour is dampened. Turn into greased muffin tins and bake in hot oven (425 degrees) 25 minutes or until done. Serve hot. Approximate yield: Twelve medium-sized muffins.

Among desserts, cranberry takes a leading place. The traditional New England cranberry pie looks much like one of red cherry, the open-faced kind, with latticed strips of pastry across the top. Almost as frequently seen is the compromise pie—cranberry and raisin for those who like a sweeter dessert. Make the old favorites but also try this new model cranberry chiffon pie developed in our kitchen. It is really a cranberry sponge, the cooled, sweetened cranberry juice stiffened with gelatin and made fluffy with beaten whites of egg. It comes forth the color of strawberry ice cream and as soft as new snow. Yet, for all its fragility, there is decisive flavor.

CRANBERRY CHIFFON PIE.

One and one-half tablespoons gelatin.
One-fourth cup cold water.
Three cups cranberries.
One cup water.
Three-fourths cup sugar.
One-fourth teaspoon salt.
Two eggs, separated.
Two tablespoons powdered sugar.
One vanilla wafer crust.

Soften gelatin in cold water. Wash and pick over berries; add water and cook until berries pop. Force through sieve. Add sugar and salt to strained pulp. Pour small amount over slightly beaten egg yolks, mixing well. Return to remaining mixture and cook over hot water 10 minutes, stirring constantly. Add gelatin and stir until dissolved. Chill until slightly thickened. Beat egg whites until stiff, add powdered sugar gradually and beat until mixture stands in peaks. Fold into gelatin mixture, turn into crumb crust and chill until firm. Approximate yield: One (8-inch) pie. Garnish with sweetened whipped cream if desired.

Steamed cranberry pudding is "tops" for a winter meal, especially if accompanied by a hot sauce.

THE PROPER CARE OF GLOVES

FREQUENT launderings, so often disregarded in the care of gloves, particularly those of dark hues, is necessary to remove the surface soil before it becomes embedded in the pores of the leather. The film of perspiration, too, should be washed away before it rots the leather. Furthermore, since we are accustomed to sending gloves to the dry cleaners, we should keep in mind that once cleaned this way, they cannot be washed successfully at a later date.

The first time you launder gloves, test the stability of the color by sticking a glove finger into a glass of lukewarm water (90 degrees Fahrenheit). Squeeze the leather to see if it bleeds. If the color runs out, use cooler water for washing and work double quick time.

To shorten the washing time, use two bowls. Make a deep live suds of a mild flake or bead soap in one; fill the other with clear water of the same temperature. Put the gloves on your hands and plunge them into the suds. Use a soft complexion brush to apply the soap to soiled spots, and avoid rubbing leather against leather. Unsnap or spread the cuffs slightly and let the sudsy water flow inside to remove the hand soil. Then dip the gloved hand into the clear water and rinse inside and out. Use the brush as necessary to hasten the removal of suds. Pat your hands with a towel or unstarched cheesecloth to remove as much moisture as possible. Roll the gloves off the hands up to the second knuckle, then pull off gently by the fingertip. Grasp the gloves by the cuffs, blow into the fingers and shape to proper length. The handling of chamois and doeskin tends to stretch the soft leather out of proportion. For this reason, some prefer to wash these leathers off the hands. A final rinse in suds will be useful in retaining the soft finish.

Proper drying is essential. Gloves badly handled are stiff and hard like papershell almonds. First, lay the gloves flat on a towel or a rack covered with cheesecloth. Let them dry at room temperature. Two-toned gloves or those of a predetermined bleeding color, should be immediately stuffed with white tissue paper. Likewise colored and contrasting stitching should be wiped.

Most important is the need for smoothing and pressing the gloves with the fingers to restore the softness and pliability of the leather before it is thoroughly dry.

Sandwich Cake, Good for Late Buffet Supper

It Would Also Be an Interesting Innovation for Cocktail Parties.

PERMIT me to introduce myself. I am the sandwich cake. I look like a sweet, luscious dessert, and I am a newcomer in your kitchen, though I feel confident that I shall be a frequent visitor at your house once you have learned how simple it is to conjure me up, how useful I am, and last but not least what a reputation you will gain when you serve me to your friends.

I am an interesting innovation for cocktail parties, and I come forth for a late buffet supper, crisp and fresh from the refrigerator, my fillings improved by mellowing. Serve me in thin slices—cut with a very sharp knife—and provide a fork that I may be relished with dignity.

I shall explain just how to make what is inside of me and then I shall describe what's on the surface.

BASE

One loaf whole wheat bread.
One loaf white bread.
One-fourth pound butter, creamed.

FILLINGS

No. 1

One can (8 ounces) sardines.
Two tablespoons lemon juice.

No. 2

One package (3 ounces) cream cheese.
One teaspoon grated onion or chopped chives.

No. 3

One jar (2 ounces) black caviar.

No. 4

One-fourth pound liverwurst.
Two teaspoons anchovy paste.

No. 5

One can (8 ounces) crabmeat.
Two tablespoons French dressing.

FROSTING

One-half pound butter.
Three tablespoons anchovy paste.

GARNISH

Cream cheese.
Hard-cooked egg.
Olive slices.
Red caviar.

Chill bread in refrigerator over night. Cut lengthwise in slices one-fourth inch thick; remove crusts. Place two slices side by side, place over them an eight-inch cake pan, and trim bread to an eight-inch circle. Repeat until seven circles are made. Butter slightly. Place circle of white bread on chop plate and cover with a paste of sardine and lemon juice. Top with a circle of whole wheat bread (placed so break in the center comes at right angles to the break in the slice below) and spread on this a paste of cream cheese and chives. Repeat, alternating white and whole wheat bread until all fillings are used. Cream butter with anchovy paste, and frost top and sides of cake very thinly. Place in refrigerator until set. Garnish with rosettes of cream cheese, slices of hard-cooked egg and stuffed olives and sprinkle with red caviar. Chill at least two hours, and cut in thin wedges, using a very sharp knife. Approximate yield, 25 to 30 servings.

Ham Cakes

Ingredients:
Two cups left-over ground ham.
One-half cup bread crumbs.
Two eggs.
One teaspoon prepared mustard.
Two teaspoons chopped onions.
Dash of salt.
Five tablespoons shortening.
Six slices canned pineapple.

Mix ham, eggs, bread crumbs, mustard, onion and salt. Shape into six flat patties. Melt shortening in skillet. Brown pineapple slices. Remove pineapple, then brown the ham patties. Place a ham patty on each pineapple ring.

DATE AND CABBAGE SALAD.

One head cabbage.
Three red apples.
Twelve dates.
One-half cup salted peanuts.
One-fourth cup finely chopped green pepper.
One cup mayonnaise.

Wash cabbage, remove large outer leaves and use for a nest. Shred inner portion very fine. Cut, core and chop apples; cut dates. Toss cabbage, apples, dates, nuts and green pepper well together. Heap in nest of cabbage leaves. Serve with mayonnaise. Approximate yield, six portions.

Brightening Dining Room

By Elizabeth Boykin

"WHEN I visualize Thanksgiving in our dowdy old dining room, I get so discouraged," writes a woman who likes a smart room but who doesn't have a million dollars to spend getting it. "Please give me some kind of a get-style-quick recipe for the dining room . . . I can't do anything about the furniture—it's good enough anyway (at least the table and buffet are nice—mahogany Eighteenth Century). My husband has said to go ahead and get a new rug. What shall it be! And I'm going to whip out some fresh curtains between now and then. The walls are rather a soft green and not bad in themselves, I think, if it weren't for the present dreary curtains and threadbare rug. Now, then—what shall my new purchases be? Practical, of course, they must be, and not too expensive."

Why not get your rug in a slightly deeper shade of the same green that you have on the walls. That would be a safe choice for the future—since a good green is always usable and adaptable with other things. And for the present it will give the room a feeling of spaciousness to have the walls and floors blend in tone. Have it a carpet, if possible, and in one of those soft all-over patterns that look plain but don't show footmarks. Then buy yards and yards of a lovely flowered chintz in a big scale pattern. That will do more than anything to give the room a real lift. This might be on a light plum ground, on a cream ground or on a soft green ground with lots of warm garden colors in the pattern. Use this for the draperies and, if necessary, for slip covers on the chairs if they're looking weary.

What a setting for the autumn fruits and flowers and leaves! It would be nice to have some big copper bowls and pitchers for making interesting heartening arrangements against your greens.

—o-o—

"NOBODY IN OUR FAMILY can bear to throw away an old magazine," remarked the woman of the house, "and the worst part is that we all throw them around, pile them high or clutter our desks with them. Simply because we get a lot of scientific magazines, gardening magazines and the like that have something special for somebody to refer to some day—maybe. Anyway, we have to keep them and I'd like some idea for doing it neatly and so back numbers can be pulled out without disrupting a whole pile."

The best method we know of is to have a series of racks built similar to book shelves except that the shelves are further apart and sloping with a ridge at the lower edge to keep the magazines from sliding off. These can be quite as nice looking as book shelves if they're properly built. Cabinets built in below as book shelves are excellent places for keeping files of old magazines out of sight but handy. Then of course, for smaller quantities—or current numbers—there is a wide selection of magazine racks, Canterburys and end tables with magazine troughs. Some have handles that make them easy to carry around. If the situation gets too bad, why not have a private magazine rack for each member of the family? Maybe that will help keep favorite issues off the floor.

How to Handle Garlic Properly As a Seasoning

"It Must Be Used With Discretion in Method and Amount."

By Esther Foley

GARLIC has been part of the diet of many powerful nations. The Egyptians ate it when they built the pyramids and so did the marching legions of ancient Rome. But to us, garlic means odor even before it means flavor, and it will as long as it is carelessly handled. It must be used with discretion in method and in amount.

In its natural form garlic comes wrapped up carefully enough, the tiny cloves held together in a bulb-like cluster. Each clove can be separated without cutting into the bulb, so very little odor escapes from garlic until the clove is pared for use. But then it does escape, strong, appetizing and not at all unpleasant, and with it a small amount of liquid which stains anything it touches, the knife, the board, the hands.

It is the result of this staining, and not garlic itself which can wrinkle a sensitive nose. But because garlic is a priceless flavor ingredient and has been used in many countries for many centuries, a few tricks in the handling will make you want to use it instead of skipping it in the recipes which call for a "clove of garlic, minced."

—o-o—

A SPECIAL BOARD, labeled "Garlic and Onions" should hang over the sink in every kitchen. Never use it for anything else. Break a clove of garlic from the bulb, and holding it with a fork or with a piece of paper toweling, peel it; then, still protecting the hands with the paper or the fork cut the clove into tissue thin slices. These will readily brown and practically dissolve in the cooking mixture, and it need not be chopped any finer. Use garlic this way in sauces, gravies, or rice dishes. If a bit of garlic does come in contact with the hands, rinse them at once in cold running water, and after the cooking is over, rub the finger tips well with lemon juice and wash with warm water and a mild soap.

The wooden cutting board and the paring knife (use a stainless steel knife) should also be rinsed in cold water before being washed in hot soapy water to prevent a clinging odor.

When using garlic for French dressing slice clove crosswise, without peeling it, and holding it by a fork wipe the cut surface around the mixing bowl. This gives enough flavor for most tastes, but when a stronger flavor is desired, peel the clove and drop a small segment of garlic in the dressing and let it stand for a minute or an hour as desired. Remove it before serving. This can be done also for gravies or sauces, but be sure to strain the sauce.

—o-o—

TISSUE THIN SLIVERS of garlic, crushed with the salt, sugar, pepper and other seasonings make tomato cocktail an individual thing.

Tiny slivers of garlic, slipped under the skin of a roast of lamb, not in any specified amount, but just here and there to suit the taste, will give emphasis to the flavor, making it almost as hearty as beef. And, lacking that, a bit of garlic cooked with the gravy will do fine things.

Lamb chops or steaks are improved in flavor if rubbed with a cut clove of garlic before broiling and baby turkeys and broilers develop a most amazing flavor and tenderness if rubbed with a cut clove of garlic and a bit of cooking oil, and allowed to stand one hour at room temperature before cooking.

For those who still fear, there is a garlic salt and a liquid garlic now on the market to substitute for fresh garlic. But there are those for whom the mystery of "just the right amount" will keep garlic fans forever.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.

WHEN I was speechmaking before the Twentieth Century Club in Buffalo not long ago, I mentioned in my rambling remarks that my first knowledge of that thriving town came when I was a small girl in Manchester, N. H. and was an earnest solicitor of Larkin soap orders—one of the foremost pursuits of my generation, whether in pigtails or short pants. A few days later I was happily to receive a cordial note from Mrs. Frances Larkin Esty, daughter of the founder of that concern, the John D. Larkin Soap Co.

Mrs. Esty regretted that I had lacked time to visit the plant, and so do I, for the name "Larkin" was famous in my New England childhood and I wish that New York youngsters had something like Larkin solicitation to keep them from playing softball under the wheels of taxis and beer trucks. My helpmate says that "Larkin orders" were equally famous in his Cleveland boyhood, but that he never went out for the soap varsity, being the shy, poetic type, and not commercial.

—o-o—

Manchester was smart and thrifty after the New England fashion, and the school board furnished only desks and benches. So our teacher organised Larkin teams, and her scholars decorated the grim room with the premiums — I remember Landseer's "Stag at Bay" with deep loathing, as it looked down on my defeats in arithmetic. From that it was but a step to private enterprise. Not only did my commercial drive furnish our parlor with an elegantly hideous music cabinet, with a mandolin and harp in gold across the mahogany front, but my "Larkin orders" brought me the skates which made me the Sonja Henie of the icehouse pond.

How to Handle Garlic Properly As a Seasoning

"It Must Be Used With Discretion in Method and Amount."

By Esther Foley

GARLIC has been part of the diet of many powerful nations. The Egyptians ate it when they built the pyramids and so did the marching legions of ancient Rome. But to us, garlic means odor even before it means flavor, and it will as long as it is carelessly handled. It must be used with discretion in method and in amount.

In its natural form garlic comes wrapped up carefully enough, the tiny cloves held together in a bulk-like cluster. Each clove can be separated without cutting into the bulb, so very little odor escapes from garlic until the clove is pared for use. But then it does escape, strong, appetizing and not at all unpleasant, and with it a small amount of liquid which stains anything it touches, the knife, the board, the hands.

It is the result of this staining, and not garlic itself which can wrinkle a sensitive nose. But because garlic is a priceless flavor ingredient and has been used in many countries for many centuries, a few tricks in the handling will make you want to use it instead of skipping it in the recipes which call for a "clove of garlic, minced."

—o-o—

A SPECIAL BOARD, labeled "Garlic and Onions" should hang over the sink in every kitchen. Never use it for anything else. Break a clove of garlic from the bulb, and holding it with a fork or with a piece of paper toweling, peel it; then, still protecting the hands with the paper or the fork cut the clove into tissue thin slices. These will readily brown and practically dissolve in the cooking mixture, and it need not be chopped any finer. Use garlic this way in sauces, gravies, or rice dishes. If a bit of garlic does come in contact with the hands, rinse them at once in cold running water, and after the cooking is over, rub the finger tips well with lemon juice and wash with warm water and a mild soap.

The wooden cutting board and the paring knife (use a stainless steel knife) should also be rinsed in cold water before being washed in hot soapy water to prevent a clinging odor.

When using garlic for French dressing slice clove crosswise, without peeling it, and holding it by a fork wipe the cut surface around the mixing bowl. This gives enough flavor for most tastes, but when a stronger flavor is desired, peel the clove and drop a small segment of garlic in the dressing and let it stand for a minute or an hour as desired. Remove it before serving. This can be done also for gravies or sauces, but be sure to strain the sauce.

—o-o—

TISSUE THIN SLIVERS of garlic, crushed with the salt, sugar, pepper and other seasonings make tomato cocktail an individual thing.

Tiny slivers of garlic, slipped under the skin of a roast of lamb, not in any specified amount, but just here and there to suit the taste, will give emphasis to the flavor, making it almost as hearty as beef. And, lacking that, a bit of garlic cooked with the gravy will do fine things.

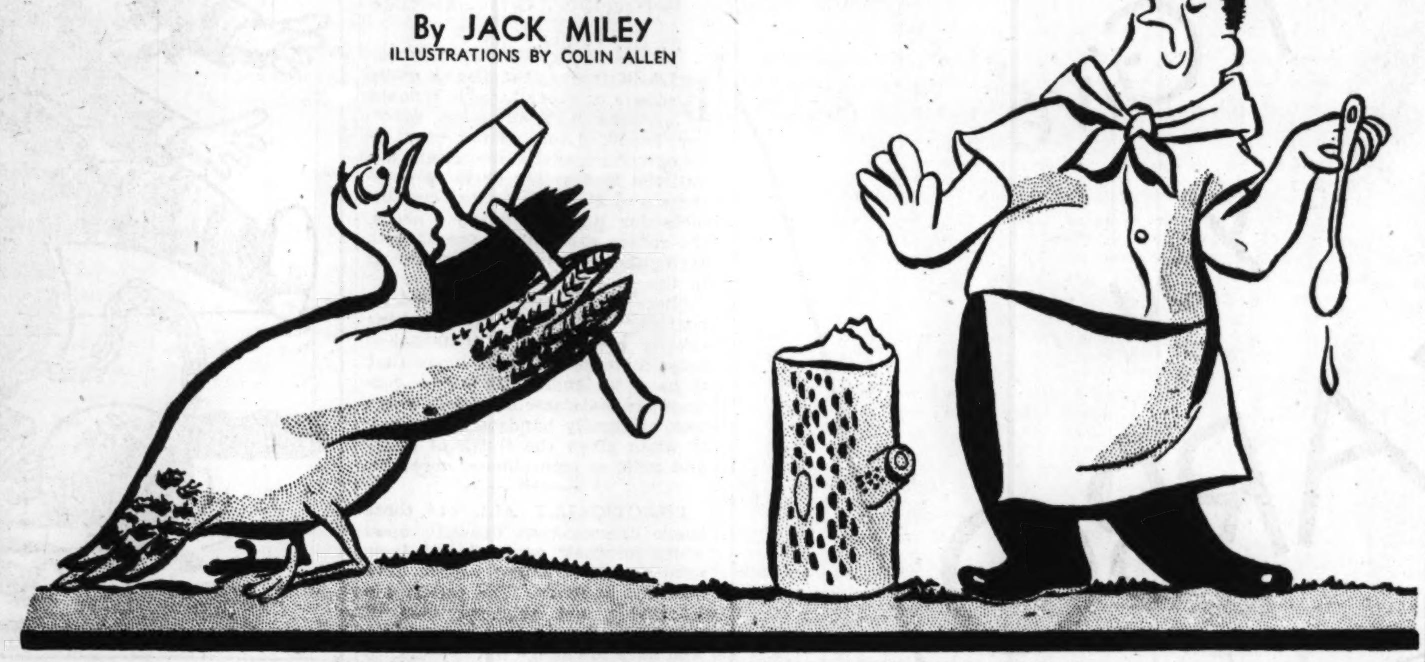
FOUND: A MAN Who Hates TURKEY

The Indians Ate This Bird, and Look What Happened to Them, Challenges Gene Fowler

By JACK MILEY

ILLUSTRATIONS BY COLIN ALLEN

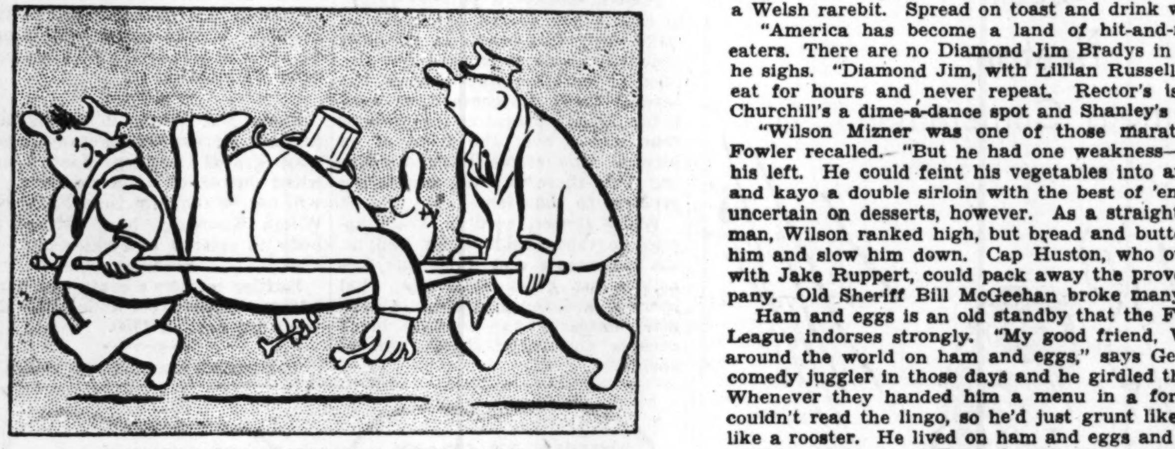


HE REFUSES TO HAVE ANYTHING TO DO WITH TURKEY AT ANY TIME.

WITH Thanksgiving day so near you could hit it with a well-aimed indigestion pellet, an anti-turkey-eating crusade has been lunched—pardon, we mean launched—by that tireless tradition smasher and nose-thumber-at-custom, Gene Fowler.

Eager to aid his fellow man with his $2750 weekly movie scenarist's salary and the rapidly accumulating royalties of his new best-selling novel, "Salute to Yesterday," Fowler has decided that the turkey must go—and he vows he doesn't mean down the human gullet or craw.

A former Denver and New York newspaper reporter who struck it rich in studios, Gene explains that to be anybody in Hollywood, you must espouse a cause. Parlor pinks like Jimmy Cagney and Joan Crawford are all exercised over the Spanish situation. Others are het up about China and Japan. "But I wanted something nearer home," says Fowler, "so I decided to come out with head down and fists flying against the turkey!"



"WHITE MEAT IS ESPECIALLY DANGEROUS."

This backwoods Lucius Beebe hails the humble hamburger as Lucullan fare.

A plain meat and potato man himself—with plenty of gravy—Fowler is conducting his campaign to get the gobbler through field workers on Broadway, stump speakers in Hollywood and missionaries in such key cities as Boll Weevil, Tenn.; What Cheer, Ia., and West Whixtree, Neb.

"The turkey is nothing more than a grounded buzzard with a press agent. Indians ate turkey and where are they today? I'll tell you—they're in the Santa Fe Railroad station at Albuquerque, selling Newark-made beads and moccasins to us tourists who come through there on the Chief!

"And this dreadful tragedy befell the noble red men because the Aborigines gorged themselves on turkey meat until they lost their hold on the country. Those foxy Pilgrims plied them with turkey until they were in a drumstick stupor—and then they knocked their brains out! How long has it been since Haskell has had a good football team? Look what turkey did to poor Jim Thorpe! The white meat is especially dangerous if used to excess. It weakens the moral fiber and destroys character."

Fowler has enlisted the services of a distinguished group of deputies in his giblet vendetta. Those who are carrying the banner in Gene's pin feather program include such notables as Shirley Temple, Bill Fields, Mae West, John Barrymore, Myrna Loy, Bill Powell, Clark Gable, Joe Louis (a fried chicken advocate at all times), Bill Robinson (like Joe, another chicken champ), Jim Braddock (who represents the corned beef and cabbage bloc), Jim Londos, the grunt-and-groan king (a stromberry pie and rawbif connoisseur of international fame), Postmaster-General Jim Farley (who strings along with Braddock on the Irish turkey), Rudy Vallee (who is lyrical about the New England Boiled Dinner), Irvin S. Cobb (the last of the mauve decade trenchermen), and many others of stage, screen and politics.

Gene's idea of superior eating, the dish which will grace the Fowler table next Thursday, is a delicacy he devised himself and which he describes as the Fireman's Sandwich. Simple to prepare, easy to digest and a dish that can be served without fear of criticism in the smartest mixed company. Fowler confesses this recipe for four:

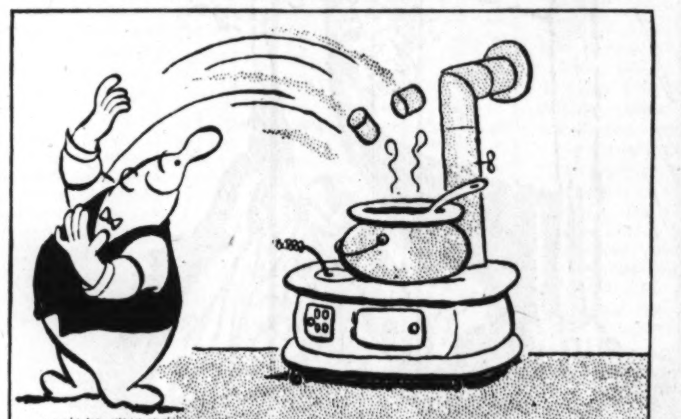
"You mince three onions finely, put them in a pan and cook carefully. Don't let them brown but cook them thoroughly. Then throw in a can of corned beef. Then a can of tomato soup. Then a good stiff drink of applejack. Stir and cook like a Welsh rarebit. Spread on toast and drink with cold beer.

"America has become a land of hit-and-run or drug store eaters. There are no Diamond Jim Bradys in the league today." he sighs. "Diamond Jim, with Lillian Russell at his side, would eat for hours and never repeat. Rector's is a soda fountain, Churchill's a dime-a-dance spot and Shanley's a haberdashery.

"Wilson Mizner was one of those marathon masticator's," Fowler recalled. "But he had one weakness—he couldn't eat to his left. He could feint his vegetables into an opening, though, and kayo a double sirloin with the best of 'em. He was a little uncertain on desserts, however. As a straight meat and potato man, Wilson ranked high, but bread and butter used to confuse him and slow him down. Cap Huston, who owned the Yankees with Jake Ruppert, could pack away the provender in fast company. Old Sheriff Bill McGeehan broke many a waiter's arm."

Ham and eggs is an old standby that the Fowler Anti-Turkey League indorses strongly. "My good friend, W. C. Fields, went around the world on ham and eggs," says Gene. "Fields was a comedy juggler in those days and he girdled the globe on a tour. Whenever they handed him a menu in a foreign country, Bill couldn't read the lingo, so he'd just grunt like a pig and cackle like a rooster. He lived on ham and eggs and gained 40 pounds.

The real cause of Fowler's antipathy to turkey goes back to his childhood in Colorado. "My grandpappy, old Norman Wheeler, used to shoot wild turkey and that was nearly all we had to eat, except when grandpappy knocked off a deer out of season and we switched to venison. There's another foul dish for you—venison! My grandpappy, who failed equally well at anything he tried—farming, storekeeping and prospecting—didn't have much Abercrombie and Fitch in him. He loved nothing better than to blast away with his blunderbuss at sitting quail.



"A CAN OF CORNED BEEF, THEN A CAN OF SOUP."

"Youthful hardships are just a few of the reasons why I don't like turkey. That bird is a fraud and a delusion—just like grandpappy!"

SATIN PLAYING VERSATILE ROLE

SATIN is proving to be one of the most versatile fabrics of the year and equally as successful when used for footwear or hats as it is for dresses. Housecoats, too, illustrate the attractiveness of the sleek surfaced material.

Among the new fashions on display in St. Louis shops are satin ensembles consisting of hats and bags. Occasionally they are accompanied by footwear, especially if the accessories are intended for evening wear. Variously designed turbans ranging from the skyscraping peaked cap to the little pillbox are being made of satin. The style which permits of soft drapery is seen most frequently and shows the fabric to best advantage. Bags also display the draped emphasis. Black, of course, is featured in the sleek ensembles.

Dresses that are made of satin include both daytime and evening models. The popularity of satin daytime dresses is unusual at this time of year because satin is regarded as an early autumn fashion. Quite contrary to the rule, the satin dresses being featured now are forerunners of another season. Especially striking are printed satins, available in street patterns as well as after-dark types. Black backgrounds upon which are slashed exotic flower designs of white and colors suggest winter resort modes but also interest for wear under winter coats. Any number of colorful prints as well as subtle shades are displayed in evening frocks of the satin.

It doesn't matter how much a woman wishes to pay for a housecoat this season, she can get one that is made of satin. There are inexpensive models of synthetic production appearing in the favorite bright shades, while elaborate trimming and novelty weaves characterize the more expensive types. Quilted borders are being used extensively to enhance some satin coats. Others depend upon embroidery, lace and braiding for their trimming.

Circular 'Kerchiefs

Now that the Duchess of Windsor has adopted circular 'kerchiefs, according to reports, the square hankies may go begging. At least the squares will need something especially striking to recommend them. Circles liked by the Duchess are of white crepe cut the size of a tea cup and surrounded by a wide border of net. She likes them monogrammed, or at least bearing her initial "W", so they say.

Cecil De Mille Gives Work to The Old Timers

In Every Picture, He Digs Up Parts for Veteran Players.

By H. H. Niemeyer

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 20.

CECIL DE MILLE, than whom there is no greater self advertiser in America—and how he has made advertising pay!—nevertheless does a lot of things under cover for the good of the actors. In every picture he makes he digs up and gives work to old-timers who have come upon lean days and in "The Buccaneer" you will, if you look sharply enough, see a lot of persons whose names once stood for a good deal on the screen or the stage. Among them you will find Barry Norton, whose portrayal of mother's boy and weak youth roles are remembered as classic even from the silent days. He plays the role of a young French planter upon whose acres the British encamp on their way to New Orleans to fight Andrew Jackson and his "squirrel-hunters." He warns Jackson, after a dramatic scramble through British lines, swamps and quagmires.

Also restored to the "profession" is Frank Melton, the youth from Pineapple, Ala., who rose from the post of chauffeur to Marie Prevost and Kenneth Harlan in the old days to featured parts in six Will Rogers films. Best remembered for his portrayal of Janet Gaynors bumpkin sweetheart in "State Fair," Melton found his screen career so becalmed that he went back to working in a gas station and pulling brush for the W P A. in the Hollywood hills. But De Mille has rescued him and given him the part of a smart-aleck young American officer who lays siege to the affections of Franciska Gaal, Frederic March's co-star.

STILL MORE DRAMATIC is the story of Hugh Sothern, who was working in a Federal theater at almost no salary at all when De Mille found him. An actor for 40 years, Sothern had been trying every way to make a living. Even lectured on Diesel engines aboard practically every battleship in the United States Navy, sold stock, promoted theatrical ventures. His star had apparently set, however, when De Mille saw in him the perfect Andrew Jackson. Now he has a regular contract with Paramount.

De Mille also has with him Edward Sturges, with whom he used to share a daily seven-cent lunch, consisting of a bottle of milk and two rolls, 30 years ago, when both were trying to make the grade on Broadway. Finding Sturges, who rose to featured billing with Mary Pickford and other silent stars, among a group of extras, De Mille took him out of the ranks and made him an officer on Jackson's staff.

Others are Billy Elmer, former middleweight boxer, whom De Mille made the villain of his first picture, "The Squaw Man," and has faithfully cast in every one of the 64 pictures he's made since; William Wagner, who played in "The Missourians" with Mr. and Mrs. De Mille on Broadway just 34 years ago this month; Maude Fealy, one time dramatic star whom the De Milles supported in many stage plays in their own lean days; and many more.

—o-o—

IT MAY SURPRISE YOU to know that Paramount is doing its best to get Marlene Dietrich to break her contract, which calls for just one more picture anyway. But that contract, which Miss Dietrich seems unwilling to give up, no matter how unpleasant things become, calls for her to receive $250,000, which is a lot of money any way you look at it. Marlene, brought over here from Germany at a time when Paramount felt it just had to have a star to match up against Garbo at MGM, is one of the glamor ladies of the films who has never really glamored. Her pictures, directed largely by the much vaunted Joe Sternberg who also proved too expensive for Paramount to keep in its fold, cost vast sums of money. From time to time, as her contract expired it was renewed largely because the studio was afraid to let her go—she might click in a big way any minute for some other outfit. But she has never clicked for Paramount despite the extensive publicity. Even the type of publicity she received looked like a wrong way to boom a dramatic star and none of her pictures have had especially good, or pleasing, stories. So it hasn't been altogether Marlene's fault but, be that as it may, she is through at Paramount after she makes her next film, maybe before. She has made a great deal of money in America, and may make a lot more but rumor has it that she will wind up her career, at least so far as the one studio she has been connected with, with very little on the right side of the ledger. Her trips back to Europe on vacations have cost a fortune each time for she always traveled with a retinue of a dozen people or so.

"I DO!"

A CHILD'S SPIRIT REBELS AGAINST DIRECT ORDERS

By Angelo Patri

THERE is something in the spirit of man that rebels against direct command. The spirit would be free even though it accepts leadership and respects authority. It is willing to co-operate but is unwilling to the point of rebellion to lose its identity and be submerged in that of another, however much beloved.

This is why mothers have trouble with children who are between the ages of 8 and 13, roughly measured. These children have outgrown the stage of infancy where they yielded completely to the guidance and control of their mothers. They have not acquired any usable degree of self-control or even of self-understanding, so that they are not to be trusted far in the management of their affairs. But when their mothers issue decrees they rebel. There is a struggle in which the rebel is worsted for the time, but force does not satisfy the urge of the spirit for self-control and direction, and is renewed again with greater violence.

It is clear that children need the control and guidance of their mothers. It is also clear that they will not willingly accept domination gladly. The best way out is to try to make the control as impersonal as possible. When one has to tell a child what to do and how to do it the telling should be done in an impersonal way. The idea should be stated clearly, briefly, and only the necessary directions given.

When one has to tell a 9-year-old to change his blouse and wash his hands the better way to do it is to say as casually as possible, without disgust at his dirt, without impatience with his carelessness, without irritation at his delays: "You'll find a clean blouse in your drawer. Better wash up. I made cookies this afternoon. My, it is almost time for dinner," and keep your eyes off the child. Usually he will drag himself off, unwillingly enough, and do something toward cleaning himself up in time for dinner. It may not be a hundred per cent job, but have the cookie handy. And if you must, after he has eaten it, suggest another wipe above the wrists.

MILITARY COMMANDS, calls for instant, sharp obedience, the big boss attitude, will not teach a 9-year-old child to obey willingly and with some promptness. It will teach him that he must yield for the time, and wait for his chance, which is not at all what he wanted. What is wanted is co-operation.

It is well to remember that nobody, children especially, likes to be watched critically while working. This is particularly shattering when one is carrying out another's orders. Give the direction, if you must, and then remove the pressure of your mind; it is a great weight on the child's spirit. Look away; busy yourself elsewhere. The job will be done sooner, and better, and with more co-operation in its doing than if you stood over him threateningly, or anxiously, or even affectionately. Get out of the way and let the child move.

STEAMED CRANBERRY PUDDING.

One and one-half cups sifted flour.

Three teaspoons baking powder.

One-half teaspoon salt.

Three-fourths cup soft bread crumbs.

One-half cup firmly packed brown sugar.

One-half cup butter or two-thirds cup ground suet.

One cup cranberries.

One egg, slightly beaten.

One-half cup milk.

Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt together three times. Stir in bread crumbs and sugar. Cut in fat. Wash and chop cranberries and add to flour mixture. Add combined egg and milk, mixing until almost smooth. Turn into greased melon mold and steam for two and one-half hours. Approximate yield: Eight to 10 portions.

Cranberry tarts are worth knowing, too, although some trouble to make as each cranberry should be pricked with a knitting needle or skewer before cooking. But by this treatment, each berry keeps its round, trim shape.

MUSIC and Music MAKERS

The Amplified Clavichord

By Thomas B. Sherman

THE St. Louis Good Neighbor Concert which goes on the air at 7 o'clock tonight will provide the radio public with one of the few opportunities it has ever had to hear an instrument which has practically been lost to the active musical public for more than 150 years. This is the clavichord, a key-board instrument of mediaeval origin and the instrument which Sebastian Bach used in demonstrating the possibilities of the tempered scale.

As the clavichord is sometime referred to as the ancestor of the piano one is likely to conclude that it was displaced by the piano because the latter could do the same things in a bigger and better way. Actually the clavichord is distinguished from the piano by a principle which makes it different in kind as well as in degree. So if the clavichord is to be placed among the dead its obituary should record that it died without issue. And the chief reason for its displacement—whether such displacement be considered permanent or temporary—was the demonstration of music rather than evolution of the piano.

Because of its limited sonority and delicate tone quality the clavichord could only be heard in a small room. When the public demand for music made larger halls necessary, the fate of the clavichord was left in the hands of amateurs and scholars. They haven't done so well by it.

—o-o—

● BUT THE ARTS and sciences which have accompanied the growing demand for music have introduced another factor into the equation—the science of amplification. As a consequence the favored instrument of Bach, which could not be heard in an auditorium designed for more than a few hundred now becomes accessible to millions. More than that those millions who will tune in on Corinne Frederick's performance of two Eighteenth Century compositions tonight will be spread over a whole continent.

It goes without saying, however, that the radio listener will not be enjoying the same experience as those who heard the infant Mozart in a 40-foot room. Without considering the subjective differences between the man who looks at a performer and listens at the same time and the man sitting by a radio, there will be important quantitative and qualitative differences in the body of sound. Whether these differences will make the clavichord more or less attractive than when heard directly remains to be seen.

● TO A LISTENER sitting within 10 or 15 feet of the instrument it has a plasticity and poignancy that is not possible either to the piano or to its contemporary keyboard instrument, the harpsichord. The principal reason for this is that the performer can maintain contact with the string after it has been struck, can change the quality of the sound produced and can even affect its pitch. For the sound of the clavichord is produced by depressing a key which causes a tangent to strike two unison strings from below. The note is sustained as long as the performer keeps the key depressed. And since the tangent also measures off the length of string which is to be set in vibration (the other length of string is kept from vibrating by a felt damper) and thereby determines the pitch of the sound, the performer can sharpen the pitch by applying added pressure.

This possibility is put to artistic use in an effect called the bebung which corresponds to the violin player's vibrato. It is caused by a slight agitation of the finger on the depressed key which causes a fluctuation of the tone between a given note and one perceptibly but minutely sharper. But that attribute of the instrument which allows the pitch to be raised at will for artistic effect, also makes it possible for the slovenly performer to play sharp without wanting to. Therefore a good clavichord technique involves a control that must be as precise after the note is struck as before. This is not true of the piano nor of the harpsichord. The piano mechanism makes it impossible to affect the tone quality once the string has been struck. In the harpsichord a leather or metal thong, plucks the string and is gone.

● FOR THIS REASON the harpsichord player is less protected from mistakes by the mechanism of the instrument and, at the same time, is less at the mercy of a purely mechanical element. This gives him a sense of being one with his instrument which is not possible to the piano player. Hence his claim that the clavichord has greater possibilities of accent, nuance and legato than any other key-board instrument old or new.

Arnold Dolmetsch, the venerable master-builder of ancient instruments and performer thereon, will tell you that clavichord music is hopelessly brutalized when played on any other instrument—especially the piano. John Challis of Ypsilanti, Mich., pupil of Dolmetsch and the maker of the instrument on which Miss Frederick will play tonight, would undoubtedly say the same.

However true that may be, it is an academic truth when one considers the clavichord in relationship to its possible future. For if the music of this instrument is to reach large audiences, whether over the air or in a modern concert hall, it will have to be projected in amplified form. Some of its delicacy may be lost in the process. Other qualities, such as its muscularity, may be enhanced.

Some of the old clavichord literature may not be suitable for its new embodiment. But in thus being disqualified as an agency for the old it takes on immeasurable possibilities for new compositions created to meet these new conditions.

I Give You GARBO

By Cecil
Beaton
Famous Cameraman

SHE is as beautiful as the aurora borealis, but to compare Greta Garbo on and off the screen is to compare De Laszlo with Leonardo. The personality the public sees is magnetic, gay, tragic, sensitive, and wise; but other actresses appear magnetic and sensitive, until the projector stops, and the illusion created by the director and his aids is dispelled. Only Garbo, when the properties are back in the box, puts on nobility with her mackintosh. In real life she possesses such a wealth of qualities, which the screen is technically incapable of reproducing, that, even if she had not the most beautiful face of our time, yet all other modern beauty would be ephemeral beside hers.

Her skin is smooth as marble, generally burnt lightly to an apricot honey color; her hair is biscuit colored and the finest spun silk and clean and sweetly smelling as a baby's after its bath; her nose is so delicate and sensitive that she seems to be conscious of perfumes too subtle for others to enjoy—the perfumes perhaps of her own beauty; her teeth are large and more glistening than pearls; her generous mouth is more delicately controlled than it seems in photographs; as for her eyes, there have never been such before, in expression, so quizzical, compassionate and languorous, so deepset and of such unforgettable blue; they have large, dark irises, and boast lashes so long that it is impossible to believe that they are real, for only a few children have such a poetic growth. She has the tragic quality of a child.

Lipstick and nail varnish are put to shame by her; she uses no make-up save a dark line like a symbol on her eyelids—a symbol of no period or fashion, original to our civilization, a symbol which only instinct created and yet which the world has copied. She is like a Debureau, pale, forlorn, ethereal, or recklessly gay.

Tall, she is proportioned to scale, and her feet are long and slender as in Hellenic sculpture; she is agile and supple, even a gymnast.

Her clothes, which are never of the feminine fluffy kind (in fact, she possesses no evening dress) have real elegance. She buys them from the local Army and Navy store, where workmen, sailors, and the like come for overalls and sweat shirts.

And yet all these qualities might be found in beauties who are not Garbo. The magic which intrigues and baffles the imaginative is not trapped and docketed. Her most inveterate worshippers despair of analyzing her allure. In a quick turn of the head, in a frank look, in a boyish pout, in that proud glance from lowered lids, so pitying and yet so distant that in others it would be supercilious, in all those expressions of conscious beauty, which when imitated become clumsy, or arrogant, or ridiculous, there is a manifestation of what Hollywood cannot destroy. In the presence of this mystery all that is second-rate can be forgotten.

She despises the level of the films in which she has to appear. The dialogue deadens her and she grumbles at having to portray the symbol of sex. She would like to play romantic parts, St. Joan, or Hamlet, or L'Aiglon, and her secret ambition is to be a Dorian Gray. She would wish to play with actors who had some spark of originality or inspiration, but the director shows her the receipts for "Mata Hari" and each ensuing film, and from his point of view there is no reason to alter the policy and so, after a half-hearted skirmish, she grudgingly submits.

She has a sense of humor, a sense of fun, but she is unhappy, neurasthenic, morbid, for she has become, by accident, in spite of herself, something she never wished to be. A healthy peasant girl has been publicized as an exotic spy. She must lose weight, not even touch carrots—so that not only her health but her nerves have suffered from the worries of publicity. If she is seen hurrying down a side alley, she is chased for a story, and this perpetual hunting so haunts her that, being highly strung, she starts to cry and will lock herself away from even the maid for days on end. She is even too nervous to read.

For these reasons she cannot develop as a person. It is well and good to safeguard herself against the bad influences of Hollywood life, but Garbo now has become unreceptive to anything except herself, so that even when she takes her periodical holidays they are not experiences for her.

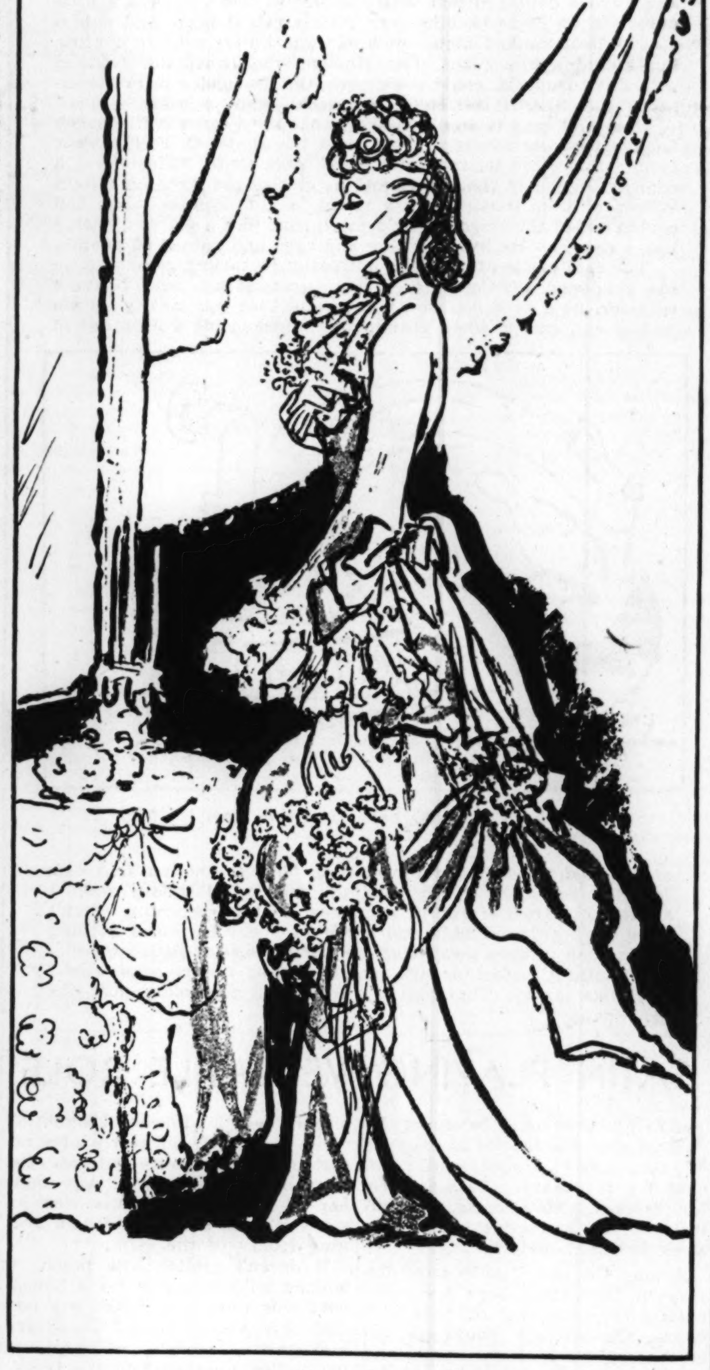
—o-o—

GARBO is not interested in anything or anybody in particular, and she has become as difficult as an invalid and as selfish, quite unprepared to put herself out for anyone; she would be a trying companion, continuously sighing and full of tragic regrets; she is superstitious, suspicious and does not know the meaning of friendship; she is incapable of love.

She believed in the part of Queen Christina and was roused from her apathy with the result that we saw Garbo, not as a phantom, but as a real and noble character. During the years that followed we began to wonder why this enigma with her romantic ideas and spiritual thoughts had made no further effort to break the fetters she professed to despite. Then came "La Dame aux Camellias." Her performance as Marguerite instilled humor and vitality into a flyblown romance. It was the inevitable formula for another Garbo film, but out of it all, unexpectedly, came this astonishing performance. Every shade of emotion was present in her characterization; the gaiety of the earlier scenes was not the old aloof gaiety; Garbo had become a loving, suffering, human being. When she was dying, she had the appearance not merely of being ill, but of having lain in bed for months; in her weakness she could not smile, but retained the pride of a Bernini statue. At moments she seemed to take on herself the wisdom of Lilith, and it was because of these moments that afterwards we wondered whether she had been acting with real understanding or by instinct alone.

If she is capable of such creation, she should be appearing on her own account in the roles which she alone can play. But perhaps her magic is only a freak of nature which leads our imagination to make of her an ideal she can never be.

NEXT SUNDAY—Joan Crawford.



A SKETCH OF GRETA GARBO BY THE AUTHOR.

White Collars Appearing on Black Frocks

This Touch Is One of the Between-Season Favorites in St. Louis.

BLACK frocks that display white collars or other lingerie touches are the between-season favorites in St. Louis. Even now, although the metallic materials are still the leaders for dress-up occasions and wool feels most comfortable for practical daytime needs, the rather sheer black frocks with springlike trimmings are appearing in the shop windows.

Sheer alpaca crepes are noted repeatedly in these fresh-looking dresses although the satin-backed crepe material has a sleekness that is hard to ignore. In direct contrast are matelasse materials which look extremely handsome, especially when given the finish of collar and cuffs of embroidered organdie.

—o-o—

PRACTICALLY ALL of these black dresses that depend upon white for their contrast and their newness indicate that collars have returned to favor. The collars are detachable, not only for ease of laundering but so that the woman who likes to change the appearance of a dress can substitute a necklace or clips. Necklines often are high because the smart designer knows a white collar over a V-shaped neckline is likely to add years to the face of the wearer.

Handkerchief linen 'kerchiefs that have hand hemstitched hems are effective to trim one black crepe dress. They are tucked into the pockets of the blouse and cut to form triangular tabs at the front of the high neckline.

—o-o—

PIQUE, always a popular fabric to trim black frocks, is appearing quite early this year. In its most practical phase it is used for pipings at neckline and sleeves but several dress designers have used it for pipings placed at intervals of four inches over the front of a blouse. The effect is most striking but there is the laundering problem to consider.

White flower, cording, braid applied in vestee and border designs, kid ornaments and numerous lace collars are other evidences that there is a definite interest in definite contrasts to enhance black dresses and make them hint of spring.

WHY VELURE GOES TO WORK MORE QUICKLY
THICK GUMMY LOTION REMAINS ON SURFACE
VANISHING VELURE SINKS IN AUTOMATICALLY

Thick lotions tend to form heavy film on surface. Unless forced in, they may fail to penetrate microscopic skin crevices.

Velure Vanishing Lotion—by reason of low surface-tension—tends to penetrate skin crevices automatically.

AT LAST! A new idea in hand lotions. A vanishing lotion that is different in conception—different in formula and consistency from any you've probably known before.

This new scientific development—created by Bauer & Black—has been given the name Velure. And possesses a remarkable self-penetrating action that enables it to go to work faster than thick lotions—on hands that are red and rough.

You can see this faster action with your own eyes. It sinks right in almost the instant you apply it. Penetrates microscopic skin crevices and crannies automatically. No hard rubbing to "work it in." No gummy film to stain your clothes and gloves.

In addition, certain ingredients in Velure help to conserve natural skin-softening oils. And lighten the excessive burden on skin glands that makes hands prematurely coarse and "old."

Thus Velure is not only remarkably effective in combating roughness, redness and chap. But also helps Nature to resist the ravages of time, weather and housework—to keep hands appealingly soft and smooth.

Because of its unusual properties, you will find that Velure goes 3 times as far as thick, heavy lotions. You use only ⅓ as much. So it's a grand money-saver, too.

TRY VELURE FREE—For a free, generous trial bottle of this new, faster-acting lotion, send your name and address to: Bauer & Black, Dept. C, 2507 S. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill. See how surprisingly different it is.

ERNA SACK AS ROSINA IN "THE BARBER OF SEVILLE."

BRUNA CASTAGNA IN THE TITLE ROLE OF "CARMEN."

Pre-Thanksgiving Fare Bountiful at Film Houses

By Colvin McPherson

THAT Thanksgiving day would bring important programs to the picture theaters was a foregone conclusion. Holidays always result in something extra being spread on the screen. Opening on the feast day, therefore, will be a much-praised comedy, "It's Love I'm After," while Leslie Howard, Bette Davis and Olivia de Havilland, at the Ambassador; "Damsel In Distress," which could be called a Fred Astaire solo if George Burns and Gracie Allen weren't in it, at the Fox, and the biggest and most gorgeous of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer operettas—Rudolf Friml's "The Firefly," starring Jeanette MacDonald with our own Allan Jones, at Loew's.

These, indeed, provide more than enough for sustenance but the moviegoer has not been required to starve in the week before the holiday. Right now there are three Grade-A shows available and one which is not less than an A-minus show. In order, 'Vogues of 1938" at Loew's, "High, Wide and Handsome" at the Ambassador, "Artists and Models' 'at the Fox and "Merry-Go-Round of 1938" at the Missouri.

"Vogues of 1938" is something I am fully sold on, after two sittings. In black and white, it would not be a dull exhibition, in color it is superb. Although its title may frighten men, it need not. "Vogues of 1938" might as well be "Night Life of 1938" or "New York of 1938."

Relating how Warner Baxter, vendor of high-priced duds, lost his wife, Helen Vinson, and almost lost his business, "Vogues" takes time out from the dress shop to introduce toe and tap dancing, sweet music and swing, bright lights and busy Broadway. Virginia Verrill, whom a press agent has called 'Myrna Loy with a blue singing voice," is one of the new personalities and for a girl whose only previous movie experience was as Jean Harlow's dubbed-in voice, scores sensationally. Georgie Tapps, once of Municipal Opera, is another specialty entertainer.

The wardrobe of "Vogues" is nothing short of brilliant. However bored by it some gentlemen may be, it is going to give a great many clothes-contented women "That Old Feeling."

Of second interest at Loew's is "The Women Men Marry," about reporters and murder. It might be summed up by saying that while George Murphy is investigating one, his wife is getting away with another.

ALL that might have been done with "High, Wide and Handsome" wasn't done but the main Ambassador feature has charm, movement and good music. It opens a new section of American history —the development of the oil industry—and a new locale, Western Pennsylvania.

Rock oil it was called at first and Randolph Scott's vision was to light and heat all the homes in Philadelphia with it, not drive horseless carriages. So just after he has started drilling a well, he meets and marries Irene Dunne, a carnival singer. On their wedding day, the first oil well in American history comes in, a gusher, and Randy is too busy for Irene, who drifts back to carnival life. When the villainous railroads have gotten him with his back to the wall and are wrecking his pipeline, Irene brings her carnival friends to help, the day is saved and in time we have gasoline.

In treatment, "High Wide and Handsome" falls too often into the fimiliar movie cliches. Kern's music —"The Folks Who Live on the Hill" and "Can I Forget You?"—is excellent but the faked scenery against which it is sung is unpardonable and wouldn't fool a wooden Indian. Aside from these ailments, which must be mentioned only to help prevent their repetition, "High, Wide and Handsome" is all its name implies—a big, enjoyable show. Jane Withers, two ventriloquists and a monkey go with it, in "45 Fathers."

HAVING been reviewed as far back as last Wednesday, "Artists and Models" seems almost a revival now. It tries out several ideas that may bring changes in movie technique, when better understood. One of these is the reliance on sheer photography of shimmering water for a musical interlude, another is a puppet show with Ben Blue as assisting artist, another is a bit of fantasy where Jack Benny, under the name of Mac in the picture, hears the Jack Benny program on the radio and makes some remarks about it.

More than that, Benny has many snappy comedy lines in character, Judy Canova and Ben Blue team together for good effect, Connie Boswell sings and so on. The only sour note is sounded by Martha Raye in a swing number that probably pleases nobody.

The Fox's second one is "They Wanted to Marry" about a newspaper cameraman and a society girl who is just so society it hurts.

"Merry-Go-Round of 1938," at the Ambassador, has a fine comedy foursome made up of Billy House, Bert Lahr, Jimmy Savo and Mischa Auer. It is played with "Second Honeymoon," which Marjorie Weaver has purloined from Tyrone Power and Loretta Young.

A first-run comedy, "Dance, Charlie, Dance," runs last among the week's new shows.

Cast for 'Excursion' At the Little Theater

The cast of "Excursion," which opens its two weeks' run at the Little Theater on Thursday, Dec. 2, will be made up of Gordon Sommers, John Dawson, Dorothy Coleman, Betty McGrew, Mary Alice Hart, John Cole, Sydney Busch and some 19 others. Sommers, who at the close of the run will have made some 246 appearances for the group, has the role of Capt. Obadiah Rich, skipper of a Coney Island boat who decides to take all his miserable passengers to a far away island in the Caribbean Sea.

Shady Oak's First German Feature

"DIE LETZTE ROSE," German screen opera based on Von Flotow's "Martha" and named after its most famous aria, "The Last Rose of Summer," starts its week's run at the Shady Oak Cinema in Clayton tomorrow night.

Introduced to this country by the film, which is in German with superimposed English titles, is Caria Spletter, German radio star, who takes the role of Martha, lady-in-waiting to Queen Anne. Opposite her is Helge Roswaenge, noted Continental tenor and a member of the Berlin State Opera Company, as Lionel.

Queen Anne would have Lady Harriet marry Lord Tristan but Harriet runs away to the fair at Richmond and there, under the assumed name of Martha, meets and learns to like the young farmer, Lionel. While the action of the film in general follows the lines of the opera, there are several deviations, more comic complications and less sentimentality than in the original.

To follow "Die Letzte Rose," which is the first German film to play at the Shady Oak, is "Amphitryon," French film based on the same dramatic work as the Lunt-Fontanne Broadway hit.

'Julius Caesar,' In Modern Dress, Thrills Broadway

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.

A DYNAMIC commentary on the state of the theater today is that Shakespeare not only was the most active playwright on Broadway last season, but his "Julius Caesar" is the most electrifying premiere that this season has presented.

Not only have the Mercury Theater Players staged an extraordinary, clear production of this somewhat confusing play, but they have done it in such a manner that Shakespeare seems to be directing his remarks and conclusions at the present day dictatorships.

The Mercury Theater is a newly organized group of young people, mostly the same actors who, led by Orson Welles and John Houseman, produced "Dr. Faustus" in the Federal Theater last season. Their "Julius Caesar" is a thrilling document that directs its emphasis upon the movement and temper of crowds, the ironic threats rather than the poetry of Shakespeare's speech. It is played without scenery, but with lights picking out and emphasizing scenes or else giving a dazzling background in such a manner that scenery probably would only be superfluous.

The actors are attired in modern clothes, but they all wear the same colored shirts, a sort of greenish hue. Not only does this attire suggest the sameness of Fascist costume, but in the way the manuscript has been cut and emphasis placed on certain scenes the performance gives a definite mood that Shakespeare is commenting upon world politics today. Too, Joseph Holland who plays Julius Caesar so well, has a strong physical resemblance to Mussolini.

From the beginning that feeling of moving, massed crowds is built up so that the audience is soon in a mood that they would not have been surprised if Antony had suddenly gone off into a dissertation about "The March on Rome."

Caesar is assassinated by a combination of his foes because he is personally ambitious. That point is underscored by the actors.

But, they emphasize just as much the point that Caesar was a benevolent dictator who left his fortune to the people and not to the state.

Especially moving is the scene where George Courlouris, as Antony, speaks:

"Here is the will, and under Caesar's seal.

"To every Roman citizen he gives,
"To every several man, seventy-five drachmas."

Too, he left to the people all his arbors and orchards and roads, in direct contrast to his life as dictator in which the state was supreme to the people.

Where Shakespeare believed character most important, this production makes "Julius Caesar" seem more concerned with action and revolution, with movements of the multitude rather than thoughts and beliefs of individuals.

The cast, looking upon them as a multitude, is all good. Curiously, the one performance that seems to be out of the mood of the production is that of Orson Welles, who both directed the play and played Brutus. His Brutus is more of an individual poetic performance of the character traditionally played by the old school of Shakespearean actors, rather than merging himself into the impression of mass revolution that the other Mercury actors give.

'The Women' Next At the American

"THE WOMEN"—40 of them—come to the American Theater next Sunday night to present the satirical comedy which Clare Boothe drafted about them and which another feminine legion has been presenting on Broadway for nearly a year now.

Heading the parade is Lois Wilson, of the movies, in the role of Mary Haines, the not-too-bright wife who is despoiled of her husband by her gossiping friends and enemies. The company is one which has been in Chicago for the last two months.

Although "The Women" has attracted greatest attention because of its manless lineup, Miss Boothe did not intend it as a novelty. But as she sketched out her dozen scenes, places where women congregate and gossip, she found that men were out of the question. They could not be expected to be present in powder room, beauty parlor, bath, fitting room and exercise salon.

With "The Women" remaining the conventional week with matinees at the American, the period beginning Dec. 6 is alloted to the Fredric March—Florence Eldridge comedy, "Yr. Obedient Husband," which, thanks to the movies, is already arousing a good deal of activity at the American box-office. The supporting cast includes Dame May Whitty, the gullible cottager of "Night Must Fall" and the play is a costume affair, presenting some facts and fiction about Sir Richard Steele, that gentleman of the early Eighteenth Century who wrote both essays and love letters immortally well.

The Noel Coward one-act plays for the 11-day engagement beginning Dec. 12 are spaced as follows: "Family Album," "Still Life" and 'Hands Across the Sea" during the first five days of the run; "We Were Dancing," "Fumed Oak" and "Shadow Play" for Dec. 17, 18 and 19; "Ways and Means," "Red Peppers" and "The Astonished Heart" on Dec. 20 and 21; "Family Album," "Fumed Oak" and "Hands Across the Sea" for matinee and evening, Dec. 22. The cast is headed by Estelle Winwood, Helen Chandler, Bramwell Fletcher and Jessie Royce Landis.

'Barber of Seville' And 'Carmen' at The Opera House

St. Louis Season Opens With Two Stories of Spain—German Masterpieces in Later Part of Repertory

ONE of the oldest of operatic favorites, Rossini's "Barber of Seville," opens the St. Louis Opera company's season tomorrow evening at the Auditorium Opera House. Other works to follow are "Carmen" on Wednesday evening, "Tristan and Isolde" on Dec. 1, "Lohengrin" on Dec. 6 and "Faust," originally scheduled for Friday evening of this week, on Dec. 31, New Year's eve.

Heading the cast of "The Barber of Seville" is Erna Sack, young German prima donna who has achieved fame as the first soprano since Jenny Lind to sing a C above high C. Mme. Sack in her radio appearances in this country has had occasion often to demonstrate her extraordinary gift and the placing of "The Barber of Seville" in the operatic repertory here permits her to make the famous aria, "Una voce poco fa," even more of a coloratura exhibition than Rossini did. The opera is in Italian.

Singing with her will be Joseph Barsotti, tenor of summer operas in the East, as Count Almaviva; Claudio Frigerio, baritone of the Chicago City Opera Company, as Figaro; Vittorio Trevesan as Dr. Bartolo, Norman Cordon as Don Basilio, Louis Bardois as Florello, Carabella Johnson as Berta and Daniel Harris as an official. Mme. Sack is, of course, Rosina. Lawrence Power, originally cast as the Count, withdrew last week when it became apparent that he would arrive too late for scheduled rehearsals.

"The Barber of Seville," first presented in Rome in 1816 and in New York in 1825, is a two-act comic opera by the Roman poet, Sterbini, an adaptation of Beaumarchais' trilogy. According to well-authenticated tradition, Rossini rushed out the music in 15 days, to meet a carnival production date. The plot deals with the Count's attempts to woo Rosina and take her away from her guardian, the scheming Doctor Bartolo, who hopes to marry her for her money. In his quest, the Count is aided by the wily and jovial barber, Figaro.

Among the better-known selections are "Largo al Factotum," Figaro's song, which is a favorite of all baritones exhibiting prowess; the lyrical "Una voce poco fa," Bartolo's angry "Manca un foglio" and the duet, "Pace e gioia."

BIZET'S ever-popular "Carmen," on Wednesday evening will have Bruna Castagna, Italian contralto of the Metropolitan, as the faithless gypsy girl. Opposite her as Don Jose is the noted Metropolitan tenor, Giovanni Martinelli. Robert Weede of the Metropolitan sings the role of Escamillo, the toreador; Maria Marceno of St. Louis is Micaela; John Gurney of the Metropolitan and last summer's Municipal Opera is Zuniga, captain of the dragoons. Others are Daniel Harris as Morales and Remendado, Louis Bardois as Dancairo, Lola Fletcher as Frasquita and Carabella Johnson as Mercedes.

Arias, duets and choruses of "Carmen"—"Habanera," "Gypsy Song," "Toreador Song," "Flower Song" and "Micaela's Air"—are known to anybody who has had access to phonograph, radio or songbook. The opera is a musical tragedy built on the romantic enslavement of the soldier, Don Jose, by Carmen and her death at his hands.

Like Rossini's opera, it is set in and near Seville. The opening scene is in the public square where the young brigadier, Jose, sees Carmen among the girls coming out of a cigarette factory and she tosses him a rose. A few moments later she is involved in a stabbing affray with another girl, is arrested and placed in Jose's care. A little more serious flirting and he has permitted her to escape.

Some time later she has persuaded him to desert his regiment and join a band of smugglers. But she has taken up with Escamillo, the toreador, and the final scene is outside the bull-ring in Seville, where Carmen has gone to watch her new hero. Jose appeals to her to return to him, is scorned and stabs her. The opera is sung in French, the language of its composer and librettists.

Written by Meilhac and Halevy on the novel by Prosper Merimee, "Carmen" was first presented at the Opera Comique in Paris on March 3, 1875, and American production four years later. On its first appearance it aroused a storm of abuse and although it was his finest work and destined to become perhaps the greatest operatic favorite, the composer, Bizet, died three months after its production, without realizing anything of the fame that was to come to him.

Both "The Barber of Seville" and "Carmen" will be conducted by Gennaro Papi, on his way from the San Francisco opera season to his regular assignments at the Metropolitan. Local choruses have been rehearsed for several months for the productions. Rita De Leporte, will appear with her ballet of 36 St. Louis girls in "Carmen." Scenery and costumes for the operas are from the Chicago Opera.

"Tristan und Isolde" on Dec. 1 will be sung by Kirsten Flagstad and Paul Althouse, with Gurney, Francis Row, E. A. Dammrich, Sonia Sharnova and Guy Golterman Jr., in principal roles. In "Lohengrin," Dec. 6 Maria Jeritza will be Elsa and Eyvind Laholm, Norwegian tenor, the title character. In the cast are Gurney, Row, Eleanor La Mance and Daniel Harris. These operas will be conducted by Laszlo Halasz.

"Faust" was postponed because of the illness of Feodor Chaliapin, Russian basso, in Paris. He is engaged for the role of Mephistopheles.

U. S. Programs For Far East To Be Broadcast

Short-Wave Transmitter to Be Erected in California—Here and There—Studio Gossip.

A 24-HOUR broadcasting program service on the short waves from this country for world reception is planned in connection with the granting of a permit to General Electric to erect a powerful transmitter at Belmont, Cal. The station will be completed and ready for operation late in 1938, and will broadcast on the frequencies, 9.53 and 15.33 megacycles, used by W2XAD and W2XAF, Schenectady. It will have directional aerials, beamed for reception in the Far East and South America. Because of the difference in time, the station will be able to share time with the two Schenectady transmitters. Its broadcasts will include the best features on the WEAF and WJZ networks and special programs. The station will provide reception in Manilla from 4 to 10 p. m., in Japan from 5 to 11 p. m., in Calcutta from 1 to 7 p. m., in Shanghai from 4 to 10 p. m. and in Sydney, Australia, from 6 p. m. to midnight.

A fashions display by television was staged Thursday in New York by RCA for 250 style experts. A dozen models paraded before the electric camera in the studio, and the guests saw them on receivers in another room. Tomorrow and Tuesday nights, there will be a special television show for radio amateurs.

An indication of the probable cost of television receivers is given by the prices of the "kinescope," a cathode ray tube recently offered for amateur and other experimental use. The price of a tube to produce a five-inch picture is $40 and that of a tube for a nine-inch picture is $60. The tube is only part of the apparatus in a television receiver, laboratory models of which have as many as 30 tubes.

Militant Pastor Jailed for Defying Nazis

The Rev. Dr. Niemoeller, Former Submarine Captain, in Prison Because of His Stand on Religion.

The valedictory sermon of the Rev. Martin Niemoeller, preached in his Berlin pulpit just before the arrest which has been followed by his four and a half months' confinement in Moabit Prison, has been made available to readers outside Germany through the Neues Tage-Buch, German-language weekly published in Paris. An English translation of the sermon is reproduced on this page.

Pastor Niemoeller, noted submarine captain of World War days, was incarcerated and silenced by Nazi subordinates of Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler, after threats, and a preliminary arrest and release, had failed to stop his appeals to the faith and loyalty of German Protestantism, against the program of totalitarian state control.

As 20 years ago, he fired torpedoes at the merchant ships and war vessels of Germany's enemy nations, so, in the last two years, he Berlin clergyman loosed the projectiles of revolt against state domination. In the Atlantic and the Mediterranean, Capt. Niemoeller sank the shipping at which he aimed—55,000 tons was his recorded total. In his late spiritual campaign, he has hit his mark, but has not sent his adversaries to the bottom.

Many Imprisoned

Pastor Niemoeller and the Confessional Church clergy and laymen who—more than 100 of them—have followed him to prison and concentration camp, are not more courageous than Cardinal von Faulhaber of Munich and other Roman Catholic leaders of resistance to the same state efforts at domination of religion. But the Protestant clergy, lacking organic connection with a worldwide body, are in the more exposed position. The most important of the Protestant leaders, and on the other hand the least consequential of the adherents of Catholicism, seemingly have been singled out for the state's discipline.

While Pastor Niemoeller and many of his Confessional brethren remain in prison, another Protestant leader of much greater scholarly eminence, Dr. Karl Barth, is in exile in Switzerland. He left Germany after he had been officially silenced by removal from his theological professorship in Bonn University. The ground of action against him was that he failed to lead his classes in a "Heil, Hitler!" before and after lectures and recitations.

Niemoeller's offense was resistance to Nazi authority at the points where it infringed upon religious liberty. He and his associate clergymen have been criticised because they have not, so far as shown by the incomplete reports reaching this country, protested against all the violations of civil liberty committed by the totalitarian state.

Denounced Anti-Jewish Fight

Niemoeller, however, has protested vigorously against the Nazi anti-Jewish campaign, and its associated effort to eliminate the vital element of the Jewish Scriptures from Christian belief and teaching. His first suspension from the pulpit of Herz-Jesu Church, in the Berlin residence suburb of Dahlem, followed a sermon in which he denounced anti-Semitism as a violation of the Christian law, "Love thy neighbor as thyself."

Undaunted by his suspension, he rallied church adherents to prevent the enactment of a proposed law which would have denied to persons of Jewish extraction the right to belong to the church and to the clergy.

Reinstated through his friends' appeals to Hitler, Niemoeller boldly resisted the authority of Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller, whom Hitler sought to place in supreme authority over the Protestant churches, and declared in a memorable sermon, in the words of the early Christian apostles; "We must obey God rather than man." A procession of youths, singing Martin Luther's hymn, "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God," followed this address. Again Niemoeller was suspended, arrested, released. He continued his resistance to Mueller, whose failure to obtain any degree of submission seems to have led to his gradual disappearance from the scene, civil officials taking over the fight on the recalcitrant clergy.

Continued Resistance

As the Government took a constantly sterner attitude, making it clear that it would not hesitate to treat the resising ministers as felons, some of the clergy moderated their attitude. Niemoeller, however, became more positive and more fearless. He declared that the Nazi regime, in elevating race and state to positions of prime importance, was seeking to set up a new deity in place of the God whom Christians worship. Giving perhaps still deeper offense, he protested against according to Hitler honors which, he held, belonged only to God.

"Tools of Satan."

In his conflicts with Mueller, and with the Nazi Commissioners of Churches, Dr. Auguste Jaeger and his successor, Hans Kerrl, Pastor Niemoeller has been a worthy follower of Martin Luther, whose words were battles. And like Luther, he has not hesitated to identify his antagonists with the Evil One.

"Tools of Satan" was his term for Jaeger and his associates. "Obeying this church government is disobeying God," he declared in a manifesto issued by agroup of clergymen in Hamburg. He carried the warfare into the Protestant pulpits of predominantly Catholic Bavaria.

For refusal to attend the consecration of Mueller as Reichsbishop, Bishop Meiser of Munich was sent to a concentration camp and was ordered deposed. Hitler and Mueller together went to Munich to enforce the decree. But Niemoeller was there first, and Der Fuehrer was met by hisses and hostile expressions in the city where Nazism had its beginning.

Bishop Meiser was released from concentration camp, and was permitted to return to his office. In Nuremburg, a few days later, a public demonstration in his honor occurred, Catholics joining in the greeting to the Protestant leader.

Favor Toward Pagan Cult.

But the totalitarian state did not abandon its idea of complete domination over the cultural life of the German people. It looked with favor on the conforming German (or Aryan) Christians, who accepted the control of the Government and furthered its anti-Jewish campaign. It showed equal or greater favor toward the pagan cult which proposed restoration of Germany's ancient deities, overthrown by St. Boniface 12 centuries ago.

In his own pulpit, and in other Protestant churches of Berlin which were open to him, Pastor Niemoeller denounced the submissionists and the paganizers. He charged the Hitler regime with "falsification of religion," and rebuked the pretension of those who had proclaimed the rule of National Socialism to be everlasting.

"The Reich may last 1000 years, even 2000 years," the preacher said, "but it will not last eternally." He followed this with a sermon in which he decried attempts to discredit the New Testament concept of Christian virtues, and to substitute a heroic attitude—"as if," he said, "there was only one possible position for a German to assume—that of Prometheus or Lucifer, the pose of a defiant Triton.

"To Christians," the resolute preacher said, "Christ has no nationality. We must resist the tremendous current of anti-Christian activity, which is pushing the spirit of mercy into the background. We must fight for an active, not merely a passive, Christianity.

"Another Gethsemane."

"We have come to another Gethsemane. Now, as then, Christians are persecuted. Now, as then, mobs and violence are being employed against them."

In one of his latest public addresses, last June, Pastor Niemoeller declared that the church would never be fitted into a political framework. He listed pastors who had been arrested or barred from their pulpits, and charged that the state, before calling church elections, had suppressed the whole directorate of the Confessional Church.

"These elections are the reverse of free," he insisted. "Only the church's enemies have a free hand. if the object is to fit the church into a political framework, the answer can only be, "No!" For then the church would be left under the guidance of those whom

The Vice-President returned to the Capital for his 18th session of Congress with his influence greatly enhanced by reason of his bold stand, in the closing days of the last session, against President Roosevelt's attempt to pack the Supreme Court. In the intimacy of cloak room and poker party sociability he is sometimes jocularly referred to as "Cactus Jack," a nickname which derives from his home environment, the Rio Grande country of Texas, and one which he is said not to seriously dislike.

Sermon Which Brought Down Wrath Of Hitler Upon Pastor Niemoeller

THE sermon which caused his latest and continuing imprisonment was preached by Pastor Niemoeller in his Dahlem church Sunday, June 27. As his text, he read the scriptural account of the arraignment of Peter and other Christian apostles before the Council in Jerusalem. The passage, Acts V, verse 34-42 is as follows:

But there stood up one in the Council, a Pharisee named Gamaliel, a doctor of the law, had in honor of all the people, and commanded to put the men forth a little while.

And he said unto them, "Ye men of Israel, take heed to yourselves as touching these men, what ye are about to do. For before these days rose up Theudas, giving himself out to be somebody; to whom a number of men, about four hundred, joined themselves; who was slain; and all, as many as obeyed him, were dispersed, and came to nought. After this man rose up Judas of Galilee in the days of the enrollment, and drew away some of the people after him; he also perished; and all, as many as obeyed him, were scattered abroad.

"And now I say to you, refrain from these men, and let them alone; for if this counsel or this work be of men, it will be overthrown; but if it is of God, ye will not be able to overthrow them; lest haply ye be found even to be fighting against God."

And to him they agreed; and when they had called the apostles unto them, they beat them and charged them not to speak in the name of Jesus, and let them go. They therefore departed from the presence of the Council, rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer dishonor for the Name. And every day, in the temple and at home, they ceased not to teach and to preach Jesus as the Christ.

The preacher then, with a phrase of apostolic salutation, began his discourse:

Yet doth God remain Israel's solace!
Grace be to you and peace from God our Father, and from the Lord
Jesus Christ. Amen.

It was a moment critical beyond measure in the life of the Church. The Apostles had violated the injunction to silence which the authorities had laid upon them. Yes, they had declared openly: "We ought to obey God rather than men." In open court they moved to the attack, accusing their judges of murdering God's own Son, the Savior, in order to bring home to them the need of repentance and the promise of forgiveness of sins. And then we read: "When they heard that, they were cut to the heart, and took counsel to slay them."

At that moment the lawyer Gamaliel appeared and we must acknowledge that it was only through his intercession that the Apostles were released and the congregation enabled to continue existing and working. Thus our feelings toward him are akin to gratitude, for doubtless he was a clever, decent and pious man. Would that in these days of crisis for the Church through which we are passing there were even a single leader of renown clever enough to appeal to reason, pious enough to exhort to reverence of God, decent enough to call for truth. Perhaps even today his voice would be heeded. Perhaps, then, no such frivolous moral judgment would be passed as in last Friday's press under the title "A Call to Disobedience"—a matter upon which the Prussian Council of Brethren has yet to act. Today I shall say only this about it—but this I must say.

At the conclusion of the newspaper account in question we read: "Still another clergyman escaped arrest by flight." This can only refer to the Reverend Asmussen, who left Berlin upon the advice of the Prussian Council of Brethren. Yet he was neither served with a summons, nor was a warrant issued for his arrest. I have advised the Reich Ministry of Justice that the Reverend Asmussen will be available as soon as a summons or a warrant is issued.

We have as little thought of wilfully evading the hand of the authorities as had the Apostles of yore. Nor are we, any more than they, ready to heed orders given by men to keep back what God bids us to say. We abide, and shall continue to abide, by this rule: God must be obeyed, rather than man. Thus it is today as it was then; and in this situation the counsel of Gamaliel (to the authorities) is a wise counsel, for it is unwise to create martyrs in a cause one wishes to conquer. Moreover, it is a counsel morally beyond question, for it is immoral to fight against convictions with the power of the sword. It is also a pious counsel, for it is impious to anticipate the judgment of God which man cannot know.

Would, then, a new Gamaliel help us—if he were to proclaim real freedom of faith and conscience?

Let us not, beloved congregation, deceive ourselves! The High Council accepted Gamaliel's plea for freedom of faith and released the prisoners; but they did not escape the lash and a new injunction to keep silent. "And when they had called the Apostles, and beaten them, they commanded that they should not speak in the name of Jesus, and let them go." And in the very next chapter of the Acts of the Apostles the storm of the first Christian persecutions gathers in the distance.

Obviously that tolerance for which a

Does Republican France Face Revolution?

Will Organized Labor, the C. G. T., Now Strongest Force in the Country, Seize Political Control?

By ROBERT DELL
From the Contemporary Review, London
Reprinted From the Living Age

EVER since the "stay-in" strikes in France in the early summer of last year it has been asserted from time to time that France was on the verge of revolution. I was in Paris at the time of the "stay-in" strikes and I have never seen strikes more orderly. The strikers, enthusiastic as they were, were perfectly good-tempered and there was no violence of any sort.

The strikes had no revolutionary aims—they were strikes to obtain better conditions of labor and nothing else; but it is quite true that the method of the "stay-in" strike might be very useful in the event of a revolutionary movement. The movement of last year may turn out to have been a dress rehearsal.

Now, on the other hand, the conditions in France have, in my opinion, become revolutionary, and a revolutionary—or at least unconstitutional—movement is possible in the near future. It will not, if it comes, be made by the Socialist or Communist party, but by the C. G. T. (Confederation Generale du Travail)—the French trade union federation. Last year's strikes gave an enormous impetus to the French trade union movement. Applications for membership poured in in such numbers that the trade union officials could not cope with them. In certain industries the trade union membership was increased tenfold in a few weeks.

More Than 5,000,000

The increase has gone on steadily and the trade unions affiliated with the C. G. T. have now more than 5,000,000 members—a larger membership than in England or in any other country except Soviet Russia.

The organized workers are thus about 12 per cent of the whole French population and represent with their families a much larger proportion. In 1914 the membership of the trade unions affiliated with the C. G. T. was considerably less than one million and they were much less strongly organized than now. The C. G. T. has become the strongest force in France.

The C. G. T. is not and never has been connected with any political party, although, of course, many of its members belong to one, usually the Socialist or the Communist party. Before the war it had an economic theory of its own, which was known as Syndicalism—syndicat is the French word for trade union. Syndicalism is fundamentally opposed to the totalitarian State, to any form of State Socialism or State Capitalism and, indeed, to the political State itself. It is not Marxist but derives from Proudhon, Saint-Simon and to a certain extent from Bakunin, the great adversary of Marx. It believes in the public ownership of land and natural monopolies, but holds that the labor of the community should be organized by the trade unions, not by the State or by the Government. With Saint-Simon, Syndicalists wished to substitute the administration of things for the government of men and, with Proudhon, they believe that in the future the workshop will take the place of the Government. They are libertarian and anti-parliamentarian.

History of the C. G. T.

From the first, French trade unions, unlike English and German trade unions, were revolutionary in their character. They aimed not merely at improving the condition of the workers immediately, but also at a radical change in the whole economic system. The C. G. T. was founded in 1895, but it was not until 1906, at an annual congress held at Amiens, that by an overwhelming majority it definitely repudiated parliamentary methods, adopted the Syndicalist theory and approved of the general strike as the method of achieving the social revolution. From that date until the war there was a bitter conflict between the C. G. T. and the Socialist party.

A sharp division of opinion about the war split both the Socialist party and the C. G. T. in two. In 1920, at the Tours Congress, the majority of the Socialist party voted for affiliation to the Third International and became the Communist party. There was a similar split in the C. G. T., which led to the formation of a second trade union federation, called the C. G. T. U., which professed to carry on the revolutionary Syndicalism of the pre-war C. G. T., but was in fact dominated by the Communist party. The old C. G. T. became "reformist" and abandoned revolutionary methods. In 1936 the two federations were once more united under the old title and it was this that began the revival of trade unionism in France.

Brazil Goes Fascist.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IT seems that big-time Fascism has at last reared its chin in the Western Hemisphere. The shirts will probably be coffee-colored, everything else in Brazil being tied up with the aromatic bean. Hereafter, both Brazil's coffee and her politics will keep a lot of Americans awake. They have grounds for being jumpy. Such goings-on at our very doorstep! And coffee caused it all.

Apparently, in recent years, the Brazilian coffee export trade has gone to pot, as it were. Brazil then tried a scarcity program. The topography of the ocean bed of the Brazilian shore was changed, what with mountains of coffee being dumped overboard to keep the price jacked up. But nothing availed to check the decline. The coffee magnates were boiling; democracy came under fire, the Brazilian Congress was roasted unmercifully and the percolator boiled over at last.

Result: A strong boy, patterned after the German Hercules and the Italian Atlas. Is Fascism the way out for Brazil? While lots of mahogany is to be found down there, it grows on the shoulders of a mere fraction of those millions of liberty-loving Brazilians. Of course, we've all heard of Brazil nuts. They are probably the ones responsible for the present set-up. BEDLAMUS.

Small-Town Juvenility.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

REMEMBER how the small-town boys used to carve their initials on the walls of the railroad depot and scrawled their names with chalk where all could see?

Go now to the new Soldiers' Memorial. If you step inside and search, you may find the names of the soldier dead modestly carved on a cenotaph in letters one inch square.

But go out by the south door and look to the right outside wall. See chiseled in letters four times as large the names of Mayor Barney F. Dickmann and his committee, shrieking in the sunlight.

That Silly Hairdress.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

WHOEVER did invent these silly curlicues in women's coiffures? Glancing upward, I find one silly little sausage situated precariously above the forehead and decide it should be resting under my chin—at least, I would be something more definite, i. e., a bearded lady, as 'twere.

I remember 'way back when the family album gave forth such caricatures as Great-aunt Penelope (the one with the pompadour and so-called "rats") in her hairdress, but think what a laugh our grandchildren will have! They no doubt will change the old bromide to read "mice in our belfrys" instead of "bats."

I'm a thorough believer in the expression that children, etc., speak the truth, and especially when one little hopeless looked at me quizzically, spotted a teetering curl and seriously remarked, "Lady, I think one of your screws is loose."

Methodist Ban on Liquor.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

ACCORDING to a news item in your issue of Nov. 15, the Board of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in session in Fort Wayne, Ind., has forbidden members of the denomination from ". . . the using, buying or selling of intoxicating liquors as a beverage."

It is with a measure of surprise I learn this regulation is founded ". . . upon the basis of the higher laws of Christ's kingdom."

With no thought of engendering a religious controversy, but rather in the hope of arriving at the facts, I would very much like to learn when, and in what words, Christ forbade the use (please note, I do not refer to the abuse) of intoxicating liquors.

In this same connection, I would also like to know whether John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, taught such a doctrine. R. E. KRINGS.

Too Much Dickmann.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I AGREE with you, it is "Too Much Dickmann." I feel that the majority of our citizens are of the same opinion.

To see egotism personified, I suggest you have a reporter visit our City Auditorium and, upon entering, take note of His Honor's photo and that of our President, neither of whom had anything to do with the original issue effecting this public project.

Why should Dickmann's picture be hung in that conspicuous spot? D. R.

GOVERNMENT AS LAW-BREAKER.

A welcome case was argued in the United States Supreme Court last week. We say welcome because it affords the court the opportunity for overruling the 5-to-4 decision of 1928 which upheld the despicable trickery of wire-tapping by Federal agents.

The pending case, which arose in New York, is on all fours with that of Olmstead et al vs. the United States (277 U. S. 438), which came up from Seattle, Wash., during the heyday of Volsteadism a decade ago. Prohibition agents then were stooping to almost anything, and in an attempt to break up rum-running in Seattle, they employed an expert lineman who inserted small wires along eight telephone lines leading to the homes and central office of four partners in the liquor ring. After nearly five months of listening in, they used the evidence obtained by eavesdropping to convict the men of conspiracy to violate the National Prohibition Act. The case went to the Supreme Court on the plea that the Bill of Rights had been flagrantly violated by the Federal Government—that while the defendants had no legal right to possess and sell liquor, they still were entitled to the fourth amendment's protection of individuals, houses and papers against trespass and seizure and that of the fifth amendment against compelling a person to bear witness against himself.

Few issues have divided the Supreme Court so sharply or caused dissenters to be so critical of the stand of the majority. Chief Justice Taft wrote the controlling opinion, concurred in by Justices Van Devanter, McReynolds, Sutherland and Sanford. They said in effect that as the wire-tapping had been done outside the homes, there was no searching, seizure or entry; that all the agents had done was to employ their sense of hearing. When the agents told in court what they had heard, they testified as witnesses, and so the stenographic report of the defendants' conversations was not self-incriminating. As for the claim that the evidence was inadmissable because a Washington state statute had been violated by the wire-tapping, the majority relied on the old common-law rule that evidence is evidence regardless of how it is obtained.

This view of the majority, which overlooked entirely the importance of the example that government sets, inspired Justices Brandeis and Holmes to dissents which stand out among their most distinguished opinions. Justice Stone agreed with Holmes and Brandeis, while Justice Butler, also unable to accept the findings of the majority, suggested a new trial.

Justice Brandeis' brilliantly reasoned argument ought to be reread regularly by every law-enforcing agent of government. Pointing out that the Supreme Court had very early protected a sealed letter entrusted to the mail under the fourth amendment, he demonstrated that the telephone is a public service furnished by the authority of government and telephonic messages therefore are in essence no different from sealed letters. It was immaterial, he said, that the intrusion was in the aid of law enforcement. "Experience," he continued, "should teach us to be most on our guard to protect liberty when the Government's purposes are beneficent. Men born to freedom are naturally alert to repel invasion of their liberty by evil-minded rulers. The greatest dangers to liberty lurk in insidious encroachment by men of zeal, well-meaning but without understanding."

The magnificent close cannot be quoted too often:

> Decency, security and liberty alike demand that Government officials shall be subjected to the same rules of conduct that are commands to the citizen. In a government of law, existence of the government will be imperiled if it fails to observe the law scrupulously. Our Government is the potent, the omnipresent teacher. For good or for ill, it teaches the whole people by its example.
> Crime is contagious. If the Government becomes a lawbreaker, it breeds contempt for law; it invites every man to become a law unto himself; it invites anarchy. To declare that in the administration of the criminal law the end justifies the means—to declare that the Government may commit crimes in order to secure the conviction of a private criminal—would bring terrible retribution. Against that pernicious doctrine this court should resolutely set its face.

The late Justice Holmes, with characteristic frankness and brevity, called it a "dirty business" that the Federal Government should be allowed to break the law of a state. "It is desirable that criminals should be detected," he said, but " . . . for my part, I think it a less evil that some criminals should escape than that the Government should play an ignoble part."

Government is playing an even more ignoble part in the case now before the Supreme Court. The Communications Act of 1934 explicitly prohibits the interception of communications and the disclosure of their contents without the permission of the sender. And yet the Government, through its counsel, is contending that when it listened in on some 500 telephone conversations of four bootleggers of alcohol through the Port of New York, it did not break the law! "Intercept," says the Government, means to "stop," whereas the agents did not "stop" the conversations, but merely overheard them during the course of transmittal!

Fortunately, there is good ground for hope that the 1928 decision will in effect be overruled. Justices Brandeis, Stone and Butler are still on the court. Only Justices McReynolds and Sutherland remain from among the five who upheld wire-tapping. Changes in personnel have been such that the decision may conceivably go against the Government by 6 to 3 or even 7 to 2. Indeed, there is the possibility that the pending case will be so distinguished from the Seattle case as to produce a unanimously adverse ruling. One reason for passing the Communications Act was to outlaw the kind of "dirty business" practiced at Seattle in the Olmstead case.

It is a happy circumstance that events have brought the issue before the court for re-examination.

A JINGLE FROM THE OZARKS.

The Ozarks. There's poetry in the word. And the hills themselves, rambling along in delightful vagrancy, are a constant, cordial invitation to the world to come and loaf and linger and refresh the soul. The world answers in gay, expanding numbers. Here are streams to fish and woods to hunt and winding roads to follow idly between terraces of green in the springtime and vast cathedrals of color when autumn splashes the canvas.

But the Ozarks have an economic flair, too. The farmers in that land of enchantment were paid $800,000 for their tomatoes this year, while spinach has just concluded a $2,000,000 speech. Let the cabbage luminators of that noble leaf try to laugh that off. And in the Ozarks they know beans and apples and blackberries, and the canners' pack for the season totals $7,000,000, making 1937 the best year since 1925.

There's gold in them thar hills.

STALIN'S MACHINE.

Tom Pendergast of Kansas City has on several occasions stated the first article of his political faith. Elections, he asserts, are won or lost in the precincts. Get the voters to the polls. The organization that does this wins. The organization that doesn't, loses. In the counting of votes, science or art may function effectively, but that is a secondary step.

As a practical political authority, Mr. Pendergast rates high, perhaps highest. His record of things done writes his certificate. But in Russia, they have achieved a perfection that eclipses the Pendergast system. They leave nothing to chance. They muzzle the opposition. They remove the result from the arena of debate.

A dispatch from Moscow relates that Soviet Russia has entered "the final phase of its first national political campaign." Stalin is "assured of election." So are those associated with him in the business of governing—the Commissars and party chieftains. There is only one party in the field—the Communist. There is only one issue—loyalty to Stalin. No open criticism is tolerated. Criticism is branded as "enemy propaganda." A dependable press has been provided by the process of "purifying" the editorial staffs of newspapers throughout the Soviet Union. No orator of the soap-box school or the higher learning will preach his incendiary doctrine in Russia. The thing isn't done.

Such is the news from Moscow. Presumably it is officially approved and may thus be accepted as correct. What does the gentleman from Kansas, Earl Browder, Communist candidate for President in last year's election, think about it?

In several cities, it will be recalled, Mr. Browder was denied the privilege of speaking. The most flagrant instance occurred in Terre Haute, Ind., which locked the visitor up. Public opinion protested. The Constitution was cited. For a brief hour, Mr. Browder wore a halo of martyrdom. Presently he resumed his itinerary.

Well, every town in all the Russias is, politically, a Terre Haute. And if Earl Browder were in Russia today and happened to feel that Stalin and his associates were not the best men for the jobs and, feeling so, ventured to say so, the Russian village of Terre Haute would be his last stand. He would cease forever from troubling.

If Russia wants things that way, all right. We'll take the democratic system that let Mr. Browder mount his soap box.

THE SPEECH OF F. D. R.

Columbia University has a grievance against Franklin D. Roosevelt. And it isn't Nicholas Murray Butler that is doing the talking, either. For once another voice is heard—that of Dr. Janet Rankin Aiken. What's her trouble? She accuses Mr. Roosevelt of "murdering the King's English."

That, we submit, stops most of us dead in our tracks. Since the Blue Eagle soared down the azure steeps of 1933's June skies, a good many minatory fingers have been pointed at the President, but most of us have fancied that diction was his dish. On his lips, a polemic looked like a pearl. As persuasive as Portia, as simply elegant, say, as Addison, lavish as Macaulay, with the unhackneyed choice of that virtuoso, Henry Adams—the rostrum was a richly draped throne whereon he sat in kingly ease.

The fine-toothed scrutiny of the Liberty League's impressive censorship, to mention but one agency of surveillance, never complained of how he said it. It moaned bitterly at the content, but the costume of his remarks was silkily unexceptionable. So said we all of us. Therefore—and let us assure Dr. Aiken that no one indulges the illative more sparingly than we—therefore it is a shock to be told that radio's superbus falls into the rusty-trap errancy of using "like" where all the grammatical gods command "as."

Are we to have a crusade for purer presidential speech? Is that the idea of Columbia University's Maid of Orleans? Can the woman be trying to start a back-to-Hoover march?

TAX REFORM AND THE LABOR MARKET.

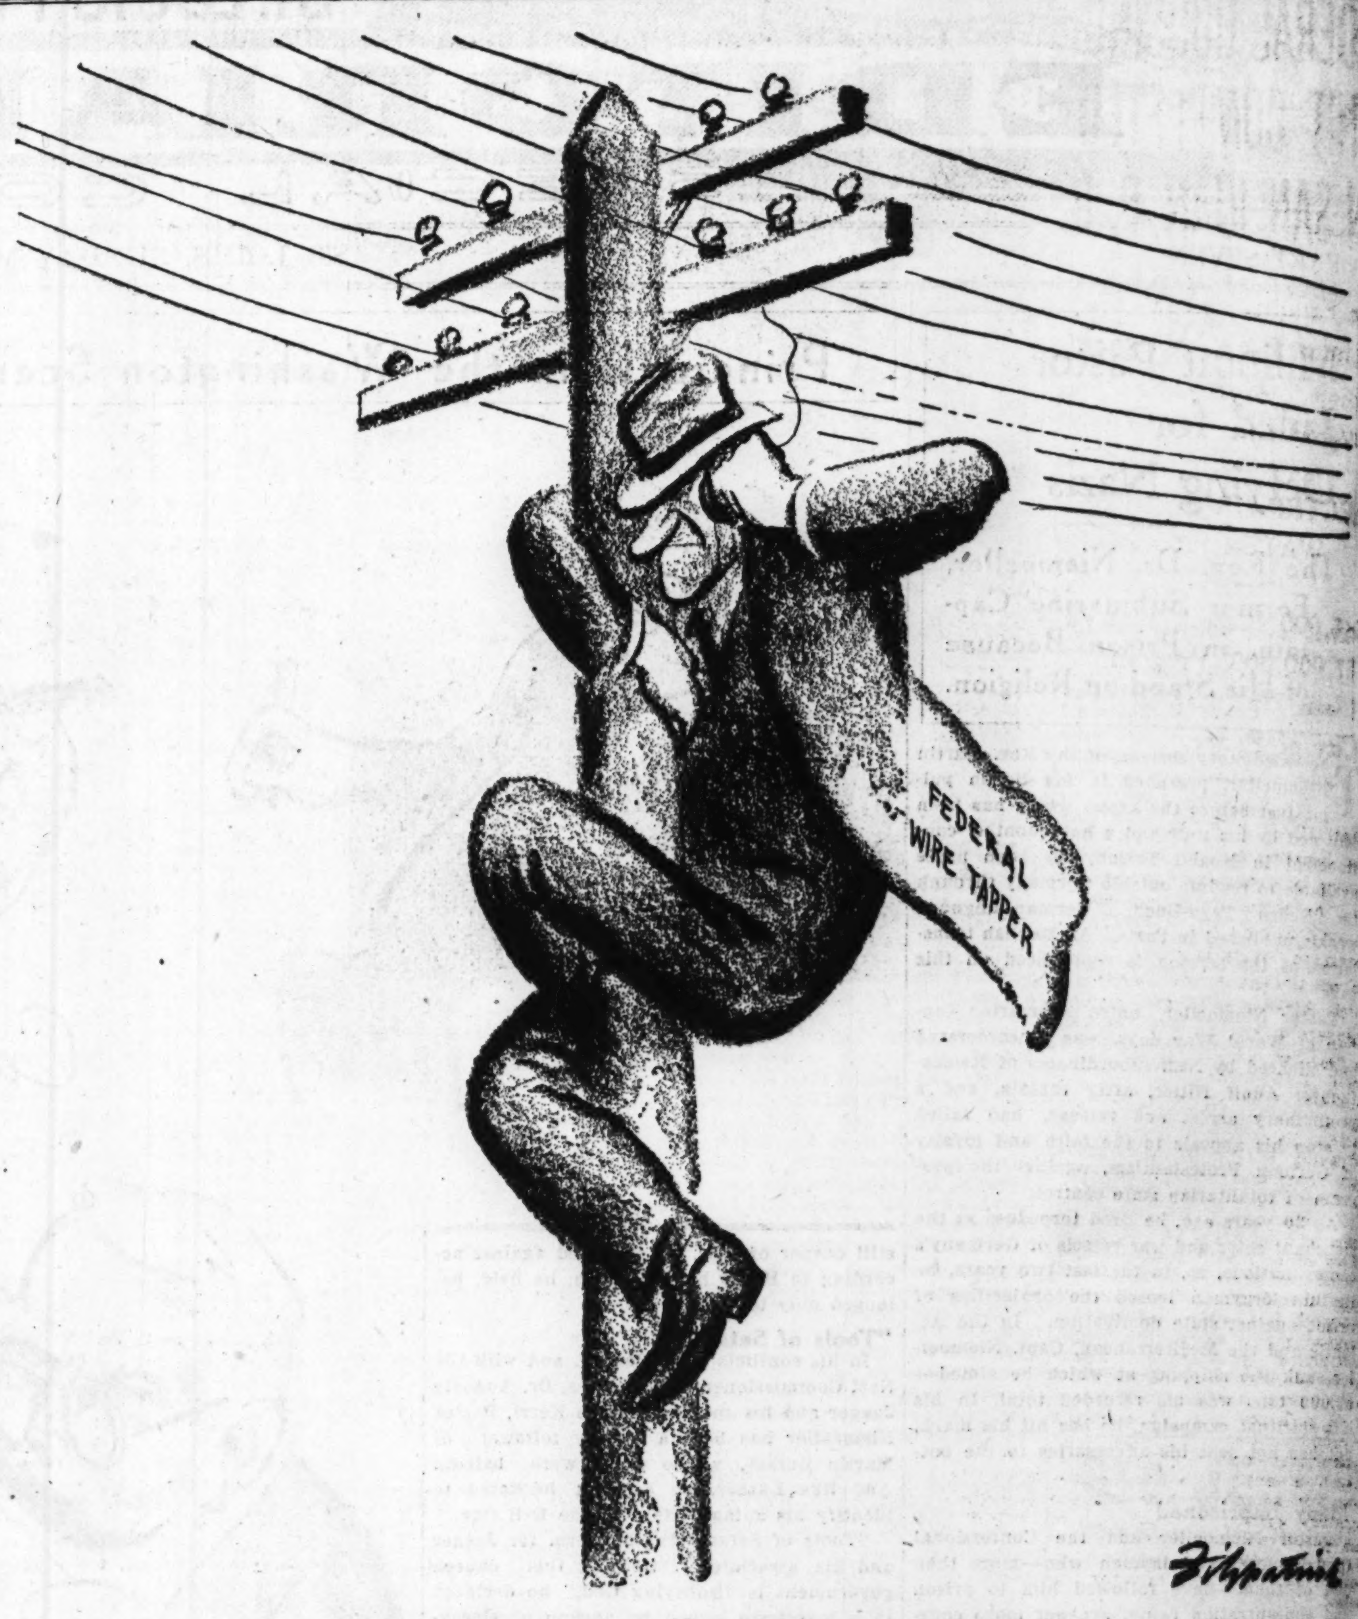
In an article reprinted on this page today, Charles F. Kettering, research director for the General Motors Corp., gives an illuminating discussion of how new inventions affect the labor market. Rifting the gloom of technological unemployment, he classifies new mechanical developments under two heads: labor-saving and labor-creating machines. He thinks that under the proper functioning of capital, the number of men displaced by the invention of labor-saving machinery should be offset by those given jobs manning machines manufacturing new products, supplying new needs.

Mr. Kettering goes on to criticise bankers for their backwardness in lending money for the development and manufacture of products which would open up new markets and create new jobs. His point strikes us as particularly timely, in view of the widespread sentiment for the revision of the Federal undistributed profits tax. For bankers are not to be blamed too severely if, in view of this tax, they are slow to make loans for building new plants.

A business man of good reputation and sound credit recently went to a bank in one of our large cities and asked for a loan of $200,000 to set up a plant to manufacture a new product—a labor-creating venture. The banker listened sympathetically, then inquired as to the plan for repaying the loan.

The would-be entrepreneur replied that he would repay it at the rate of $25,000 a year, out of the profits. The banker countered that this was impracticable, because the undistributed profits tax would take such a large share of his earnings as to make such payment doubtful. Result: the loan was not made, the plant was not built, the jobs were not created.

This example would seem to make it clear that revision of the undistributed profits tax is not an end sought primarily to enable men who have money to make more, but rather to remove an obstacle which is blocking the smooth working of our whole economic machinery. We are justified in the hope that if the obstacle is removed, an expansion of industry will ensue which will give employment to both idle capital and idle men. It would be naive to argue that tax reform would cure all our economic worries, but it is one trouble which we can put our finger on and which we should lose no time in remedying.



LAST SURVIVOR OF THE VOLSTEAD ERA.

Two Kinds of Inventions

Impossible for too much labor-saving machinery to be invented, if it is offset by development of labor-creating machines, says research engineer; points to automobile and radio as inventions providing new fields of employment; says capital's timidity in financing manufacture of new products is one cause of the depression.

Charles F. Kettering, Director of General Motors Research, in American Magazine.

IT has been said that depressions and unemployment are caused by "too much science and invention." Some people can prove it to you. Others can prove that inventions make more jobs than they destroy. It all seems most confusing.

Actually, it is rather simple, if you remember that there are two kinds of inventions: labor-saving inventions and labor-creating inventions.

Probably a quarter of the workers in America today are employed in industries which were mere infants, or did not exist at all, in 1900. The automobile industry alone gives direct and indirect employment to nearly 5,000,000 workers. The American chemical industry has grown tenfold in that time. And so with the motion picture, the electrical, the radio, the telephone and telegraph, the airplane industries and all their auxiliaries.

Right there you have 10,000,000 or so jobs which would not exist had they not been created by research and invention.

Meanwhile, labor-saving inventions have also been at work. They have produced automatic machinery, standardized assembly lines, and all the rest which enables one man to do the work of two. That is fine. It has made products cheaper, so that they can be enjoyed by all, and in so doing has broadened markets and contributed to human happiness.

So many people, when they speak of scientific development, have in mind only the labor-saving variety. They say it has gone ahead too fast, that we have not been able to absorb it. Now, my idea is just the opposite. The trouble is that technological development is behind the procession. We haven't had enough of it in recent years; haven't created enough new industries. As a research man, I'm willing to take part of the blame for this. But not all. The bankers and business men cannot escape their responsibility.

It works this way: Suppose the research man has a labor-saving idea. He takes it to the head of the company and says: "This new process will cost $1,000,000 to install, but it will save $400,000 a year in payrolls."

The president of the company and the bankers can see that. They understand bookkeeping. They appreciate balance sheets. And it is proper that they should.

But now our research man has another idea, a labor-creating idea. He goes to the boss again. "If we put $1,000,000 into research," he says, "I think we can develop a brand-new product, possibly a new industry running into millions a year. It's a good chance. But, of course, we may fail entirely."

The business man and the bankers are aghast. Why, this research fellow hasn't even a blueprint of what he is going to do, and he wants us to give him $1,000,000 to throw down the sewer!

Any bookkeeper can understand a labor-saving invention; only a man of imagination can understand a labor-creating invention. And not all men who hold the purse strings have the right kind of imagination.

That's one reason labor-creating has not gone further ahead of labor-saving. That's one reason for the depression. Nobody knows how much money the depression has cost us. Billions of dollars, we are told, and yet a billion dollars a year would keep 500 or 600 research laboratories going full time, laboratories turning out ideas which would develop into new industries to stave off depression.

I do not say that there would have been no depression had this amount of money been spent on research, for the success of the whole plan is predicated on there being enough trained men to fill these laboratories and enough men of the proper type to manage them. There must be someone to co-ordinate the work, to pick the problems that we are going to tackle. Of course, we haven't yet enough trained men to do this, but if we had them and this plan were carried on for a few years, there would be "Help Wanted" signs on every door of every factory in America.

I do think, however, that more business men are waking up to the fact that a well-run research division is the best insurance policy a company can take out.

Because I have had some success along research lines, my opinion is sometimes asked on questions of politics, legislation, government and economics. I should like very much to oblige, but I cannot.

But this I can say: However large our troubles may loom, from time to time, nothing can stop the progress of this country.

I think the next 10 years are going to see a complete renaissance in engineering and scientific development, in labor-creating invention. It is all ahead of us. At every period in time, there is somebody to say, "I don't see what there is now to be done." Go out and look.

Take any book that gives you the history of an industry. Tear out the back half of it; read up to there; and you will think that industry is finished.

If we can cast off the bugaboo of "Your world is finished," and put in its place "The world is begun," we have a marvelous place to live and a marvelous future ahead of us.

WE COULDN'T DO WITHOUT MUSIC.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

FRITZ KREISLER'S opinion that in the twentieth century the arts are trailing behind science both in popularity and development may be discouraging to young musicians, but if such a condition exists now, it is hardly likely to continue indefinitely. The great violinist's remark that had he been born recently, he "might have to be made to study wireless telegraphy or chemistry or physics," suggests that the world ought to rejoice that his nativity was as long ago as 1875 and in art-worshipping Vienna.

Music-loving mankind owes a debt of gratitude to twentieth century science for the radio, the phonograph and all other agencies that have made music obtainable in virtually all places at all times. But science doesn't compose the music, nor does science interpret it. These are the functions of art and of genius which the world can no more do without than it can do without science.

Our "Pension" Problem

From the Pleasant Hill (Mo.) Times.

HAS Missouri got "a bear by the tail"? In 1932, when we voted overwhelmingly for a Constitutional amendment to permit payment of old-age assistance to persons over 70 who "are incapacitated from earning a livelihood and are without means of support," leaders of the movement said the number of eligibles would be not more than 10,000, and the cost around $2,000,000 a year.

Today, we have 75,000 on the rolls—one out of every two persons over 70 years old in the State—and the cost is about $18,000,000 per year, the Federal Government paying half of it. To keep getting Federal assistance, we must reduce the age limit to 65 years at our next general election. That step, in the light of present performances, will increase the number of pensioners to more than 125,000 and the cost to more than $30,000,000 annually. The 2 per cent sales tax will never carry the load.

The trouble, we think, is that nearly everyone has started to regard the old-age assistance check ("pension" is not an accurate word for it) as the right of every person past 70, no matter how comfortably fixed, instead of what it really is—charity from the State for the indigent aged. Everyone has heard about cases in point.

There was the visitor from another state who applied for old-age help here, despite the fact he was getting a monthly old-age check in his own state, because he wanted "a little of that Missouri money." There was the retired mail carrier, getting an $85 monthly Federal pension, who applied for Missouri old-age help. There are the many cases of people who have got on the pension rolls by hiding personal property whose ownership disqualifies them for the pension.

One out of every two persons in Missouri over 70 is getting old-age assistance. It is unbelievable that 50 per cent of our aged people are actually indigent. The task that faces the new bi-partisan county social security boards is not getting worthy people on the rolls—they get on. The task is to keep the undeserving off.

Missouri can pay subsistence money to its aged poor, but the State is not wealthy enough to provide an allowance for every person over 65 who would like "a little of that Missouri money" to spend.

A DELIGHTFUL PROSPECT.

From the Pittsburgh Press.

IT'S pretty hard to be gloomy after reading the news from Chicago, where dealers report that turkeys now arriving are fatter than those of the last several years.

There's a reason, of course, why Thanksgiving turkeys, 1937 model, should be pleasingly plump. It is the big corn crop, which has made turkey feed plentiful and cheap.

The price of corn worries the farmers and the Government. But, at least, many an American family will be thankful, on November's last Thursday, for a bird whose drumsticks bulge nobly, whose white meat is ample and whose grease gives old-time richness to the accompanying gravy. And the price per pound for turkey promises to be not much, if any, higher than last year.

Streamlining may go great in autos, airplanes, railway trains and modernistic furniture. It will never be popular in turkeys. We're all for the More Abundant Gobbler.

FEDERAL HOUSING UNIT COMPLETED IN SAN JUAN, P. R.

216 Families Move From Slums Into Government-Built Apartment on Waterfront.

ELECTRICITY AND WATER PROVIDED

$645,000 Project First in $7,000,000 Program to Clean Up Capital and City of Ponce.

(Copyright, 1937.)

SAN JUAN, P. R., Nov. 20.—The first beneficiaries of a Federal housing project here have moved from the slums of the city into a Government-built apartment on the Puerta de Tierra waterfront.

From tin and wooden shacks in which chickens and pigs were no strangers to kitchen and bedroom, the families moved into 216 apartments in a three-story concrete structure of the same general design as the model houses in the Harlem district of New York.

Opening of the $645,000 apartment house marked completion of the first step in a projected $7,000,000 clearance program in the slums of San Juan and Ponce.

Two other major problems, first tackled two years ago next month when the Puerto Rican Reconstruction Administration began to function, are that of the rapidly multiplying population, already nearly twice as large as the island can support; and the inefficiency of 76 separate local governments or municipalities functioning in an agricultural land slightly larger than Delaware. The native Legislature this summer struck off the penalties against distribution of contraceptive information as a step toward the reform of the first situation, but the latter remains unsolved.

29 Per Cent of People in Slums.

Miles H. Fairbank, who succeeded Dr. Ernest C. Gruening in July as head of the P R R A, (pronounced "Prah" in Puerto Rico), said recently that he placed slum clearance high on the list of major tasks because 29 per cent of the population of San Juan had sunk into the slums, and had ringed the Capitol with a moral and health hazard. Nor are the slums an asset in Gov. Blanton Winship's program of "turismo," the attraction of American and European tourist trade. La Perla (The Pearl), an ironically named slum, hangs down the face of a cliff next to El Morro Fort like a libelous billboard defaming the country to every incoming ship, and Miranda, a slum built on stilts over a malaria-infested swamp, lies opposite the Pan-American airport.

The new apartment, known on the P R R A ledgers as "Project A," has electricity in every room and running water, luxuries that few of the families have enjoyed before. There is no gas, but Puerto Ricans consider that no privation, for not even the Governor's palatial mansion, La Fortaleza, is supplied with gas. Charcoal stoves have been installed.

One of the knottiest problems facing Gruening and Fairbank was the question of rents. What could the erstwhile slum dwellers pay? Although P R R A officials were forewarned of conditions by casual trips through the slums, where naked children played with livestock, and sanitation and sewage disposal were unknown, they were shocked when the figures were obtained. Some families in La Perla were existing on 25 cents a week. The majority got along on $4 or $5. The tenants who started moving on Nov. 8 were charged $2 to $4.50 weekly.

Eleanor Roosevelt Project.

Far more dramatic than the apartment house ventures of the Federal Government in San Juan is the huge Eleanor Roosevelt development at Hato Rey. Within ferry ride of the international docks of San Juan, the source of livelihood of a majority of the prospective residents, the P R R A is erecting what the slum dwellers can regard only as a dream city. There every relocated family will have its own home in the Puerto Rican tradition. The apartment house is a new, although popular, introduction.

The Eleanor Roosevelt project, when finished in 1940, will house 2619 families at an expenditure of $5,500,000 to $6,000,000, all but $400,000 or $500,000 of which will come from Federal funds. Spreading over 220 acres, the new city is already rising from the flats. Under construction are 416 homes, all of which will be finished in February or March, 1938, at a cost of $1,300,000, according to current estimates.

The regenerated families will occupy identical homes. Built of reinforced concrete and hurricane-proof, each contains a sala, or living room, two bedrooms, all about nine feet square; a kitchen, a shower bath, wash basin and toilet, electricity and charcoal stoves. Inside and out modernistic designs prevail. Running but not hot water will be available in each house, and a sewage system is being installed. The houses will cost $1800 to $2000 each.

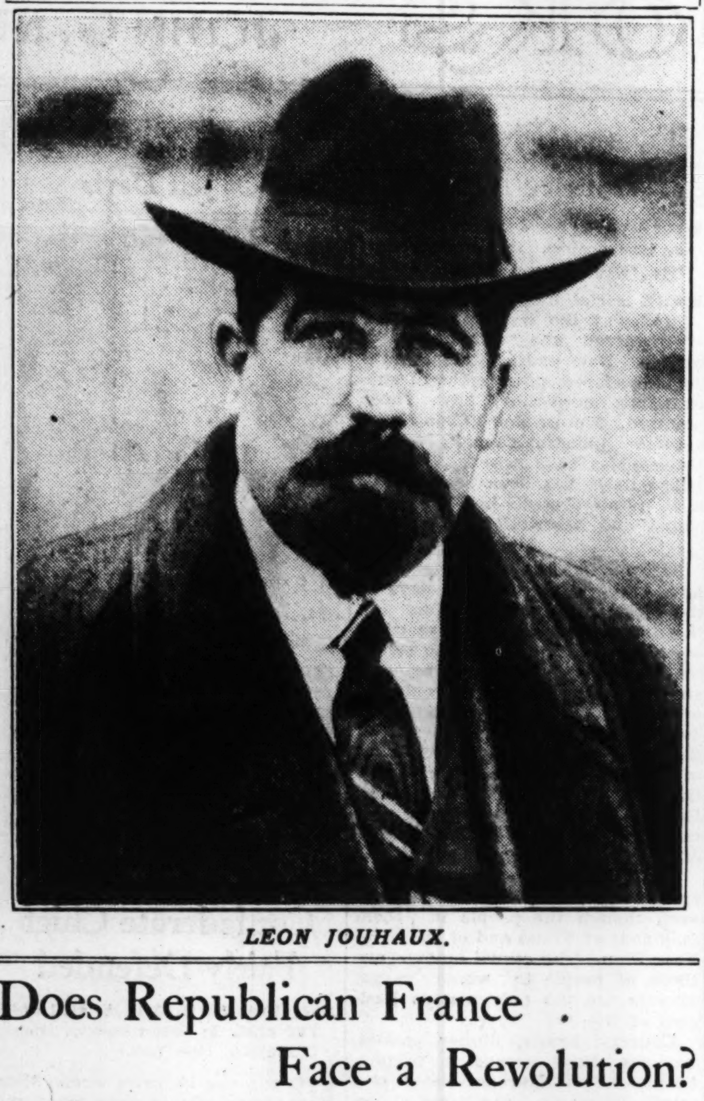
Leader of French Labor Unions



LEON JOUHAUX.

Does Republican France Face a Revolution?

the C. G. T. and of the local trade unions secretaries belong to the Communist Party, the C. G. T. has during the last twelve months been gradually returning to pre-War Syndicalism. Even many former leaders of the C. G. T. U. are steadily becoming more and more Syndicalist and less and less Communist. The truth is that most of them never really were Marxists and rallied to the Communist Party because it was revolutionary and the C. G. T. had become 'reformist.' Leon Jouhaux, who is still General Secretary of the C. G. T., as he was before the war, is once more the revolutionary Jouhaux whom I knew a quarter of a century ago.

French Temperament.

In my opinion, Syndicalism is much more suited to the French temperament than Marxist Socialism, or, as it is now usually called, Communism. Perhaps, as regards their ultimate ideals, there is less difference between the Marxists and the Syndicalists than they think, but they differ profoundly about the methods of attaining their ideals. The French would never accept a system of State Capitalism, such as at present exists in Soviet Russia, however much they might be told that it was only a transitional stage. The totalitarian state in any form is detestable to Frenchmen. In any case, the revival in France of anti-parliamentarism of the Left and revolutionary Syndicalism has become very marked recently and seems likely to have important consequences. It would not surprise me if the Socialist and Communist Parties were ultimately swamped by the C. G. T.

Amalgamation Unlikely.

An amalgamated Socialist-Communist Party might be better able to come to terms with the C. G. T. than the two existing parties, but, even if that be so, the amalgamation is not likely to come in time to prevent a breach with the C. G. T. The immediate cause of the great revival of revolutionary Syndicalism and anti-parliamentarism is the failure of the People's Front, for it has failed and it can hardly hold together much longer. And the ultimate cause of the failure was the foreign policy of the People's Front Government, or rather its lack of any policy of its own and its subservience to the British Foreign Office. Leon Blum's capitulation to the British Government on Aug. 8, 1936, on the question of Spain was deeply resented by nine-tenths of his followers, and now that the disastrous consequences of the capitulation are evident the resentment is deeper than ever.

In the last days of July, 1936, Leon Blum had decided to give every facility to the Spanish Government for obtaining war material in France. A letter that he wrote to the Spanish Embassy in Paris, giving full particulars of what he was prepared to do, came into the hands of the Italian Government, no doubt by the treachery of somebody in the Spanish Embassy favorable to Franco, and was published by the Italian press some months later. Among other things Pierre Cot, the French Air Minister, had authorized the French airplane manufacturers to sell to the Spanish Government all the airplanes ready for delivery to the French army.

On Aug. 2, 1936, the French Government decided to propose to the other Governments a policy of 'non-intervention' in Spain, but it was clearly indicated that the French Government would not put an embargo on exports of war material to Spain unless and until all other governments did the same. The British Foreign Office got wind of the arrangements made by Leon Blum with the Spanish Government, and between Aug. 2 and Aug. 8, Sir George Clerk, who was then British Ambassador to Paris, called on Yvon Delbos, the French Foreign Minister, and informed him that if, by reason of the deliverv of French war material to the Spanish Government, France got into trouble with Germany, the British Government would not regard a German attack on France as an unprovoked aggression and the Treaty of Locarno would therefore not come into operation. This was in reality mere bluff. The British Government will always go to the aid of France if that country is attacked by Germany because it will never run the risk of allowing the French channel ports to be in German hands.

Blum's Surrender.

Leon Blum no doubt knew that it was bluff, but the three leading Radical Ministers—Delbos, Edmond Daladier, Minister of War, and Camille Chautemps, the present Prime Minister—threatened to resign unless the French Government immediately put an embargo on the export of all war material to Spain. At a Ministerial Council held on Aug. 8, 1936, the matter was discussed. The Cabinet was divided on the question, but finally Blum gave way to the Radicals and the embargo demanded by them was decided on.

Before the Ministerial Council was held, the C. G. T. brought strong pressure on Blum to stand firm even if the Radical Ministers carried out their threat of resignation and even if it meant the breakup of the People's Front. The view of the C. G. T. was that if Blum stood firm and if the Radical Ministers resigned, the Radical party would split in two and Blum would retain a diminished majority in the Chamber of Deputies. In any case, the C. G. T. held that it was better to take the risk than to betray the Spanish Government under British pressure.

The Communist party at first supported the C. G. T. in this action, but backed out at the last moment for reasons of internal politics. This action on the part of the Communists is resented by the C. G. T. to this day. The result was that the French Government put on an embargo and stopped the export of war material to Spain while the German and Italian governments discussed the question of "non-intervention" for a month before they agreed to it, and meanwhile poured into Spain war material and even troops for Franco. As everybody knows the "non-intervention" agreement never was observed by Germany or Italy after they had signed it. This is what is so deeply resented by the French workmen.

Had Blum Stuck—?

Had Blum stuck to his original policy in regard to Spain, he could have induced the French workmen to allow the Government to go more slowly in the application of the 40-hour week and other social measures. As it was, he was obliged to push those measures too quickly in the hope of allaying the discontent caused by the Spanish policy of the Government. The incompetence of Vincent Auriol, the Minister of Finance, did the rest and the People's Front Government succumbed to the attack of the great financial interests. The Government that has succeeded it is not really in People's Front Government, but a coalition of Right wing Radicals and Right wing Socialists to which the inclusion of Leon Blum, Pierre Cot and one or two others gives a delusive People's Front appearance.

The Spanish policy was only the first of the many blunders in foreign policy made by the Blum Government. After a year of office, that Government has left France in a worse position than she has ever been in for half a century. Nearly all her Eastern friends and allies have been alienated. This is now recognized by an increasing number of French workmen, but it is the betrayal of Republican Spain that rankles most and the downfall of the Blum Government really dates from that betrayal.

The consequence of all this is that a rapidly increasing number of French workmen say that they are disgusted with all the political parties and all the politicians, that there must be something demoralizing in the parliamentary system and that the only hope is in the C. G. T. and in "direct action." Leon Blum's influence, once so great, has been seriously impaired, and he and his group have only a small majority on the newly-elected national executive of the Socialist party.

A Serious Possibility.

The formation by the C. G. T. of a non-parliamentary Government is seriously contemplated. A Government composed wholly or partly of persons not members of Parliament would not in itself be unconstitutional. The French Constitution does not require Ministers to be members of the Senate or the Chamber of Deputies and, although there has never yet been a French Prime Minister who was not either a Senator or a Deputy, there have often been other Ministers who were neither. Would the President of the Republic, however, consent to ask Leon Jouhaux, for instance, to form a Cabinet and, if he did consent, would such a Cabinet obtain a majority in the Chamber of Deputies? The answer to both these questions is doubtful, but the Syndicalists say that they would do without the consent of the President of the Republic and the approval of the Chamber, if necessary. That would mean something very like a revolution, for a Government existing in such conditions would clearly be unconstitutional.

I do not say that this will happen, for I do not know whether it will happen or not. But I do say that it is at least possible.

MISSOURI TEACHERS CLOSE 75TH MEETING

Pageant, 'Horace Mann — Torchbearer', Marks the Final Session.

The Missouri State Teachers' Association closed its seventy-fifth annual meeting here yesterday.

Formed in St. Louis in 1856, but not always holding a convention annually in the past, it has attained a new record of membership, exceeding 24,000 men and women. There are fewer than 1000 Missouri teachers who are not members.

Horace Mann, famous educator, attended the 1856 session on his first visit to Missouri. It was just 100 years ago that he began his work in the development of the modern school, as secretary of the Massachusetts State Board of Education. In his honor, a pageant, "Horace Mann—Torchbearer," was presented at the closing general session yesterday. The actors were teachers and students of Southeast Missouri State Teachers' College, Cape Girardeau, and of the public schools of that city. The author was Miss Dorothy Eckelmann, a grade school teacher at Cape Girardeau.

The pageant was preceded by an address by Belmont Farley of Washington, publicity director for the National Education Association, who declared that universal educational opportunities were far from an accomplished fact in the United States. He depicted the great gap between the best and poorest American schools.

Friday night the convention was addressed by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who spoke mainly in a simple exposition of the theory motivating her husband's New Deal in government.

The assembly approved committee recommendations including the following: Proposal for an initiative proposition in next November's general election for creation of an appointive State Board of Education, replacing the elective State Superintendent of Schools; continued advocacy of a teachers' retirement pay system; adherence to the policy of appropriting one-third of general State revenue to the school fund; a thorough study of financing of Missouri schools at the association's expense, for submission to a Governor's commission for recommendations for improvement of education; adequate pay for teachers and increased pay for Missouri legislators; higher standards for rural education.

William E. Goslin, superintendent of Webster Groves schools, was elected first vice-president. Under a new constitutional provision, he will automatically become president a year hence. The new president is William F. Knox of the faculty of Warrensburg State Teachers' College. They and other new officers assumed their duties yesterday.

MRS. CLARA TUCKER FUNERAL AT 2:30 P. M. TOMORROW

Services at First Congregational Church With Burial in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Funeral services for Mrs. Clara Van Norstrand Tucker, widow of the Rev. Frederick D. Tucker, will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at First Congregational Church, Wydown boulevard and University lane, Clayton. Burial will be in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Mrs. Tucker died yesterday at her home, 5917 Washington avenue, after a long illness. She was the granddaughter of the Rev. Truman M. Post, first pastor of First Congregational Church. Her husband, who died about a year ago, was at one time pastor in Morris, Ill., and later professor at the University of Minnesota.

Surviving are a son, F. Deming Tucker Jr., and two sisters, Mrs. Horace Coit Learned of New London, Conn., and Miss Katharine H. Van Norstrand of St. Louis.

VALLEY ASSOCIATION TO MEET TOMORROW

Industrial and Waterways Group Will Formulate Stand on Legislation.

The Mississippi Valley Association, representing industrial and waterways leaders in the midcontinental area, will formulate its position toward prospective national legislation at its nineteenth annual convention at the Hotel Statler tomorrow and Tuesday.

The stand it will take already has been indicated by its board of directors, which opposes the following legislative proposals:

The "Regional Authorities Bills" to zone the country into seven sections for regional development along T V A lines.

The Black-Connery bill to regulate wages and working hours in industry.

Pending legislation to limit train lengths to 70 cars, to increase the size of train crews and to shorten the railroad working day from 8 to 6 hours without decrease in pay.

Parts of the executive reorganization bill.

Most of these measures have been proposed since the convention met here a year ago so that this meeting offers the association its first opportunity to speak on them as a whole. Its policy will be embraced in the report of the resolutions committee which will come before the association Tuesday afternoon. The directors, in opposing the bills, acted under powers which they exercise between conventions.

Flood Control Funds.

Demand for release of funds appropriated by Congress for a $600,000,000 flood control program for the Mississippi River system is another important action which will be urged upon the convention.

These appropriations, totaling $45,000,000, were made by Congress last summer to start work on the program laid out in the Overton and Copeland-Wilson Flood Control acts. These two pieces of legislation authorize construction of reservoirs and control works to impound flood waters on the major tributaries of the Mississippi and spillways and channel straightening projects to speed drainage on the lower stretches of the river.

The association held a special meeting on flood control here in March after the record winter flood on the Ohio River. Since then dissatisfaction has grown because of executive delay in making available for construction the funds which Congress has appropriated, Lachlan Macleay, executive vice-president of the association, said.

The keynote speech on flood control will be given at the opening session tomorrow morning by Congressman Will M. Whittington of Mississippi, chairman of the House Flood Control Committee. The Black-Connery bill will be discussed on the first day by Congressman W. J. Driver of Arkansas, an opponent.

The association's sympathy with the opposition to the three railroad labor bills is emphasized by its invitation to a railroad representative, R. V. Fletcher, general counsel of the Association of American Railroads, to speak at its dinner tomorrow night. Never before, Macleay said, has a railroad man spoken on the dinner program although the association often sides with railroads on matters which do not conflict with its championship of waterways. Fletcher will discuss the railroad labor bills, which, it is contended, will add greatly to the cost of transportation.

Regional Authority Bills.

John D. Battle, executive secretary of the National Coal Association, will speak on the regional authorities bills on the afternoon of opening day. The association leadership fears that either this legislation or the section of the executive reorganization bill creating a Federal Department of Public Works would remove jurisdiction over flood control and waterways development from the United States Army Engineering Corps and result in delay, duplication of work and instability in administration.

Three regional authorities bills are pending in Congress, the Norris bill in the Senate, and its companion measure in the House, both of which propose direct creation of the seven regional authorities, and the Mansfield bill in the House, which would empower the President to institute hydro-electric projects within the zones into which the country would be divided.

Luncheon and Dinner.

Arthur J. Weaver, president, will call the convention to order at 10 a. m. tomorrow. Weaver, a former Governor of Nebraska, last year succeeded Robert Isham Randolph of Chicago, longtime president of the association.

A joint luncheon will be held Tuesday with the Chamber of Commerce. Dr. W. F. Gephart, a vice-president of the First National Bank, will speak on the undistributed profits and capital gains taxes, sharing the program with Gov. Nelson G. Kraschel of Iowa. General sessions will be held in the morning and afternoon both days of the convention.

Delegations from 28 states have notified Macleay that they will attend. Dinner speakers besides Fletcher will be Brigadier-General E. M. Stayton of Kansas City, commander-in-chief of the Missouri National Guard, and James E. Gheen of New York. The new chief of the Army Engineers, Major-General Julian L. Schley, will speak on the opening program.

Militant Pastor Jailed For Defying Nazi Rule

Christ called 'false shepherds and hirelings.' Any reorganization of the church can be effected only from the standpoint that God alone is lord of the church."

His sermon of June 27, profoundly spiritual and uncompromising in tone, compared the leaders of Christianity in Germany to the apostles, led by Peter, who suffered persecution in the early years of Christianity, but who refused obedience to the decrees which, if obeyed, would have stifled the new faith in its cradle. He was arrested July 1.

The charge against him, incitement to rebellion, has been made public by the Nazi authorities, but his trial has been deferred. A possible advantage to the authorities is seen in these tactics. Since the first heat of indignation over the pastor's arrest passed, the lack of his leadership has been seriously felt by his sympathizers remaining at liberty, and no one else has been able to raise funds for financing the resistance as Niemoeller did.

Prof. Gerhard Jacobi, in charge of the still defiant Dahlem congregation, announced last week that the number of pastors and laymen imprisoned by the Nazis had increased to 112; 37 confessional pastors had been suspended without imprisonment; 36 had been expelled from their parishes, and 31 forbidden to preach. Prof. Jacobi, arrested last summer, was acquitted by a Berlin court.

Since his incarceration, word has come from Niemoeller to his followers "not to lament, but to praise and thank God."

Refuses Conditional Freedom.

In an attempt to avoid a trial, the Nazi authorities offered Niemoeller his freedom, on the condition that he refrain from public leadership of the church's crusade against its enemies. He refused to make such a promise.

That the imprisoned leader is in grave personal danger is recognized. A former pastor of the American Church in Berlin, in a recent statement, hinted at these dangers by saying: "If it were to be announced that Niemoeller had hanged himself in jail, not 20 persons in all Germany would believe it."

A manifesto, inspired by Niemoeller, has been issued by his ministerial brethren since his arrest. It declared that the church "being bound by the word of God, cannot obey" certain of the state's decrees, such as those against teaching and training candidates for the clergy, against handling its own financial matters, and against public discussion of church elections and public reading of the names of those who have quit the church.

Of Peasant Ancestry.

Pastor Niemoeller is 47 years old, and is of Westphalian peasant ancestry. As a youth, he wished to study for the ministry, but his parents, who could not afford the cost of a theological course, sent him to the state-supported Naval Academy at Kiel. Sons of the nobility filled the regular line of naval promotion, but it was possible for a poor and ambitious young man to advance in the then new branch of submarine service, and Niemoeller entered that service.

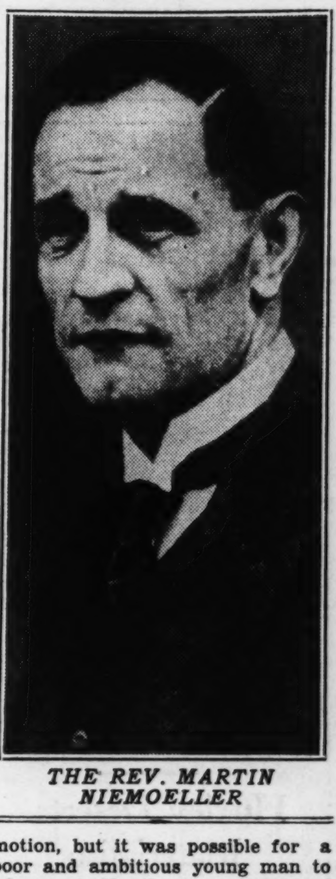
As navigation officer of the U-73, he made that craft known as the scourge of the Mediterranean. The U-73 sank a British cruiser and sowed mines around the fortress of Malta. The whole British Mediterranean fleet joined in the pursuit of the U-73, which was obliged to hide and was given up for lost.

Won Iron Cross in War.

When he returned, Niemoeller was placed in command of the U-151, which for four months preyed on the merchant vessels of allied nations. By his feats in the Atlantic, Niemoeller won the Iron Cross and a popular ovation. In the latter part of the war, commanding the U-67, he sank three troop ships, and was bombed by French airplanes. Ordered to report to Scapa Flow for surrender at the war's end, he ignored the order.

Returning to Germany, Niemoeller found himself obliged, in spite of his distinction in the national service, to work as a farm and railroad laborer. He managed to enter the University of Muenster for his delayed theological course, which was once interrupted while he renewed his railroad employment to get more money. After his graduation, he was appointed pastor of the ancient church of Dahlem. He married a young woman whom he had met when on shore leave in the submarine service.

JAILED BY NAZIS



THE REV. MARTIN NIEMOELLER

Sermon That Drew Down Nazi Wrath on Pastor

lance is here broken cannot be observed toward the Christian faith and its propagation. Obviously one cannot here await in watchful neutrality what will happen, determining one's final attitude according to the result. With all his wisdom, decency and piety, Gamaliel errs in holding the case of Jesus of Nazareth closed, citing such precedents as Theudas and Judas. He errs in representing the case of the Apostles as a new action, the outcome of which should not be predicted.

Actually the Apostles preached the very opposite of what Gamaliel believed and did. They preached Him who was crucified and who rose from the dead. They preached that God had already decided their case; that no visible success or failure could alter the fact that Jesus of Nazareth crucified was the living Lord and Christ of His Congregation; that any decision to acknowledge or deny Him could not be made dependent upon some future sign. Whoever, having heard the word of the Cross, failed to decide for this Lord, decided against Him even though he were unaware of having made any binding decision at all. The words of Jesus Himself, "He who is not with me is against me," preclude any neutrality. The message from the Cross places before us the alternative: faith or disbelief, salvation or damnation, life or death. Thus all neutrality, including the benevolent kind, here turns to enmity, even though God may avail Himself of it—as everything must serve Him—to realize His will on earth.

"A Serious Temptation."

Though God utilized it then (in the case of Gamaliel) and may again do so today to help His congregation, the counsel of Gamaliel, however good, honest and pious were its intentions, is a serious temptation for us Christians. It would persuade us to look upon the visible, upon success—to base our faith somehow on experience. And this temptation has more power over us, perhaps, than we admit to ourselves, for we are all too ready to draw from the misery and the sorrow through which we must pass the conclusion: God is not with us, after all; it is not, after all, worth while to keep professing it; all is futile and in vain.

Dear friends, let us not forget that God has created our salvation in the Cross of His Son; that He administers this salvation to us by allowing us to hear and believe the message; and that there is nothing else in heaven or on earth on which we might base our faith. Let us remember in this time of special trials and tribulations that every effort for security elsewhere, every flirting with support of a different kind, has the very opposite result from that which we desire, leading us to shipwreck and founder. The very Cross of Jesus stands for death, for being forsaken by God. We can foresee nothing else.

Were we to hold with Gamaliel, we would conclude that our faith is based, after all, upon man's word and man's work! But the Gospel says that God's love triumphs and manifests itself in faith. Here are God's counsel and God's work, and whoever believes is rich. The sorrow of the congregation, the humiliation we bear in the presence of the crucified Man of Nazareth—these are indeed a painful burden bearing down upon us, and doubt would creep into our souls: our faith—is it after all only the counsel and the work of man? But Jesus says: "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, for my sake." Our faith hears these words, clings to their promise and grows joyful and confident over them.

Really, my brothers and sisters: Are we joyful and confident?

Anxiety Grows.

We have come to know today that pious phrases, a little Protestant enthusiasm, and our normal measure of healthy optimism serve neither us nor others. Anxiety grows, and whoever has had to suffer the barrage of the tempter in these last days—I am thinking of how the secret police invaded the locked Friedrichwerder Church last Wednesday, arresting and dragging away from the altar eight members of the Reich Council of Brethren who had assembled there; I am thinking of how six women and a dignitary of the Evangelical community were arrested yesterday in Saarbrucken for having distributed an election leaflet of the Confessional Church on the order of the Council of Brethren—I say, whoever has suffered such things as these is almost ready to repeat the words of the prophet and cry: "Now, O Lord, take away my life."

And whoever has, as I had on Friday evening during the communion service, no one beside him but three young men from the Gestapo, under orders to investigate the congregation of Jesus in its praying, singing and preaching—young men who surely once upon a time were baptised in the name of Jesus, who surely once upon a time vowed their faith in their Savior, but who now set traps for His congregation—whoever has seen this, him the humiliation of the church will not easily leave. Lord, have mercy!

We remember that today over in St. Anne's Church the pulpit remains empty because our Reverend Brother Muller, together with 47 other Christian brothers and sisters of our Evangelical Church, is held in custody. We remember at the same time that even within the ranks of the Christian community we hear: "perhaps not all of them are entirely innocent." And we remember that the first summary trials are to begin this coming week. My dear friends: Are we truly joyful and confident? Or are we hopeless and frightened?

Christ the Only Recourse.

We have no recourse but to turn to the Crucified One and to learn to say in simple and sure faith: "In the depths of my heart Thy name and cross shine now and forever; thereof will I rejoice!" We then may still be far from feeling true joy like the apostles, who were deemed worthy of suffering indignity for Jesus' sake. Our path cannot be covered in a day, and it is good so, lest we mistake a mood for faith instead of listening to the Word of our Lord in the face of temptation, ceasing never to read and to teach, to hear and to preach the message of the cross, the gospel of Jesus Christ; for our faith feeds on these words and from them springs our joy.

"Lord, give us always such bread!" Amen.

PROPOSAL TO ERECT DR. BEAUMONT STATUE

Discussion to Be Held at Pilgrimage to Surgeon's Grave Today.

A proposal for erection of a statue of Dr. William Beaumont, noted surgeon, in Kenrick Garden will be discussed at the third annual pilgrimage to his grave in Bellefontaine Cemetery at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Kenrick Garden, which faces the headquarters of the St. Loius Medical Socieyt, is the small triangular city park fronting on Lindell boulevard and Vandeventer and McPherson avenues. It has been proposed to raise funds for a monument of heroic size.

Dr. Beaumont, who was born at Lebanon, Conn., 152 years ago today and died here April 25, 1853, was famous for discoveries on the laws of digestion. He is also remembered as the surgeon who saved the life of a seriously wounded man, then studied the digestive processes for years through an aperture in the patient's body disclosing the stomach. Beaumont High School was named in his honor.

Ceremonies at the grave, which may be reached by way of the West Florissant avenue gate of the cemetery near Kingshighway, and which will be public, will be in charge of Dr. Robert E. Schlueter, chairman of the Beaumont Memorial Committee.

Dr. Solon Cameron, vice-chairman of the committee and a member of the Board of Education, will tell of the plans for raising funds and erecting the statue. Chancellor George R. Throop of Washington University will speak on Dr. Beaumont's achievements.

The Boys' Glee Club of Beaumont High School will sing. Among those present will be delegations from the Medical Society and from Lloyd Boutwell Post of the American Legion, which is composed exclusively of physicians and dentists.

Jones, an attorney, for the vice-chairman; Harold T. Jolley, vice-president of the Boatmen's National Bank, for treasurer; Willard R. Cox, Leo C. Fuller, Richard S. Hawes, Sidney Maestre, Charles H. Morrill and William T. Nardin for the executive committee.

Candidates for three-year terms on the board of directors are: Charles Belknap, R. E. Blake, David R. Calhoun Jr., Mayor B. F. Dickmann, S. W. Fordyce, A. P. Greensfelder, Henry W. Kiel, F. M. Mayfield, E. T. Rainey, A. C. Stannard, Harry B. Wallace and David P. Wohl. Candidates to complete unexpired terms on the board are J. B. Wilson, J. W. Harris and Hugh McK. Jones.

The election will be held Dec. 8, at the offices of the Chamber of Commerce. Ballots will be mailed about Nov. 30.

To Speak on African Tour.

Julian P. Scott of St. Louis, who has just returned from a seven-month tour of Africa, will speak on "Natives and Animals of Africa" at a meeting of the St. Louis League for the Hard of Hearing Saturday at 8 p. m. at 4527 Westminster place. He will illustrate the talk with photographs and articles typical of native craft-work. The public is invited.

"Of Making Many Books"

EDITED BY JOHN G. NEIHARDT

A Viscount's Quest For Truth

BELIEF AND ACTION. By Herbert Samuel. (The Bobbs-Merrill Co., Indianapolis.)

WHAT can the inquisitive and conscientious modern man believe? How can he chart a course of action through the rapidly multiplying confusions in our world?

Viscount Samuel's book is designed to serve more as a stimulant to discussion than as an answer. The author first explores the functions of the mind and the influences shaping it, and points out that man in the physical realm has forged far beyond the understanding of savants of the preceding centuries. He holds that the revelation of the inner structure of matter, proceeding from the molecule to the atom and from the atom to the electron, so far has been science's paramount achievement. On the psychical side, however, our knowledge is at about the same stage as was man's perception of matter three or four centuries ago. As yet, no Galileo or Newton of psychology has appeared.

It is Viscount Samuel's contention that science has not negated the essential theory of religion. The inflexibility of the organized church and its ill-advised opposition to progress have brought it into disrepute with thinking people. The Viscount sees the great religions and the various independent creeds standing in a circle within which stands Truth. If they turn their backs on her, each one going his separate way, the rifts between believers must widen. If, however, they face inward and approach Truth, they will come within reach of her and at the same time will be able to grasp each other's hands.

Viscount Samuel is no pacifist, though he scores the idea, now glorified by Fascist states, that war is the inevitable "destiny" of mankind. That wars have always been is no valid argument. "Civilization emerges from barbarism precisely through the discovery that the right is not identical with the customary." But, the Viscount continues, it is unavoidable that the peoples who value peace and freedom should accept the duty of countering aggressive force, if need be, by defensive force. Just how this would apply, specifically, to Spain and China at the present time, the author does not say.

So many neat (and insipid) packages of painless culture and easy "guides" to this or the other have been issued that it is invigorating to pore over Viscount Samuel's road map, which indicates no royal highway to knowledge or truth, but painstakingly notes where bridges are down, where terra incognita lies, and where the going is rough.

By the Author Of "Invasion"

HATH NOT THE POTTER. By Maxence Van der Meersch. Translated by Gerard Hopkins. (The Viking Press, New York.)

WHEN Domitien Van Bergen married Wilfrida, he came into contact with a life different from that he had known. Wilfrida belonged to a poverty-stricken peasant family, common enough in Flanders. Domitien was fond of Wilfrida's niece Karelina, who was only nine years old at the time of Wilfrida's wedding. In a moment of playfulness he told Karelina that whenever she was unhappy she was to call for him and he would help.

In the main, "Hath Not the Potter" is the story of how Domitien did help Karelina to happiness by rescuing her from an exceptionally brutal husband, and how that act brought misfortune to Domitien—but not only misfortune, for at the same time he knew content and fulfillment of purpose.

Although the story of Domitien and Karelina is delicately told and that of the love of Domitien and Wilfrida even more sensitively drawn, there are many turbulent scenes. Karelina's husband, Gomar, is a smuggler and a rough, lawless character generally. His friends and acquaintances are likewise crude and brutal in greater or less degree. Some of the most vivid incidents are those connected with the cruelties of cock fighting, with the blinding of chaffinches to make them sing, with Gomar's brutality to his dogs, and with his mistreatment of his wife.

Those readers who are acquainted with Van der Meersch's "Invasion" know that the author is a master of his art when writing of the more inhumane aspects of life. Although the present work does not reach the heights of the previous novel, it is a forceful love story, remarkable for its penetrating character studies.

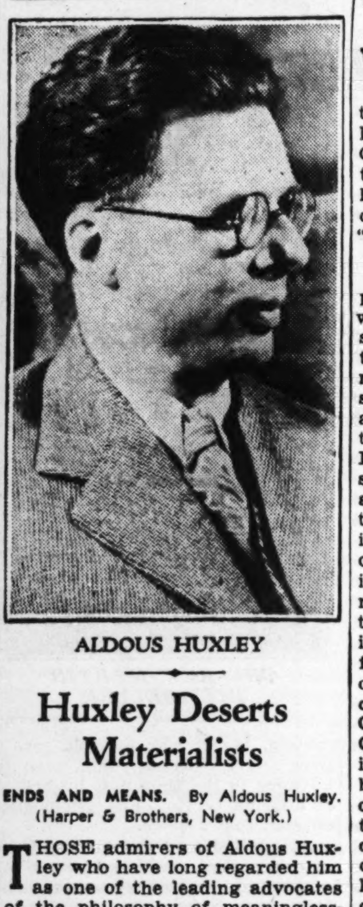
Famous Sophisticate Now Turned Mystic



ALDOUS HUXLEY

Huxley Deserts Materialists

ENDS AND MEANS. By Aldous Huxley. (Harper & Brothers, New York.)

THOSE admirers of Aldous Huxley who have long regarded him as one of the leading advocates of the philosophy of meaninglessness, are likely to receive a shock when they read his latest volume, especially when they come to the chapter entitled "Beliefs" and realize that he has definitely abandoned the materialistic view in favor of the mystic's concept of man and the universe.

Science and intellect are no longer sole criterions for evaluating life. There is a spiritual reality, Huxley asserts, beyond the frontiers of the average sensual man's universe "underlying and uniting all apparently separate existents—a reality with which he can merge himself and from which he can draw moral and even physical powers which, by ordinary standards, can only be described as super-normal." An act of faith, he believes, is intrinsically no more difficult than a scientific inference concerning all phenomena from a few phenomena.

"You shall realize your unity with all being" he gives as the fundamental moral commandment for those who "perceive they are interrelated parts of physical and spiritual wholes incomparably greater than themselves." And meditation is the way to that realization.

Huxley's change of philosophy is not a complete reversal, for there have been traces of mysticism underlying much of his more recent work. But never before has he expounded his new viewpoint so concisely. He himself asserts that a few years ago he would not have postulated the question of the value and meaning of the world, for "I took it for granted there was no meaning." He had, he said, motives for not wanting it to have, and easily "found reasons to justify the assumption" that it hadn't.

"Ends and Means" as a whole is concerned with the aims of mankind, which the author considers by general agreement to be liberty, peace, justice, and brotherly love. He discusses and undertakes to clarify problems of social reform, the modern state, centralization and decentralization in government, war, education, religion, beliefs, ethics. All are reviewed with Huxley's usual clarity.

But while the rest of the book has a greater general importance, the chapter entitled "Beliefs" is the most important so far as his ardent followers are concerned. It will undoubtedly alienate a portion of them. Also it will undoubtedly bring him new followers, those who admired his intellect but not his cold detachment, and who will feel that the new Huxley is a warmer, mellower, more understanding person, one who has himself realized his "unity with all being."

Vividly Told

DEATH SAILS WITH MAGELLAN. By Charles Ford. (Random House, New York.)

THE familiarity of the Bounty story will lessen the interest in Mr. Ford's novel. For the portrait of Magellan, hounding his men to mutiny and death, seems made for Charles Laughton; and the South Sea idyll of Gonzalo and his native wife, Naliyi, covers the well-known ritual of romantic love breaking through native tabu, and simple affection overcoming the craze for gold. Even a well-written episode of a typhoon will come as rather an anti-climax to readers of "Hurricane."

It is a pity, too; for Mr. Ford has spent much time and ingenuity in fitting together the pieces of the puzzle about the young Spanish sailor, Gonzalo of Vigo, whom the Sayavedra expedition found on the island of Guam. He makes vivid the intrigues that emmeshed these expeditions, Portuguese and Spanish alike, and which are forgotten in the glory of discovery. Magellan becomes a person, almost maniacal in his lust for a kingdom in the islands, and heroic only in inflexible tyranny over his men.

Calm, storm, hunger, scurvy, discontent and open rebellion, the accompaniments of early voyages, are touched to actuality by terse words and incidents. The island story has its value as well, for the natives of Guam, Naliyi, Taimanao, and the witch-doctor, Nego, are individually created, and the customs of the natives have the marks of authenticity.

This tale of Magellan's voyage, where the cruelties and hatred of civilization are brought in touch with the simple loyalties, strikes a nostalgic chord in anyone who looks round him on a world gone demoniac.

Sheila Kaye-Smith Studies Herself

THREE WAYS HOME. By Sheila Kaye-Smith. (Harper & Brothers, New York.)

WHEN Sheila Kaye-Smith was a girl of 15 she had three ambitions: to live in the country, to be a celebrated novelist of rural life, and to be extremely High Church. With certain modifications, all three of her ambitions have been realized, and the story of their attainment is told in her "Three Ways Home."

The sub-title of the book, "An Experiment in Autobiography," is wisely chosen; for this work deals scarcely at all with the events of the author's life. It is, instead, a most interesting psychological self-study of her progress as a writer and of her gradual conversion, through Anglo-Catholicism, to the Roman Catholic church, of which she is now a member. Although, according to her own statement, the purpose of the book is primarily to tell the tale of how she became a Catholic, by far the most interesting parts for the ordinary reader are those which deal with the impulses which led to the writing of her various novels and her frank discussions and valuations of her own work. After all, the conversion of one member of the Church of England to the Roman Catholic faith is a subject which is interesting to comparatively few; but everyone who knows the novels of Sheila Kaye-Smith will be eager to know what went into the making of "Rose Deeprose," "Joanna Godden" and "Sussex Gorse," and to learn why the Sussex background of her books is so inextricably a part of her "literary invention."

* * *

The first portion of the book, dealing with her childhood and its prodigious literary output — 40 or 50 full-length novels delivered verbally before she was 15—has much of the charm of "Summer Holiday" and "Selina," her two novels dealing with children. The latter part is in a more serious vein, but the reader has no need to prod his interest, except in the too lengthy epilogue, which is in effect an essay on the advantages of Roman-Catholicism over Anglo-Catholicism.

A Social Worker's Memories

OFF THE STRAIGHT AND NARROW. By Caroline Bayard Colgate. (Lee Furman, Inc., New York.)

CAROLINE BAYARD COLGATE has found life an intensely interesting affair. Though she was a rich woman with a happy domestic life, she was not blind to the realization that a great many things are wrong with the world and should be corrected. Both family and friends ridiculed her interest in social service work and wondered why she liked to associate with criminals and other "queer people." None of this criticism, however, influenced Mrs. Colgate at all. She headed civic betterment committees which really accomplished improvements, helped rehabilitate drunkards, and was instrumental in prison reform. She has been especially active in the problem of delinquent and homeless children, her latest interest being the Boys' Brotherhood Republics of New York and Chicago, organizations designed to help youths who would otherwise be upon the streets. The story of Mrs. Colgate's adventures with Judges, wardens, prisoners, fraudulent officials and competent workers is both absorbing and revealing.

The most interesting thing about this book, however, is the author herself. Without at all intending to do so, she has stamped the discussion with her own strong individuality. The reader finds Mrs. Colgate a most unusual person, lively, humorous, earnest, and a tremendously energetic worker. She is entirely too much of a realist to become either sentimental in her very sincere love of humanity or bitter about her often disillusioning failures. The fact that human nature offers the greatest obstacle to its own betterment has merely roused her fighting spirit and determination.

Mrs. Colgate's method in working with those in trouble has been to give them both sincere friendship and material aid. Then she seeks to show them how to think straight and realize their own responsibilities and capabilities. Indeed, her greatest plea is for society to awake from its laziness and ignorance and learn self-control before it brings about its own destruction.

This record of one woman's struggle against the vast forces of brutality is valuable both for the breadth of its vision and for its practical suggestions in dealing with present day evils.

OUR PROBLEM IN NEW LIGHT

THIS IS OUR WORLD. By Paul B. Sears. (University of Oklahoma Press, Norman.)

IF anyone well acquainted with contemporary literature were asked to choose from the past decade a dozen books distinguished by their power of illumination, "Deserts on the March," published two years ago, would very likely be one of them. Owing to its timeliness, the dust storms of the West serving as a spectacular advertisement, the book won immediate national attention. Vital meaning and beauty of expression did the rest.

Its theme is man's enduring relation to the earth and to the natural processes upon which he must depend for survival. Strictly scientific in approach, the treatment of the theme raised the discussion at times to luminous heights of poetic truth, revealing the scientist as also a seer.

In "This Is Our World" Mr. Sears approaches the same theme from a different angle, and if the second book should seem less compelling than the first, familiarity with the author's view, rather than any essential inferiority, may be regarded as a sufficient reason.

Here Mr. Sears discusses the same vital relationships with especial reference to what he terms the culture pattern of human society—"that complex of natural and social forces which make man what he is." He leads the reader back through both historic and geologic time by way of making clear how maladjustment to environmental realities has resulted in the doom of animal species and nations. And in the light of such vast perspectives he makes clear how any culture pattern which has outgrown the fundamental realities must result in catastrophe. Such a culture pattern he sees in our present society which ignores the "dynamic equilibrium" whereby natural processes achieve self-renewal and survival is made possible.

The ancient legend of the Titan Antaeus, who could not be vanquished so long as he kept one foot on the Earth, his mother, contains potentially the whole meaning of Mr. Sears' discussion. We are denying the very source of our lives, Mr. Sears believes, giving most impressive illustrations of his meaning. "Everywhere today," he says, "is felt increasing, critical pressure of the modern culture pattern against the environmental reserves on the one hand, and against the individual on the other. The difficulties of adjustment are intensified by the very complexity of the pattern, and by the inability of one who is within it to view it in any terms save those which it has afforded him."

Perhaps the chief value of Mr. Sears' two books lies in the fact that they present our social problems in a universal light, undimmed by partisan passions and doctrinaire prejudices. In the long perspective that he gives, it may be seen that we are all in the same boat regardless of class distinctions.

Food and Its Effect on Man's Fate

MAN, BREAD AND DESTINY. By C. C. Furnas and S. M. Furnas. (Reynal & Hitchcock, New York.)

A B C OF AGROBIOLOGY. By O. W. Willcox. (W. W. Norton & Co., Inc., New York.)

WRITING in memory of their respective fathers, who "might still be alive if nutritional knowledge had been complete during their lifetimes," Prof. Furnas of Yale and his wife, lately of the University of Minnesota, have compiled a fascinating history of the diet of mankind and its effect on human destiny. They begin with the healthy savage, eating sprouts and mixing in a little meat now and then, relate some of the more outlandish eating habits down through the ages, and then consider those of the present.

Persons who either "cannot" eat this or that or balk at simple but valuable foods because it suits their fancy are set down rudely. The authors contend, and frequently with much persuasion, that dietary refinement is shaping the future of the race—doing things to bones and teeth, affecting the public health, not to say determining mental efficiency, morals and accomplishment. They are particularly hard on the faddists whom they discuss in a chapter headed "Gullible's Travels."

As for the country cooking whose praises continue to be sung from time to time, Mr. and Mrs. Furnas will take their meals in the city. People in cities on the whole are better fed, they say, than those in the country. Constant hammering has made city dwellers conscious of food values, but farm folk still have little or no use for "rabbit feed"—they want meat, white bread, mashed potatoes and greasy gravy. The household refrigerator and the tin can have produced results generally to the good, the reader is assured.

The second book listed herewith deals with the "quantitative science of plant life and plant nutrition for gardeners, farmers and general readers." Dr. Willcox, who is the author of a notable work entitled "Reshaping Agriculture," shows how plant growth and yield are being influenced by scientists. The gist of it is that agrobiology is opening the way for unparalleled productivity.

The A B C's are too mathematical for the general reader, but those who stay through to the end will be impressed with the probability of impending change in the life of nations through this new science. For the inference is that if Japan knew as much today about the productivity of its soil as it will know a few years hence, it would not be wasting time and money invading China.

The books complement each other nicely. Either is certain to add substantially to almost anyone's store of knowledge.

Better Than Average Murder Yarns

THE CASE OF THE SEVEN OF CALVARY. By Anthony Boucher. (Simon & Schuster, New York.)

DEATH FOR DEAR CLARA. By Q. Patrick. (Simon & Schuster, New York.)

DEATH AT THE INN. By R. Austin Freeman. (Dodd, Mead & Co., New York.)

HOMICIDE. By Leslie T. White. (Harcourt, Brace & Co., New York.)

FATAL FRIDAY. By Francis Gerard. (Henry Holt & Co., New York.)

THE FOUR FALSE WEAPONS. By John Dickson Carr. (Harper & Brothers, New York.)

ALL of the thrillers noted this week deserve the attention of detective fiction addicts. "The Case of the Seven of Calvary," a first attempt, is an excellent example of the detective novel which makes use of timely events. A great pacifist is murdered in a college town. Since faculty members and students are involved, the author has an opportunity for interesting and unusual sidelights on college life. Clever, but just a trifle too self-consciously erudite.

"Death for Dear Clara" has a lot of fun with some literary and cafe folk. Four beautiful young women, each with a pistol in a brief case, converge upon dear Clara, a charming and respectable literary agent. But all is not on the up-and-up behind that charming facade. Swiftness of pace makes up for occasional banalities.

For straightforward detective fiction with no frills or eccentricities read "Death at the Inn." Dr. Thorndyke painstakingly analyzes dust taken from the murder scene and reconstructs a daring and unusual crime. A good job in the old-fashioned manner.

"Homicide" by an ex-policeman, written in a police dossier style, is interesting chiefly because it gives an authentic and detailed account of how a murder case is handled and recorded by a modern metropolitan detective bureau. The author writes in a vigorous and realistic manner.

"The Wedding Night Murder" is one of those family affairs with everybody a little bit cracked. Sonia Varge, green-eyed and slinky, is found stabbed to death on her wedding night and her none too prepossessing husband is heavily drugged. Rather skillfully done with a mere handful of possible suspects.

Francis Gerard in "Fatal Friday" changes from the adventure type to straight detective fiction with happy results. It all starts off with the murder of that beast Sir Gerald Fairfax at a house party given by Lord Colchester. From then on make yourself at home with typical English house-party guests. A fairly tricky plot and not without its humorous moments.

John Dickson Carr, who runs Dorothy Sayers a close second in erudition, turns out in "The Four False Weapons" one of those detective stories that are as full of angles as a British budget speech. Rose is found dead in her villa surrounded by an astonishing array of weapons. There are even more clews, all going in different directions. A truly clever and well-done murder mystery.

Twenty-Five Tales By Andre Maurois

RICOCHETS. By Andre Maurois. Translated by Hamish Miles. (Harper & Brothers, New York.)

THE social disintegration that followed the war has greatly increased the difficulties of writers. New understandings have been developed, new depths of subconscious motivations have been plumbed. Heroes and villains have become indistinguishable. New philosophies have arisen. The language itself has been re-examined and reinterpreted in terms of sound and association.

Halcyon indeed by contrast must have been the comfortable days of the nineteenth century, before all these matters became unsettled, when an author had only to strike the strings of a familiar lyre and embroider his variations, romantic or ironic, on familiar themes. It is not surprising, therefore, to find Andre Maurois turning back to the times he knows so well, the times of Shelley and Byron and Disraeli, when he determines to cast his work in the form of fiction rather than biography.

For these 25 vignettes are in spirit completely of the last century, even though the people in them may chat of Freud and of the Five-Year Plan. The casual amours are those of people to whom casual amours are the only serious business of life.

Country homes, dinner parties, voyages, titles weave a pattern against which Maurois isolates one small facet of character, one curious example of infidelity, one glimpse of the supernatural, one touching recollection. These are the stories. To criticise them as unreal, as having no relation to present-day society, would be not only unfair—it would be stupid.

The style, clipped and impersonal, serves well as a vehicle for the varying moods which animate the sketches, ranging from the compassionate to the sardonic, from the scornful to the awe-stricken. Readers of Maurois need not be reminded of the economy with which he creates situation and describes incident. Well-turned, polished, the pieces may well survive as endexamples of the great French school of short-story writing.

A Christmas Gift For Little Girls

SUSAN, BEWARE! By Mabel Leigh Hunt. (Frederick A. Stokes Co., New York.)

MANY little girls of 11 or 12 will receive this Christmas a novel which they are sure to enjoy and which their parents will do well to borrow for an hour, to savor once more the quickly shifting joys and sorrows of every commonplace, well-regulated childhood. The book is psychologically acute enough to make grown people laugh aloud, and its realism will intrigue youngsters. For what child does not revel in details of building a snow house, of riding on a Pullman, of attending a wedding, of going to the country for Thanksgiving dinner and of shedding long underwear in the spring, quite as much as in fantasies and fairy stories? Such a celebration of childhood is "Susan, Beware!"

It is an unpretentious, sprightly, highly humorous little story. Based on the diary of a descendant of Samuel Merrill of the Bobbs-Merrill Company, it tells the experiences of Susan, aged 11, her two brothers, her sister and all their cousins in Indianapolis during the '70s. They live at "Merryacres," an old family estate inclosed by a high hedge and planted with very climbable trees. Susan, through love of her older brother and her natural impulsiveness, is forever in some sort of difficulty. Although she admires ladies and promises herself that soon she will learn to sew and play "April Showers" on the piano, now it is fun to follow after Nick and the boy cousins when they do such brave things as to write on the green-shuttered door of a saloon, "These men will go to the bad place." At last, however, Susan, by means of a visit to New Orleans, where she meets a lady-like little Creole girl, is made to see the advantage of elegance and decorum, and she almost, but not quite, consents to grow up.

* * *

Miss Hunt talks neither down nor up to her readers. She regards them with an appreciative adult eye which they are sure to find more acceptable than a specious descent to their own level. She does not hesitate to use words which will send them to the dictionary or to make fun of childish priggishness and indiscretion. Naturally some of her dry humor will be lost on the young readers.

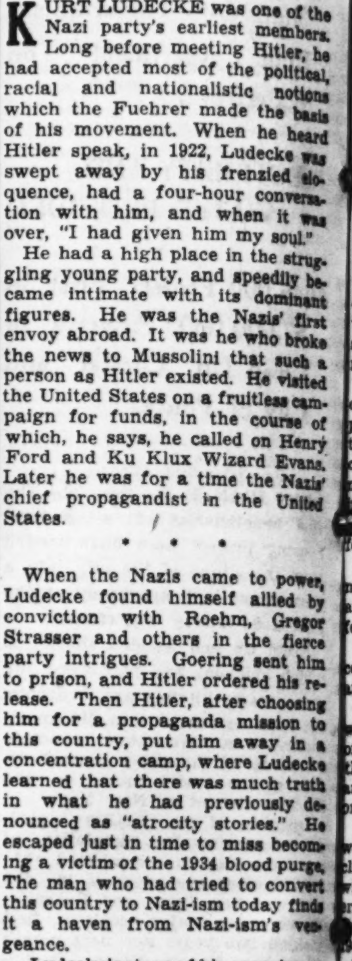
HISTORICAL CHART OF MANKIND. (The United Educators, Inc., Chicago.)

This chart, said to be more comprehensive than any of its kind previously published, is cleverly designed to show the history of all peoples from 4000 B. C. to the present day. Various colors are used to indicate political developments, literary events, inventions, etc. Each nation's history can be scanned separately on ascending parallel lines, and by reading across, the student may see at a glance what was occurring around the world at a given time. The chart measures 63 by 16 inches.

Draws True Picture Of Jeff Davis



DR. ROBERT McELROY

Confederate Chief Fairly Defended

JEFFERSON DAVIS, THE UNREAL AND THE REAL. By Robert McElroy. (Harper & Brothers, New York.)

NO one can be more wrong than the man who is right when the majority says no. Intellect is a doubtful asset in a society more often emotional than reasoning, consistency a qualified virtue, honesty a fault, and to do a bad job well may be judged a crime. These are conclusions that suggest themselves from a study of the dominant feeling toward Jefferson Davis and the plain facts of his case; for although the late President of the Confederate States was consistent and courageous of conviction, honest and able, he is usually bracketed with Benedict Arnold and such of coarser grain and motive because, for the most part, his enemies and others who stood to gain by detraction wrote his history and were believed.

Robert McElroy, who is Harold Vyvyan Harmsworth Professor of American History at Oxford, sometime of Princeton, has undertaken to collate the contrasting concepts of the Civil War period, and before and after, in a two-volume treatise. Ostensibly a biography, the story is political rather than personal, giving more of Jefferson Davis the public figure than the man. As the sub-title indicates, it goes primarily to the business of refuting long-established lies and slanders. While Dr. McElroy leaves something to be desired in the way of accuracy on minor points, and although his British overtones approach the annoying, he has, on the whole, turned out a fair and judicious account containing much that will be news even to the ordinarily well informed.

Traditionally the Federal Union was more Federal than Union despite those who asserted the contrary. Jefferson Davis always insisted he was not a revolutionist; he was for the Constitution as it was and had been. It took Lincoln and the war to establish what it was to be and has become. The Secessionists put their theory to the test and lost—they failed in "an inexpedient assertion of an undeniable right," as Mrs. Davis phrased it, and reassertion of the right became no longer "practicable," as Jefferson Davis concluded.

Davis apparently never realized that he was a victim of his own theory. When he tried to maintain a national government of non-coercible sovereign states he demonstrated, if he did not learn, the fallacy of the Lost Cause. He accepted the fact of failure, but, conscious of no crime, he never asked for pardon. Shortly before his death at 81, he was still writing in defense of the exact rightness of his course, long after the war and long after the benefits of his defeat had become widely apparent.

Thus Dr. McElroy, neither in the ecstatic enthusiasm of Dixie nor in the just as unreliable manner of the special pleaders on the other side.

—Harold Tecumseh Meek.

Unimpressive

DEATH IS INCIDENTAL. By Heath Bowman and Stirling Dickinson. (Willett, Clark & Co., Chicago.)

HERE is proof of the fact that an author can equip himself with a perfectly good plot on a perfectly good theme, and still produce an unimpressive work. "From the beginning of time man has laid down his life for ideals. In every case it is the same: death is incidental to the goal." That is the theme. The tragic fates, in the Mexican revolution, of the landowner Don Fernando, the priest Padre Dominguez, the servant Jesus, and the peon Juan form the story.

Bowman is the writer and Dickinson the illustrator in this collaboration. The latter's block prints lend interest and quality to the physical makeup of the book, which is its best recommendation. One feels that Bowman, departing from the genial, informal style he used in the travel books "Westward From Rio" and "Mexican Odyssey," has made a deliberate attempt to write artistically, sometimes with a flourish, and then again with stark simplicity. The result unfortunately is stilted and quite without emotional power.

Former Hitlerite Denounces Hitler

I KNEW HITLER. By Kurt G. W. Ludecke. (Charles Scribners' Sons, New York.)

KURT LUDECKE was one of the Nazi party's earliest members. Long before meeting Hitler, he had accepted most of the political, racial and nationalistic notions which the Fuehrer made the basis of his movement. When he heard Hitler speak, in 1922, Ludecke was swept away by his frenzied eloquence, had a four-hour conversation with him, and when it was over, "I had given him my soul."

He had a high place in the struggling young party, and speedily became intimate with its dominant figures. He was the Nazis' first envoy abroad. It was he who broke the news to Mussolini that such a person as Hitler existed. He visited the United States on a fruitless campaign for funds, in the course of which, he says, he called on Henry Ford and Ku Klux Wizard Evans. Later he was for a time the Nazis' chief propagandist in the United States.

When the Nazis came to power, Ludecke found himself allied by conviction with Roehm, Gregor Strasser and others in the fierce party intrigues. Goering sent him to prison, and Hitler ordered his release. Then Hitler, after choosing him for a propaganda mission to this country, put him away in a concentration camp, where Ludecke learned that there was much truth in what he had previously denounced as "atrocity stories." He escaped just in time to miss becoming a victim of the 1934 blood purge. The man who had tried to convert this country to Nazi-ism today finds it a haven from Nazi-ism's vengeance.

Ludecke's story of his experiences is exciting, verbose and bitter. Obviously, he is not an unbiased witness, but his is a historically valuable account of the Third Reich's inner circle. It is, in fact, unique, for no other disgruntled member of his group lived to write memoirs. Even after proper discount is made for prejudice and sour grapes, the disclosures are penetrating. And though one doubts that he could remember verbatim the long quoted conversations with Hitler and others, the significance of their general import remains.

Ludecke's denunciations of Hitlerism are the more significant when the reader considers that their author remains essentially a Nazi. He may have redeemed his soul from Hitler, but he has never wavered in his devotion to the cause. In his view, the revolution has been betrayed. "The real Nazi revolutionaries," he concludes, "never intended that Germans should be degraded as serfs of an arbitrary party dictatorship, surrendering body and soul to an egomaniac leader."

—Ferd Gottlieb.

Society Would Not Forgive Him

MORE JOY IN HEAVEN. By Morley Callaghan. (Random House, New York.)

KIP CALEY emerges from 10 years of prison life with a mortal fear of facing the public and a firm resolution to settle down to a life of peace and anonymity. But the reformed bank robber is a born headliner and circumstance forces him to accept a limelight position in a hotel restaurant. Kip has a talent for creating joy among people, and the public falls for the publicity stunt featuring him, thereby restoring his shattered faith in himself and in them. But the gag grows old and the manager, realizing that his hotel has been transformed into a court for delinquents with Kip as judge and counselor, decides on a new and underhand scheme for making money, using Kip as a "phony" champion wrestler. As a result, Kip walks out on his benefactor.

A dejected victim of circumstance, but still proud of the idealistic stand he has taken, Kip is now in a quandary. The position of accomplice in a bank robbery is open to him, but polite society has nothing to offer an ex-convict. And when at length he finds that even his mistress and the priest, in whose custody he has been placed, have begun to lose faith in him, his inherently aggressive nature overcomes him. He rushes off to the scene of the robbery, and, unmindful of consequences, shoots a policeman. Both Kip and his mistress Julie are fatally wounded, and although the doctors try to revive Kip for a public execution, he "cheats the hangman" by dying.

"More Joy in Heaven" is not only a swift-moving, highly dramatic story, but also an important psychological study of the ex-convict who must fight against almost insurmountable obstacles in an unforgiving society. With a plea for preventive or corrective rather than punitive treatment of the individual, the underlying principle is that of trust and encouragement as opposed to mistrust and degradation—a psychology applicable not only to the misfits in society but to all human beings.

BONDS MAINTAIN FAIRLY FIRM FRONT

Federals on Up-Trail Most of Week, With Tendency to Sag at Close.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Lower-priced corporate obligations drooped in a listless bond market most of this week, while better-rated liens maintained a fairly firm front. Today's late market rally reduced the day's early losses and in some cases pushed liens into the plus column.

U. S. Government loans were on the upgrade in quiet dealings until today, when they tended to sag, with declines ranging up to 8-32 of a point.

Secondary carrier issues were the week's weak spot of the domestic corporate group. Industrial and utility obligations drifted idly in sympathy with a restricted stock market for the most part.

Despite the apparent lethargy, observers noted a definitely improved sentiment in financial quarters. There were indications of a coming revival in the long dormant new capital market, and an increasing flow of year-end dividends promoted a somewhat better feeling.

The foreign dollar group was marked by an upswing in Brazilian and other South American loans following last week's sinking spell.

Turnover was restricted, not exceeding $11,000,000 face amount for any one day.

The bond market's downswing was interrupted in the final hour of trading today by a brisk rally that erased many earlier losses and pushed some issues up a point or so.

United States Government loans were generally lower, with declines ranging up to 8-32 of a point, with principal activity in the longer term treasury issues. Heaviest dealings were in treasury 2¾s of 1954, which lost 5-32 of a point.

The foreign list was marked up by a sinking spell in South American loans.

Turnover for all bonds totaled $5,285,000, face amount, compared with $4,014,375 last Saturday.

LIVESTOCK PRICES DECLINE AT NATIONAL STOCKYARDS

The drop in hog prices this week brought the top down to $8.25, the lowest figure since Feb. 12, 1935. This peak was within 40 cents of the lowest price for the year 1935. Increased supplies and the downward movement of dressed pork were depressing factors.

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill., Nov. 20.—(U. S. Dept. of Agriculture) — Hogs—Receipts, 2500, including 1500 direct; 170 lbs up steady; lighter weights 15@25c lower; bulk 180-250 lbs, $8@10; good sows, $7.50@7.75; compared with week ago, 170 lbs up 75c lower; 160 lbs down, 75@85c lower; sows 50c off.

Cattle—Receipts, 400; calves, 300; including 500 through, compared with close of last week, steers, heifers and beef cows 25@50c lower; cutter-grade cows, 15@25c lower; bulls steady; vealers 25c higher; stock cattle 25c lower; tops for the week, 1368-lb and 1252-lb steers, $11.25; 1071-lb steers, $10.75; 650 heifers, $9; beef cows, $8; sausage bulls, $6.50; vealers, $11.25; stock steers, $7.50; bulks for the week, steers, $7.50@9.75; heifers and mixed yearlings, $6@7.75; beef cows, $4.75@5.75; cutters and low cutters, $3.50@4.50; stock steers, $6@7.40.

Sheep—Receipts, 300; compared with week ago, lambs mostly $1 lower, yearlings 25@50c lower; sheep steady; top lambs $10; late top $9; bulks for the week, $8.75@10; closing bulk, $8.50@8.75; wooled yearlings, $8@8.75; clipped yearlings, $7.75, with none offered on late session; slaughter ewes, $3.50@4.

Horses and Mules.

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, Ill., Nov. 20.—The better feeling in the horse and mule market the past week was influenced largely by light receipts. A fair number of buyers responded to the sale, representing sections of the East, Southeast and South. There was an early clearance and prices in many instances ruled strong.

A satisfactory demand was noted for decent chunks and broke work horses and mares and outlet continued for nice fillies and good Carolina mares. A poor market was experienced for wild horses and anything green or bad haired had to sell at a sacrifice.

Virtually all kinds of mules were on a better footing with the exception of yearlings and two's and cheap rough plug offerings.

*NATIVE HORSE QUOTATIONS.

Good to choice draft, $125@150; medium to good draft, $100@125; good to choice chunks, $90@110, smooth-mouthed chunks, $65@90; large farm mares, $125@150; medium farm mares, $90@110; fillies, yearlings and twos; small, common, $30@50; good size, $60@85; extra size and quality, $120@150 (horse colts sell $15@25 per head less than fillies); good Southern mares, $75@100; small Southern mares, $40@60; small cheap horses, $30@50.

*MULE QUOTATIONS.

Farm mules, 15.2 to 16 hands, $110@140; colt mules, small, $60@85; draft mules, $150@200; mine mules, 14.1 to 15.2 hands, $120@160; choice cotton mules, 14.3 to 15.2 hands, $160@200; small green mules over 3 years old, $50@

*Quotations are for average animals and do not cover those of outstanding quality or the very cheapest grade.

MISSISSIPPI VALLEY STOCKYARDS.

Mississippi Valley Stockyards at St. Louis officially reports the market as follows:

CATTLE—The cattle market for the Friday-to-Friday period was generally 25@50c lower on the better grades. The commoner kinds held about steady. Demand has been for the type of steers, mixed yearlings to sell from $7 down; for cows bringing from $4@5; steers sold mostly $6@8.50, few up to $10; mixed yearlings and heifers, $5.50@7.50, with some to $8 and above; veal calves closed 25c higher than last week's close; top vealers, $11.25 bulk Friday; canners and cutters, $3.25@4.50; sausage bulls steady, top $6.50.

HOGS—Friday choice weights sold at fully $1 under last week's close; lowest prices since the first part of 1935; butcher weights suffered losses of about 75c; most of the light lights and pigs ranging in weight from 100 to 160 lbs brought from $8.25@8.75; bulk of the 170s brought $8@8.50; sows, $7.50@8.

SHEEP—Compared with last Friday, fat lambs $1@1.25 lower; yearlings suffered mostly 50c with choice light weights on the early market up to $8.75 and on the close around $8; throwouts finished at $5@6.50 after selling $6@7.50 on the early rounds. Sheep continued unchanged; slaughter ewes, $4 down.

COTTON RALLY WINDS UP WEEK OF LOSSES

Final Prices 5 to 10 Points Net Higher for Day, With March Closing at $7.86.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Cotton prices lost part of the gains of the preceding period this week. Extremely small demand for goods and generally easier tone of the stock market were believed respsonsible for some of the selling.

March contract, which had sold up from a Nov. 8 low of 7.61 to 8.09 Friday of last wek, closed today at 7.86, with the list showing 5 to 10 points net higher for the day.

Cotton rallied today on further covering in December and, owing to a recovery in the stock market, March sold up from 7.74 to 7.87, and closed at 7.86, with final prices 5 to 10 points net higher.

The Commodity Credit Corporation reported loans had been made on 2,270,217 bales of cotton through Nov. 18 at an average price of 8.43 cents a pound. The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the close of the week was estimated at 176,000 bales, against 176,000 last year and 245,000 two years ago.

Another Bad Week in Shares Is Featured by a Hard Fall And Slight Rebound in Prices

Traders Influenced by Industrial Front Statistics and State of Trade; Also Waiting on Washington.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—The stock market slipped slowly down hill this week until yesterday, when it fell so hard there was a slight rebound today.

Many active issues touched new low ground for more than two years at the opening of trade today but bids began to come in at better levels and the list then climbed higher generally, with leaders picking up one to more than three points of their previous day's sharp drop.

At the close of today's trading, the Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up 1.1 points at 44.3, following yesterday's set-back of 2.7. For the week the average was down 4.3 points at 44.3 from last Saturday's 48.6. Friday's 43.2 was a new low for 1937.

Brokers said wilting confidence in the nearby future of business knocked shares down this week, and that today's recovery was prompted mainly by short covering.

On the Industrial Front.

For some time Wall Street men have said trade and industry were undergoing a downward correction following near-booming conditions in many sectors, and nothing appeared on the horizon during the week to indicate the downswing has been checked. This, together with the impression Government attempts to bring improvement will take some time, drained the market of energy.

On the statistical side of the ledger entries were mostly gloomy, with steel operations still sagging and reports from the industry giving little promise of a reversal soon.

Electricity production once more has felt the blight of slower industrial operations. Freight car loadings continued downgrade, sliding more than seasonally to a level under the like week of 1936. And, although motor output picked up a little, cheer arising from this factor was dampened by sit-down strikes at General Motors plants.

Attempts of union officials to break the unauthorized sit-down at General Motors was a heartening factor today. Goodyear's sit-downers evacuated Akron plants and the company announced it would resume work Monday "for those who want to work." Both motor and rubber shares leaned forward today.

Congress and Dividends.

Early in the week much attention was focused on President Roosevelt's message to Congress, financial men saying it indicated a desire to lend a helping hand to business. On the other hand, they insisted it contained nothing which implied any immediate improvement in the profits outlook. Some observers said the outlook seemed bright for favorable revision of tax laws, but on this score, too, they said they would prefer to await actual results before making commitments.

Although declines in the stock market were general, some analysts professed to see special influences at work. Coppers were said to have felt the effects of shrinking consumption. Aircraft had the aid of improved earnings for manufacturers.

Special and year-end dividends produced some optimism, but this was dampened somewhat by the fact some declarations were made to avoid the undistributed earnings tax.

Commodities Follow Stocks.

Bonds met difficulties but major commodities followed stocks today. Wheat at Chicago was up 2⅛ to 2⅞ cents a bushel and corn gained 1¼ to 1¾. Cotton was 25 to 50 cents a bale higher.

Conspicuous on the forward tilt today were shares of United States Steel at 53¼, Bethlehem, 47¾; Chrysler, 58⅝; General Motors, 34¾; Westinghouse, 95; Allied Chemical, 157; General Electric, 39⅝; Santa Fe, 37¾; New York Central, 17⅞; Eastman Kodak, 155¼; United States Rubber, 26; Goodyear, 20⅛; American Telephone, 148; North American, 21⅝, and Anaconda, 27⅜.

Hudson Motors voted a dividend of 25 cents a share, the first since 1932, and the stock was up ½ at 7¼.

Total stock sales during the week amounted to 7,499,970 shares, compared with 6,741,106 a week ago and 13,62 ,842 corresponding week a year ago. Total sales from Jan. 1 to date were 372,263,390 shares compared with 435,552,005 a year ago and 326,358,387 two years ago.

Odd Lot Transactions Friday.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—The Securities Commission reported today these transactions by customers with odd lot dealers or specialists on the New York Stock Exchange for Nov. 19: 16,004 purchases involving 394,694 shares; 8760 sales involving 248,769 shares.

FOREIGN MARKETS AT A GLANCE

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 20.—Wheat futures declined in quiet trading today, due to absence of milling demand for actual grain and in sympathy with North American markets yesterday. Final prices were ⅞ to 1¼ pence a bushel lower. Cotton closed quiet and unchanged. Outside interest was lacking. Trade calling and short covering were supplied by liquidation and hedging.

London and Paris—Closed.

Eastern Air Lines Gains.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Eastern Air Lines carried 11,700 passengers in October, an increase of 11 per cent over October, last year, and the largest number for the month in the company's history, E. V. Rickenbacker, general manager, reported today. Airplane revenue miles flown totaled 636,000, an increase of 12 per cent over last year, while revenue passenger miles amounted to 5,054,000, a gain of 24 per cent.

10 CONSECUTIVE WEEKLY SLIPS IN INDUSTRIAL RATE

At Lowest Notch Since April, 1936; New Lows for Year by 4 of 6 Major Classifications.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Industrial activity slipped this week for the tenth consecutive period, dropping to the lowest level since April, 1936. The Associated Press seasonally adjusted index pointed to 83.9 per cent of the 1929-30 average from 87.7 a week ago and compared with 98 last year. The latest figure was 23 per cent under the year's peak.

Four of the six major classifications chalked up new lows for the year or longer—steel mill activity, cotton manufacturing, electric power output and railroad freight car loadings.

A dearth of new orders continued to force a throttling of steel ingot flow. Railroads and automobiles, two of the industry's biggest customers, stood on the sidelines awaiting clarification of the business picture. Steel operations were about half last year's rate.

Although the movement of farm products held well above the 1936 level as a result of bumper crops, shipments of industrial freight were almost 100,000 cars behind last year.

The flow of electric power reflected slower turnover of industrial machinery in the nation's factories.

Automobile assemblies were up less than seasonally expected. Motor men generally hold the future sufficiently uncertain to warrant caution.

The index, with its seasonally adjusted components based on 1929-30 as 100, compared as follows:

	Latest Week.	Prev. Week.	Year Ago.
Composite index— — —	*83.9	x87.7	98.0

MAJORITY OF CURB STOCKS CLOSE STEADY TO HIGHER

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—A last minute wave of buying came to the support of a slumping Curb market today and the majority of stocks closed steady to a little higher.

Earlier losses were cancelled and in some cases gains of a point or so were recorded. Creole Petroleum faced about and climbed 1½ to 22½. Newmont Mining gained a point to 56. United Light & Power preferred advanced 1⅜ to 27.

Fractional gainers included Aluminum Co. at 76½, American Superpower 1¼, Arkansas Natural Gas "A" 3⅞, Cord Corp. 2⅛, Electric Bond & Share to 10⅝, Gulf Oil 37, St. Regis Paper, 3⅞ and United Gas at 5⅛.

Transactions totaled 206,000 shares, heaviest since October 23, compared with 107,000 shares last Saturday.

HUDSON MOTOR CAR CO. RESUMES DIVIDEND PAYMENT

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Directors of Hudson Motor Car Co., Detroit, today resumed payments of dividends on the capital stock with a declaration of 25 cents a share, payable Dec. 16 to holders of record Dec. 1. Previous disbursement was 25 cents in January, 1932.

Directors of Crane Co. today declared a dividend of $1 on common stock, first since December, 1931, payable Dec. 15 to stock of record Dec. 1. Company manufactures valves and plumbing supplies.

WASHINGTON BUSINESS NOTES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Shipments and consumption of white-base anti-friction bearing metals by railroads and other heavy industries totaled 23,393,120 pounds in the first 10 months of the year, compared with 23,867,921 in the same period last year, the Census Bureau reports.

Business advices to the Commerce Department from representatives abroad include: Germany—Shortage of scrap iron and steel keenly felt. Scrap collecting organization formed for Western Germany. Norway—Stocks of medicinal cod-liver oil lowest in 20 years.

PRESSURE ON DOLLAR, POUND AT $5 AGAIN

U. S. Unit Shows Resistance, However — Guilder Week's Feature Gainer.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20. — The United States dollar was under pressure early in the week, later improved, but weakened slightly today. On Monday and Tuesday foreign exchange circles reported an outflow of foreign balances from this country, attributed to uneasiness regarding the American business outlook.

The Holland guilder gained rapidly against the dollar, while the French franc, the British pound and belga also advanced. It was said Amsterdam was withdrawing funds.

Later there was a reversal of sentiment and the dollar improved. Traders stated renewed confidence in the dollar arose partly from efforts of the special session of Congress to aid business and partly as the result of a neutral rebound from weakness. Sterling was at an abnormally high rate in relation to the dollar, dealers said.

Although the price of gold in London continued at a premium, it was reported there was less evidence of hoarding. Foreign exchange circles, as the week drew to a close, pointed out there had been a definite slowing up in the withdrawal of funds.

There were no gold engagements during the week.

European currency units moved higher aagainst the dollar in quiet foreign exchange dealings today.

Sterling gained ⅛ of a cent while the French franc was up .00⅜ of a cent, Swiss francs advanced .01 of a cent and the Netherlands guilder was .03 of a cent higher. The Canadian dollar gained 1-64 of a cent.

In London the dollar lost 5-16 of a cent, closing at 5.00¾ to the pound. Paris markets were closed.

Closing rates follow: Great Britain in dollars, others in cents. Great Britain demand, 5.00⅝; cables, 5.00⅝; 60-day bills, 5.00; France demand, 3.40¼; cables, 3.40¼; Italy demand, 5.26½; cables, 5.26½.

Commodities Continue to Slip; Lowest Level Since June, 1936

Widest Break of Week in Livestock, Other Farm Products Under Pressure — Textiles at 3-Year Bottom.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Commodity prices continued to slide this week, going to the lowest level since June, 1936. The Associated Press weighted index of 35 important staple quotations dropped to 76.78 per cent of the 1926 average from 78.84 a week ago and compared with 84.53 last year.

From the high point on April 5—when the index almost equaled the 1926 average—the measure has dropped 22 per cent. The current slump has been, percentage-wise, one of the widest chalked up since the 1919-20 inventory rise collapsed.

The widest break occurred in livestock, hogs, cattle and lambs all falling heavily. Hog prices were slashed about $1 per hundredweight to $8.20. The Department of Agriculture stated recently that, as a result of favorable breeding conditions in the past several months, large shipments from farms to markets were to be expected.

Other farm products also were under pressure, corn, wheat, oats, rye and cotton all dipping on steadily mounting estimates of final harvests this season.

Industrial staples were almost unanimously lower. Textiles touched the lowest in more than three years as cotton cloth, silk and wool eased. Substantial inventories and lower raw material prices were cited as reasons for weakness.

Faltering industrial activity found the metals giving ground—steel scrap, tin, lead and antimony—along with rubber, bituminous coal and burlap. Turpentine alone managed to withstand the downward pressure.

Although a majority of items entering the market basket advanced against the trend, a sharp break in heavily weighted lard left the index unchanged on the week. Cocoa also slipped fractionally, while eggs, sugar, flour and butter picked up.

The index with its components based on 1926 as 100, compared as follows:

NON-FERROUS METALS STILL UNDER PRESSURE

Tin Suffers Decline; Copper Unchanged; Lead, Zinc, Antimony.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Non-ferrous metals continued under pressure in the domestic market during the week. Tin suffered one of the most serious declines in the current reaction as it sold off to 41⅞ cents, or almost 4 cents off from the beginning of the period.

Copper continued unchanged in the United States at 11 cents, delivered valley, with intercompany sales the only important feature. The red metal in foreign markets sold off about ¾ cent to $9.80.

Lead prices held at 5 cents New York. Release of October figures showed a gain of 9900 tons in American refined stocks, first increase in 15 months. Consumption was not considered to be falling off quite so much as immediate demand.

Zinc continued at 5.75 cents East St. Louis. Trade observers asserted inquiry had dropped below the low point of a week before, when sales totaled 400 tons.

Antimony was easier, selling off ¾ cent to 15¾ for Chinese grade.

LOCAL STOCKS JOIN NEW YORK IN DIP

Downward Movement Comes After Period of Quiet and Narrow Price Ranges.

Securities listed on the St. Louis Stock Exchange joined the downward movement of prices on the New York Stock Exchange as the week neared close after a period of quietness and narrow price ranges.

The week's aggregate volume of business, however, did not come up to that of the preceding week, one day short owing to holiday.

Wagner Electric had setback of nearly 4 points before some recovery, Knapp-Monarch lost over 3, Scullin Steel preference over 2, Huttig 2 and Laclede Steel 1 point.

Several issues held earlier week gains. Among these were Dr. Pepper.

Griesedieck-Western moved higher even as others were going down.

WHEAT RALLIES AND WIPES OUT WEEK'S LOSSES

Action at Chicago Based on Report of Frost Damage in Argentine Producing Area.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—The wheat market wiped out its week's losses today with a sharp 3-cents a bushel advance in the final hour based on a report that frost in an important Argentina wheat producing area had caused more damage than expected. Most of the gain was held.

Prices tilted upward from the start, rising about a cent in early trading as a result largely of rallies in stocks and more active business in North American wheat for export overnight. Later a report from R. O. Cromwell, a Chicago expert now in Argentina, said his survey of Southern Buenos Aires Province disclosed heavy frost loss. He estimated the Argentine crop at 185 to 195 million bushels. Earlier this week private estimates ranged up to 225 million bushels compared with a crop of 247 million last season.

Wheat closed 2⅛@2⅞ cents higher than yesterday's finish, December 92¾@⅞, May 92⅝@¾, July 86⅜@½; corn 1¼@1¾ up, December 54¾@⅞, May 57⅝, July 58½; oats ⅛@¼ up, December 30½@⅝; rye 1¼@1½ higher, December 71; lard 20 cents lower to 17 cents higher.

Much of wheat's early strength resulted from what traders called an oversold pit condition together with quiet commission house buying that developed short covering on the upturn. Liverpool closed 1 to 1½ lower, smaller decline than expected.

Some observers said prospects for export of increased quantities of American wheat continued to brighten, with crop estimates in most European countries and ocean freight rates declining. There was talk that trade negotiations between the United States and Great Britain might lead to removal of the six cents duty on domestic wheat. Argentina was reported not offering new wheat as freely as usual.

Corn's advance was stimulated by wheat action and by decreasing country offerings together with reports of further export business out of the Gulf said to be in excess of 750,000 bushels. Oats and rye rose with other grains. Lard rallied from new lows for the season in sympathy with grains.

Wheat futures purchases yesterday totaled 25,984,000 bushels, corn 4,158,000. Open interest in wheat was 104,310,000 bushels, and in corn 47,135,000.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Nov. 20.—Wheat futures closed 2⅝@2¾c higher after having sold 3@3½c up. December finished at 92¾c and May at 93¼c, both options ¼c higher. Later in the morning prices were 1⅜@1½c up.

Winnipeg opened unchanged to ⅜c lower and early was ¼@⅜c off. The close was 2¼@2⅝c higher.

Liverpool started ⅞@1⅛d lower and closed ⅞@1¼d off.

Argentine wheat was ¾@1c lower at start and closed ⅛c lower to ⅛c higher. Corn opened ⅞@1c higher and closed ⅝@¾c up.

Local wheat receipts which were 64,500 bu., compared with 73,500 a week ago and 60,000 a year ago included 9 cars local and 34 through. Corn receipts, which were 130,500 bu., compared with 124,500 a week ago and 103,500 a year ago, included 74 cars local and 13 through. Oats receipts, which were 32,000 bu., compared with 4000 a week ago and 14,000 a year ago. Hay receipts were 1 car through.

St. Louis Cash Grain.

In the cash grain market Saturday, soft wheat was steady on the sale made. The nominal close, however, was 2½c higher. There was little on sale and the car that changed hands went before the future market turned upward. Corn was ½@1½c higher. Supply was somewhat smaller. Demand was good and a clearance was effected. Mills, elevators and glucose makers were the purchasers. Premiums were unchanged to 1c over Friday's figures. Oats were unchanged. Demand was good and the supply was quickly cleared. Order buyers furnished the outlet.

LOCAL STOCKS JOIN NEW YORK IN DIP

Downward Movement Comes After Period of Quiet and Narrow Price Ranges.

Securities listed on the St. Louis Stock Exchange joined the downward movement of prices on the New York Stock Exchange as the week neared close after a period of quietness and narrow price ranges.

The week's aggregate volume of business, however, did not come up to that of the preceding week, one day short owing to holiday.

Wagner Electric had setback of nearly 4 points before some recovery, Knapp-Monarch lost over 3, Scullin Steel preference over 2, Huttig 2 and Laclede Steel 1 point.

Several issues held earlier week gains. Among these were Dr. Pepper.

Griesedieck-Western moved higher even as others were going down.

New York Sugar.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Raw sugar was firm today. Sales were confirmed late yesterday of 14,000 bags of Puerto Ricos from store at 3.45, an advance of 5 points, and 25,000 bags of Cubas for January shipments at 3.30.

Refined sugar was unchanged at 4.75@4.85 for fine granulated with moderate withdrawals reported.

SAYS LABOR TACTICS DRIVE PLANTS AWAY

A. J. Davis Asserts Certain Unions Cause Shift From City to Small Towns.

The tactics of certain unions have been responsible for the trend of industry to move manufacturing plants from St. Louis to small towns, A. J. Davis, president of the Industrial Association of St. Louis, declared in a statement yesterday.

He said he spoke in reply to Max Michelson, local representative of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, a CIO affiliate, who declared in a speech before the recent convention of the shoe workers' union that most firms move to outlying communities to find a source of cheap labor.

The Industrial Association joins Michelson and other labor leaders in deploring the tendency to move to smaller centers, Davis said, but is convinced that "lack of responsibility, violence and insincere tactics of certain unions in their control of strikes" have produced the situation.

"Industry recognizes its obligations to its own employes, but it will never condone the practices which have been fostered by some professional labor leaders recently," Davis said. "Industry believes that such agitators are using a two-pronged fork, which injures both management and employes.

"Out of the experience of the depression grew a naturally close understanding between employers and employes, but the spectacle of imported agitators summarily calling strikes, and particularly sitdowns which were downright confiscatory, has given every earnest employer cause for concern. Outsiders stand between employers, their own employes and any permanent accord. There will be no accord whatsoever with the radicals in the unions."

It is natural, he said, that "employers would seek locations where the orderly processes of manufacture can be carried on without constant danger of shutdowns forced by factional disputes or a general order from union headquarters a thousand miles away. Such conditions are un-American and tragically inimical to the interests of urban labor."

SCOUT MERIT BADGE SHOW TO OPEN DEC. 2

More Than 5000 to Take Part —Advertising Tour Saturday.

A special corps of 215 St. Louis Eagle Scouts, chosen because of their proficiency in scout activities, will serve as guides at the Boy Scout Merit Badge Show which will be held at the Arena Dec. 2, 3 and 4, Willard R. Cox, general chairman, announces.

More than 5000 Boy Scouts will participate in the show, demonstrating 138 phases of their activity, including 101 merit badge competitions. Special features will include six competitive events for troops and individual scouts, and the presentation of four new merit badges for proficiency in coin collecting, finger-printing, care of dogs and skiing.

The scouts will send out 585 members of 85 local troops on busses and street cars to ride throughout the city Saturday morning in order to acquaint the public with the show.

Stanley A. Harris, inter-racial director of the National Council, Boy Scouts of America, will attend a rally of 14 St. Louis Negro troops this afternoon at Lion's Den, near Seckman, Mo. A dinner meeting in his honor will be held tomorrow night at the Pine Street Y. M. C. A. Plans for next year's Negro scouting program will be discussed.

St. Louis Sea Scouts will hold their third annual ball and bridge of honor Dec. 11 in the Crystal Room of Hotel Jefferson. At the bridge of honor the Sea Lions of Webster Groves will be awarded the championship pennant in token of its victory in this year's point races, while the Polaris, winner of the annual fall regatta, will again receive custody of the council trophy.

Scouts of the Northwest District will hold their annual meeting Tuesday evening, Nov. 30, at Washington School, Normandy. The meeting will mark the conclusion of Northwest's first year as an independent district in the St. Louis Council.

Oliver Blackinton, St. Louis attorney, last week received a merit certificate award from the National Boy Scout Council in recognition of his 20 years of service. He is committeeman of Troop 307, Webster Groves, in which his son, Oliver Jr., is an Eagle Scout.

A court of honor last night followed an overnight hike by Troop 71, Maple Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, to Lion's Den, near Seckman, Mo. Troops 13, 57, 67, 163, 238 and 306, all of St. Louis and vicinity, also made a week-end visit to the scout reservation.

Ellard Entzenroth, former committeeman of Pack 43, is now serving as outdoor committeeman of Troop 305, which is sponsored by the Webster Groves DeMolay organization. The troop plans to erect a bridge next month across a creek at Lion's Den.

Girl Scouts.

Miss Dorothea Sullivan, a member of the personnel division of the National Girl Scout Council, will visit St. Louis Tuesday to confer with local Girl Scout and Brownie trainers. Miss Sullivan will discuss new trends in training methods at a dinner meeting Tuesday evening at the Winston Churchill Tea Room, Cabanne and Belt avenues.

The St. Louis Girl Scout Council yesterday announced the registration of Troop 1, Maplewood, a new unit having 11 members. The troop is under the direction of Miss Lucille Kincheloe, who will be assisted by Miss Isabelle Gerst.

Another new unit which registered last week is Pack 11, meeting at Kingdom House, 1102 Morrison avenue. It is composed of 17 Brownies, girls from 7 to 10 years old, who will meet under the leadership of Miss Eleanor Grissom.

Natural History Survey on Radio.

By the Associated Press.

URBANA, Ill., Nov. 20. — The Illinois natural history survey, created by the Legislature in 1867 to promote conservation of the State's natural resources, will begin Monday a series of radio broadcasts to explain its modern functions. Dr. T. H. Frison, chief of the survey, will speak at 2 p. m. Monday over the University of Illinois campus station, WILL. On succeeding Mondays other members of the survey staff will be heard.

76 ARCHITECTS HAVE ENTERED MUNICIPAL THEATER CONTEST

To Qualify for Competition, They Must Submit Reconstruction Designs by Dec. 1.

Seventy-six architects of the St. Louis district have entered the competition conducted by the Municipal Theater Association to obtain plans for the reconstruction of the pergolas and other major improvements at the open-air theater, on which as much as $100,000 may be spent, provided that proper financing can be arranged.

The architects will first submit by Dec. 1 only a minimum number of drawings. From these a maximum of 10 will be selected, and the architects offering them will be asked for more detailed drawings to be delivered by Jan. 18.

The winning architect will receive the commission to design and supervise the construction work at a fee of 6 per cent of the total cost. The entrant ranked second will get $500, third $300 and others among the 10 will get $100 each.

CARTOONIST ROBERY RIPLEY TO BE IN CITY TUESDAY

Will Appear at Exhibit of His Curiosities at Stix, Baer & Fuller.

Robert Ripley, creator of the "Believe It or Not" cartoons, will be in St. Louis Tuesday from 2 until 4 p. m. at the exhibit of curiosities, on display at Stix, Baer & Fuller for the last week. The exhibit is part of his accumulation over a period of years and consists of 225 oddities from 198 countries.

Among the objects which have never before been exhibited are a collection of dolls which include Japanese caremonial dolls used in the yearly "Festival of Dolls," and a Tibetan treasure chest of green-gold inlaid with precious stones. This chest, used by lama priests, is said to be the first to come into the the possession of an Occidental.

The Ripley exhibit of curiosities is being shown here for the benefit of the Lion's Den, a Boy Scout camp for underprivileged Scouts. It will be continued through Saturday, Nov. 27.

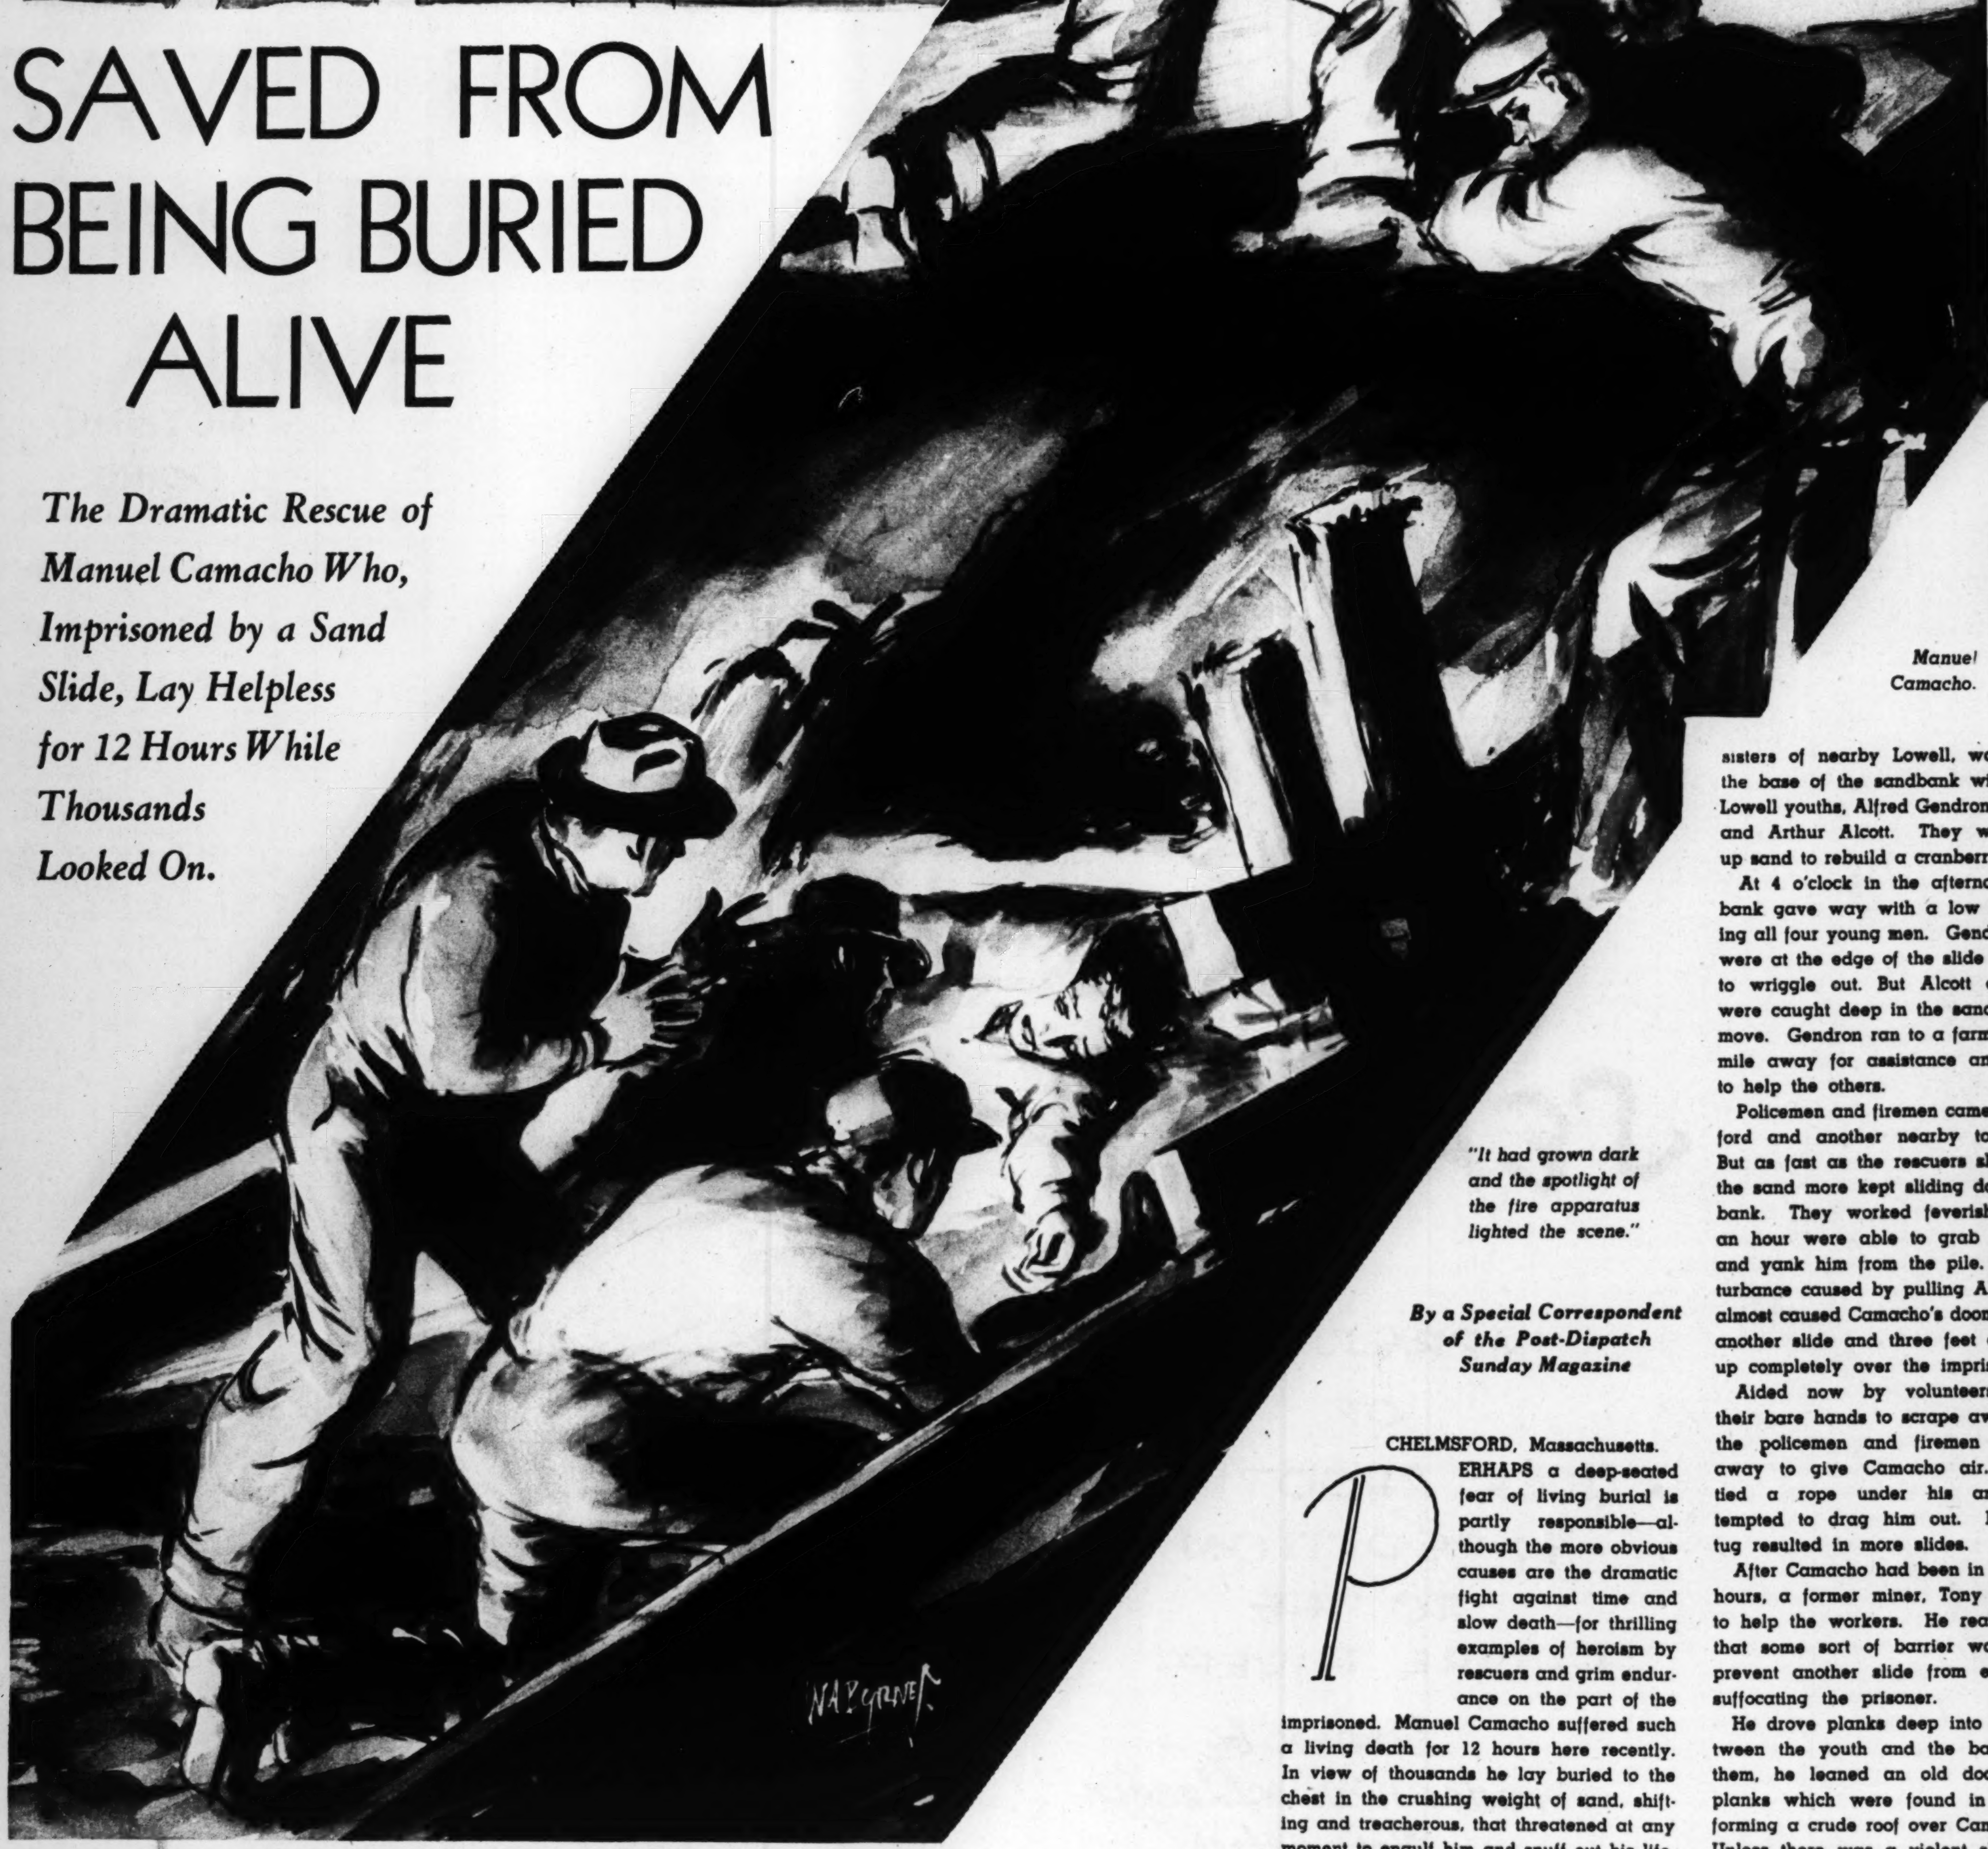
SAVED FROM BEING BURIED ALIVE

The Dramatic Rescue of Manuel Camacho Who, Imprisoned by a Sand Slide, Lay Helpless for 12 Hours While Thousands Looked On.



"It had grown dark and the spotlight of the fire apparatus lighted the scene."

Manuel Camacho.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

CHELMSFORD, Massachusetts.

PERHAPS a deep-seated fear of living burial is partly responsible—although the more obvious causes are the dramatic fight against time and slow death—for thrilling examples of heroism by rescuers and grim endurance on the part of the imprisoned. Manuel Camacho suffered such a living death for 12 hours here recently. In view of thousands he lay buried to the chest in the crushing weight of sand, shifting and treacherous, that threatened at any moment to engulf him and snuff out his life.

It happened at the foot of a 50-foot sandbank near this staid old town on the banks of the Merrimack River. Camacho, 19 years old and one of a family of 14 brothers and sisters of nearby Lowell, was working at the base of the sandbank with three other Lowell youths, Alfred Gendron, Arthur Becht, and Arthur Alcott. They were shoveling up sand to rebuild a cranberry bog nearby.

At 4 o'clock in the afternoon, the sandbank gave way with a low swish, engulfing all four young men. Gendron and Becht were at the edge of the slide and managed to wriggle out. But Alcott and Camacho were caught deep in the sand and couldn't move. Gendron ran to a farm house a half mile away for assistance and Becht tried to help the others.

Policemen and firemen came from Chelmsford and another nearby town, Billerica. But as fast as the rescuers shoveled away the sand more kept sliding down the steep bank. They worked feverishly and after an hour were able to grab Alcott's arms and yank him from the pile. But the disturbance caused by pulling Alcott to safety almost caused Camacho's doom. There was another slide and three feet of sand piled up completely over the imprisoned youth.

Aided now by volunteers who used their bare hands to scrape away the sand, the policemen and firemen dug enough away to give Camacho air. Then they tied a rope under his arms and attempted to drag him out. But the least tug resulted in more slides.

After Camacho had been in the sand two hours, a former miner, Tony Sousa, came to help the workers. He realized at once that some sort of barrier was needed to prevent another slide from engulfing and suffocating the prisoner.

He drove planks deep into the sand between the youth and the bank. Against them, he leaned an old door and some planks which were found in the vicinity, forming a crude roof over Camacho's head. Unless there was a violent slide of sand, he was safe for the time being.

Meanwhile word had spread of the fight being waged for the young man's life, and several thousand townspeople and farmers had gathered to watch the drama unfold before their eyes. It had grown dark, and the spotlights of the fire apparatus lighted the scene. As the rescuers toiled fitfully, their forms sent huge, eerie shadows along the sand bank.

But rescue operations were getting nowhere. As soon as the sand was dug away from the sides and front of Manuel's little cave, more slipped in, so that at no time could they clear it away below his waist. As the hours wore on, the shifting and settling of sand continued covering the door-roof to a depth of several feet.

A physician was called, and a priest. While the workers rested a moment, the physician crawled into the shelter and gave the prisoner brandy.

At 10 o'clock a call was sent for Street Superintendent George P. Legrand of Lowell, an expert in sewer construction.

When he arrived, Legrand examined the bank. Within a half hour truck loads of sewer workers from Lowell followed, with the equipment used in shoring up sewer excavations—piles, wood sheeting, spikes, sledge-hammers and ropes.

AT 11:30 p. m., operations were begun. A line of piles was driven into the sand on each side of the makeshift cave around Camacho. Wood sheeting was laid along them to form a wall. It was ticklish work because of great danger of starting a really heavy slide of sand that would engulf the workers, and it took an hour and a half.

Although the walls now protected Manuel on the sides, hundreds of tons of sand hung ominously overhead, threatening to fall. So a stronger and higher breastwork had to be built between him and the sand cliff.

Two feet beyond him, between him and the cliff, piles were laid deep into the sand slope at the foot of the cliff, and were fastened at right angles to the side walls. Relays of workers swung sledge hammers tentatively, but accurately.

As the hours crept by, the priest and physician crawled in to Camacho occasionally to cheer him. The doctor gave him a sandwich, more brandy, and lit two or three cigarettes for him. But he found that Manuel's resistance was lowering perceptibly as the pain in his legs became unbearable.

Manuel complained that one of the planks driven into the sand earlier in the night by the miner, Sousa, was pressing sharply against his foot, and that a shovel the youth had been using before he was trapped was boring into the back of one knee. Soon numbness set into his legs, nullifying the pain.

About 3:30 a. m. the breastwork in back of Manuel was completed. Superintendent Legrand ordered the excavation to be begun. Working at feverish speed, relays of workmen shoveled the sand from around him.

FINALLY Nelson Legrand, 250-pound son of the street superintendent, and a former football player at New York University, crept into the excavation and lifted the helpless Camacho out of the pit that came so near being his grave.

A great spontaneous cheer rolled up from the watching thousands and was flung back in a booming echo from the cliff.

Manuel had fainted. As he was placed on a stretcher, John Camacho threw his arms around him.

As the stretcher bearers made their way through the crowd with a police wedge opening a lane for them, the crowd almost mobbed them in its excitement.

Manuel was taken to a hospital in Lowell. He responded to treatment. Although his legs were badly crippled, his physicians say he will recover completely.

Denied 'Twins' Were Her Own

The Baffling Case of Mrs. Tortorice and Her Children She Is Fighting to Hold

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

PITTSBURGH, Pennsylvania.

IT WAS expected that Judge John H. Wilson would admit that the case of the Bales "twins," when it came up a few days ago for the tenth time, needed another Solomon to render decision. Lawyers and friends who have been following the legal fight that began in March, 1934, for custody of the eight-year-old boys, had long regarded it as an exceedingly bitter case. Some sided with thrice-married Mrs. Elva Mai Bales Tortorice and others with William S. Bales, her second husband, who claims he is the father of the children. All of them were amazed a few days before the case went to Judge Wilson when Mrs. Tortorice, apparently in desperation, made an announcement containing the following points:

The boys were not twins. They were not her sons. They were not her former husband's sons. Both litigants were always aware of these facts.

Bales maintained that each and every one of the points was false. He added that his lawyer had the names of a doctor and a nurse who were ready to testify that Mrs. Tortorice gave birth to the children. The attorney chimed in with the declaration that the "repeated attempts of the father to win custody of the children show that he is certain that he is the father."

Mrs. Tortorice then revealed what were purported to be affidavits from the boys' real mothers. These she said, were signed by the mothers when they relinquished all rights to the children a few days after the births in a Philadelphia hospital.

In explanation of why such a hoax (if it was a hoax) was perpetrated, Mrs. Tortorice asserted that it had to be resorted to if she were to satisfy her maternal instincts and yet keep from having trouble with her husband's three maiden sisters.

"I just got married so I could have children," Mrs. Tortorice added, "so when I couldn't, I decided to adopt some. Mr. Bales was enthusiastic about the idea. The trouble was that he supported his sisters and I knew that if they realized we were spending money on children that were not even our own we would have no peace. Therefore I went ahead and made arrangements for the hoax."

ON November 24, 1929, she took a room in the Haddon Hospital here, she said, and in due time the boys arrived from an orphans' home in Philadelphia. Then the babies were presented to Bales' three sisters who seemed quite delighted, according to Mrs. Tortorice, to become aunts.

Everything went well for a time, she said, and then on March 13, 1934, Mrs. Tortorice was divorced from Bales. He at once began his campaign for custody of the boys. Time after time he tried and failed in common pleas court and in juvenile court. Always, though, according to Mrs. Tortorice, the secret was kept. They were bitter foes but there was a mutual understanding that the boys were to be shielded from the stigma that might be attached to them if their history became public property.

At last Bales had his lawyer change tactics and start the action to gain possession of the boys through habeas corpus proceedings in the county court. It wasn't long after this that Mrs. Tortorice revealed what she said were the true facts in the case and said, by way of explanation, that: "My former husband is not hurting me. He is hurting the boys. I have kept the secret because I did not want to hurt them. Now I see it is no longer any use."

The bewilderment of friends of both parties in the case was increased shortly after this by the statements of two women who both should know the facts and yet contradicted each other.

Mrs. A. B. Jones, superintendent of the Haddon Hospital, insisted the babies were not born there, asserting the "mother" merely spent a few days in the hospital with them. But Mrs. Laura Scharding, a neighbor of Mrs. Tortorice before the "births," declared that Mrs. Tortorice had given every evidence of approaching motherhood before she entered the hospital.

"The records are gone," Mrs. Jones said, "but I can remember everything that happened in this hospital since 1901. The babies were brought here from Philadelphia. Dr. J. Leonard Smith performed a minor operation on them. Mrs. Tortorice

IT WAS a brilliant social season during the winter of 1888 in Prague, now the capital of Czechoslovakia, but then part of the Austro-Hungarian empire. Underneath, as at Vienna and Budapest there were rumblings of discontent, nationalist plotting against the tyrannies of the aging man of iron, Franz Joseph, and offshoots of the intrigues and jealousies and scandals of the court circle, the faint musty-rose decadence that was gathering about the flower of empire, the specks of tarnish forming on the glittering metal of its pomp.

But the fatal shots at Sarajevo that were to spell the doom of the empire were 26 years away, and to the outer world, those were the "good, fat years" of the Hapsburg reign. And royalty, nobility, wealth and the military aristocracy enjoyed itself light-heartedly. Prague was as gay as Vienna, for it entertained royalty that winter. Archduke Franz Ferdinand, nephew of Emperor Franz Joseph and in line for succession after the Emperor's son, ill-fated Archduke Rudolph, was stationed at the garrison. Young—only 26—and handsome behind his handle-bar mustachios, Franz Ferdinand plunged into the whirl of balls and dinners with zest and dashing recklessness, and there were lively times in the Bohemian metropolis. Times of lilting waltzes, bright uniforms, gleaming white shoulders and soft eyes under thousands of candles in huge ballrooms, gallantry, champagne, flirtations and affairs.

One of the famed beauties of Prague was Leopoldine Hahn, debutante daughter of a wealthy army contractor and banker. The Archduke met Fraulein Hahn at several balls and fell in love with her. He pursued her, and persuaded her to become his mistress. The Archduke was something of a rake, but this was no amour of the night with him. Marriage to Leopoldine seemed impossible to him, because she was not of the blood royal, not even of nobility. They made only a slight attempt to keep their attachment secret. She lost little in respectability. An Archduke was an Archduke, and royal romance was something not to be denied. Jealousy of Leopoldine there may have been among her friends, but no one was really shocked.

That January in the hunting lodge at Mayerling, shots sounded and a man and a woman died. Crown Prince Rudi, the moody Hamlet of the Hapsburgs, and his mistress had ended their tragic love affair. And Franz Ferdinand became heir apparent to the throne.

One of the famed beauties of Prague was Leopoldine Hahn, debutante daughter of a wealthy army contractor and banker. The Archduke met Fraulein Hahn at several balls and fell in love with her. He pursued her, and persuaded her to become his mistress. The Archduke was something of a rake, but this was no amour of the night with him. Marriage to Leopoldine seemed impossible to him, because she was not of the blood royal, not even of nobility. They made only a slight attempt to keep their attachment secret. She lost little in respectability. An Archduke was an Archduke, and royal romance was something not to be denied. Jealousy of Leopoldine there may have been among her friends, but no one was really shocked.

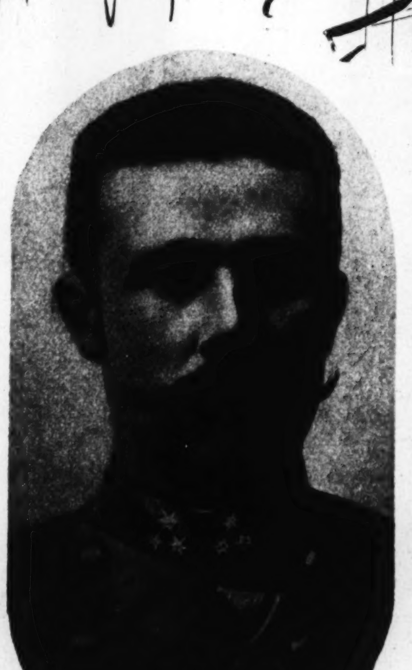
That January in the hunting lodge at Mayerling, shots sounded and a man and a woman died. Crown Prince Rudi, the moody Hamlet of the Hapsburgs, and his mistress had ended their tragic love affair. And Franz Ferdinand became heir apparent to the throne.

The following August, a son was born to Leopoldine Hahn. She named him after his father, Franz Ferdinand Kurt Hahn.

The romance died with the birth of its offspring, under pressure from the Emperor. But Franz Ferdinand did not totally desert Leopoldine in her predicament. He sent money for support of the child, and, 10 years later, acknowledged in a legal document his fathership of young F. F. Kurt Hahn, stating that he had paid 3000 gulden to the mother in return for which she gave up all further claims.

MEANWHILE, in 1896, Archduke Franz Ferdinand began a romance with another Bohemian girl, Sophie Chotek. She was of noble birth, but not of royal rank, and the embittered Franz Joseph fought their marriage. But the Archduke stood his ground tenaciously through several years of quarreling, and finally effected a morganatic marriage with Sophie in the teeth of snubbery at the court and the curse of Franz Joseph. To do this, Franz Ferdinand had to agree to forego for his wife and their children all rights to the throne and to royal titles. Later the Emperor relented enough to bestow on her the title of Countess von Hohenberg.

Perhaps it was because of the injustice done him by the Emperor that Franz Ferdinand's own attitude towards his illegitimate son softened. Anyway, in 1902, he appeared in the District Court at Prague and took oath before a public notary that he was the father of Kurt Hahn, then 13 years old. He agreed to pay Leopoldine a small pension for the rest of her life and to provide for the rearing and education of the child of their romance.



The Archduke Franz Ferdinand of Austria.

Kurt Hahn attended schools in Prague and Vienna, studied engineering, and got his degree early in 1914, when he was 24.

His father, Franz Ferdinand, was assassinated at Sarajevo June 28 that year. The shots fired by the Serbian Nationalist student, Gavrilo Princip, resounded throughout the civilized world. Serbia had to reject Austria's purposely impossible demands, and the nations of Europe girded for war. The masses of troops mobilized on the frontiers were hurled at each other's throats by the explosion that fateful August, and among them, inconspicuous in a world of uniforms, was the son of the murdered Archduke, commoner Kurt Hahn

Kurt entered the Austrian army as a second lieutenant with an artillery regiment. He distinguished himself in action, was cited for bravery. Then he was made a captain, was wounded, and was decorated with the war cross. Finally he contracted in the water-soaked trenches a rheumatic ailment that was to become more serious as the years wore on.

Meanwhile, in 1916, old Franz Joseph went to his death after a reign of 68 years, during which his brother Maximilian fell before a firing squad in Mexico, his only son committed suicide, his estranged wife and his nephew were assassinated, nationalistic revolts were stamped out in blood, and his country was defeated by the French and the Prussians. His successor, Charles I, resigned control of the State during November, 1918.

THE empire was broken into bits by the Treaty of Versailles and the Austrian National Assembly stripped the family of its property and banished those members who refused to renounce all rights but those of citizenship. The Hapsburg power was snuffed, although Prince Otto, Charles' son, continues to hover hungrily in Western Europe awaiting a call back to the throne at a propitious moment. The various branches of the family had little left of their former tremendous wealth.

But Kurt Hahn and his mother still insisted that the family had a royal duty towards them. After the war, the senior Hapsburg family agreed to continue Leopoldine on her small lifetime pension. To Kurt was given a lump sum of $10,000 on condition that he give up all further claims and emigrate to America to start life over.

Kurt agreed. With a Czech passport—due to his birth he was a Czech citizen—he went to New York City in 1922 and settled there.

For the next nine years, he followed his profession of engineer. He married a girl of Austrian extraction, and led a quiet, industrious life. Friends in the New York Austrian colony say he mentioned nothing about his exotic origin. They remember him only as a good-looking, well-mannered young man who liked to go to Viennese restaurants with his wife for dinners of wiener bakhandl—Vienna fried chicken—and mehlspeis, a famous Vienna dessert. He never became an American citizen.

AFTER he had been in New York for several years he began to suffer severely from rheumatism. By 1931, the ailment attacked his legs so violently that he was hardly able to use them. His money was eaten up by his illness, and he and his wife decided to return to Austria and demand support from the Hapsburgs.

After Archduke Franz Ferdinand's assassination, his entire estate had gone to his legitimate son, Duke Maximilian von Hohenberg. On arriving in Vienna, Hahn asked the Duke, his half brother, to provide for him, and threatened action in the courts if he were refused.

The Duke took the position that Hahn had already got his cake with the $10,000 settlement, and had no further claim. But Hahn asserted the Duke legally had to care for him, because he was unable to work, and under Austrian law, a person with means must support his impoverished close relatives, instead of throwing them on public relief.

So in 1933, Hahn sued the Duke, asking for a monthly pension of 320 shillings, about $60, enough for a couple to live on in comfort in Austria. After the litigation dragged on for a year, the court ordered the Duke to pay Hahn 160 shillings a month. Hahn complained it wasn't enough, and had his lawyer bring another suit for 1000 shillings a month. This was tried last March in Vienna, and the court ordered the Duke to raise the monthly allowance to 320 shillings. Hahn was happy, but the Duke set up a terrific legal howl, and the Vienna Court of Appeals reduced the settlement to 250 shillings a month last August.

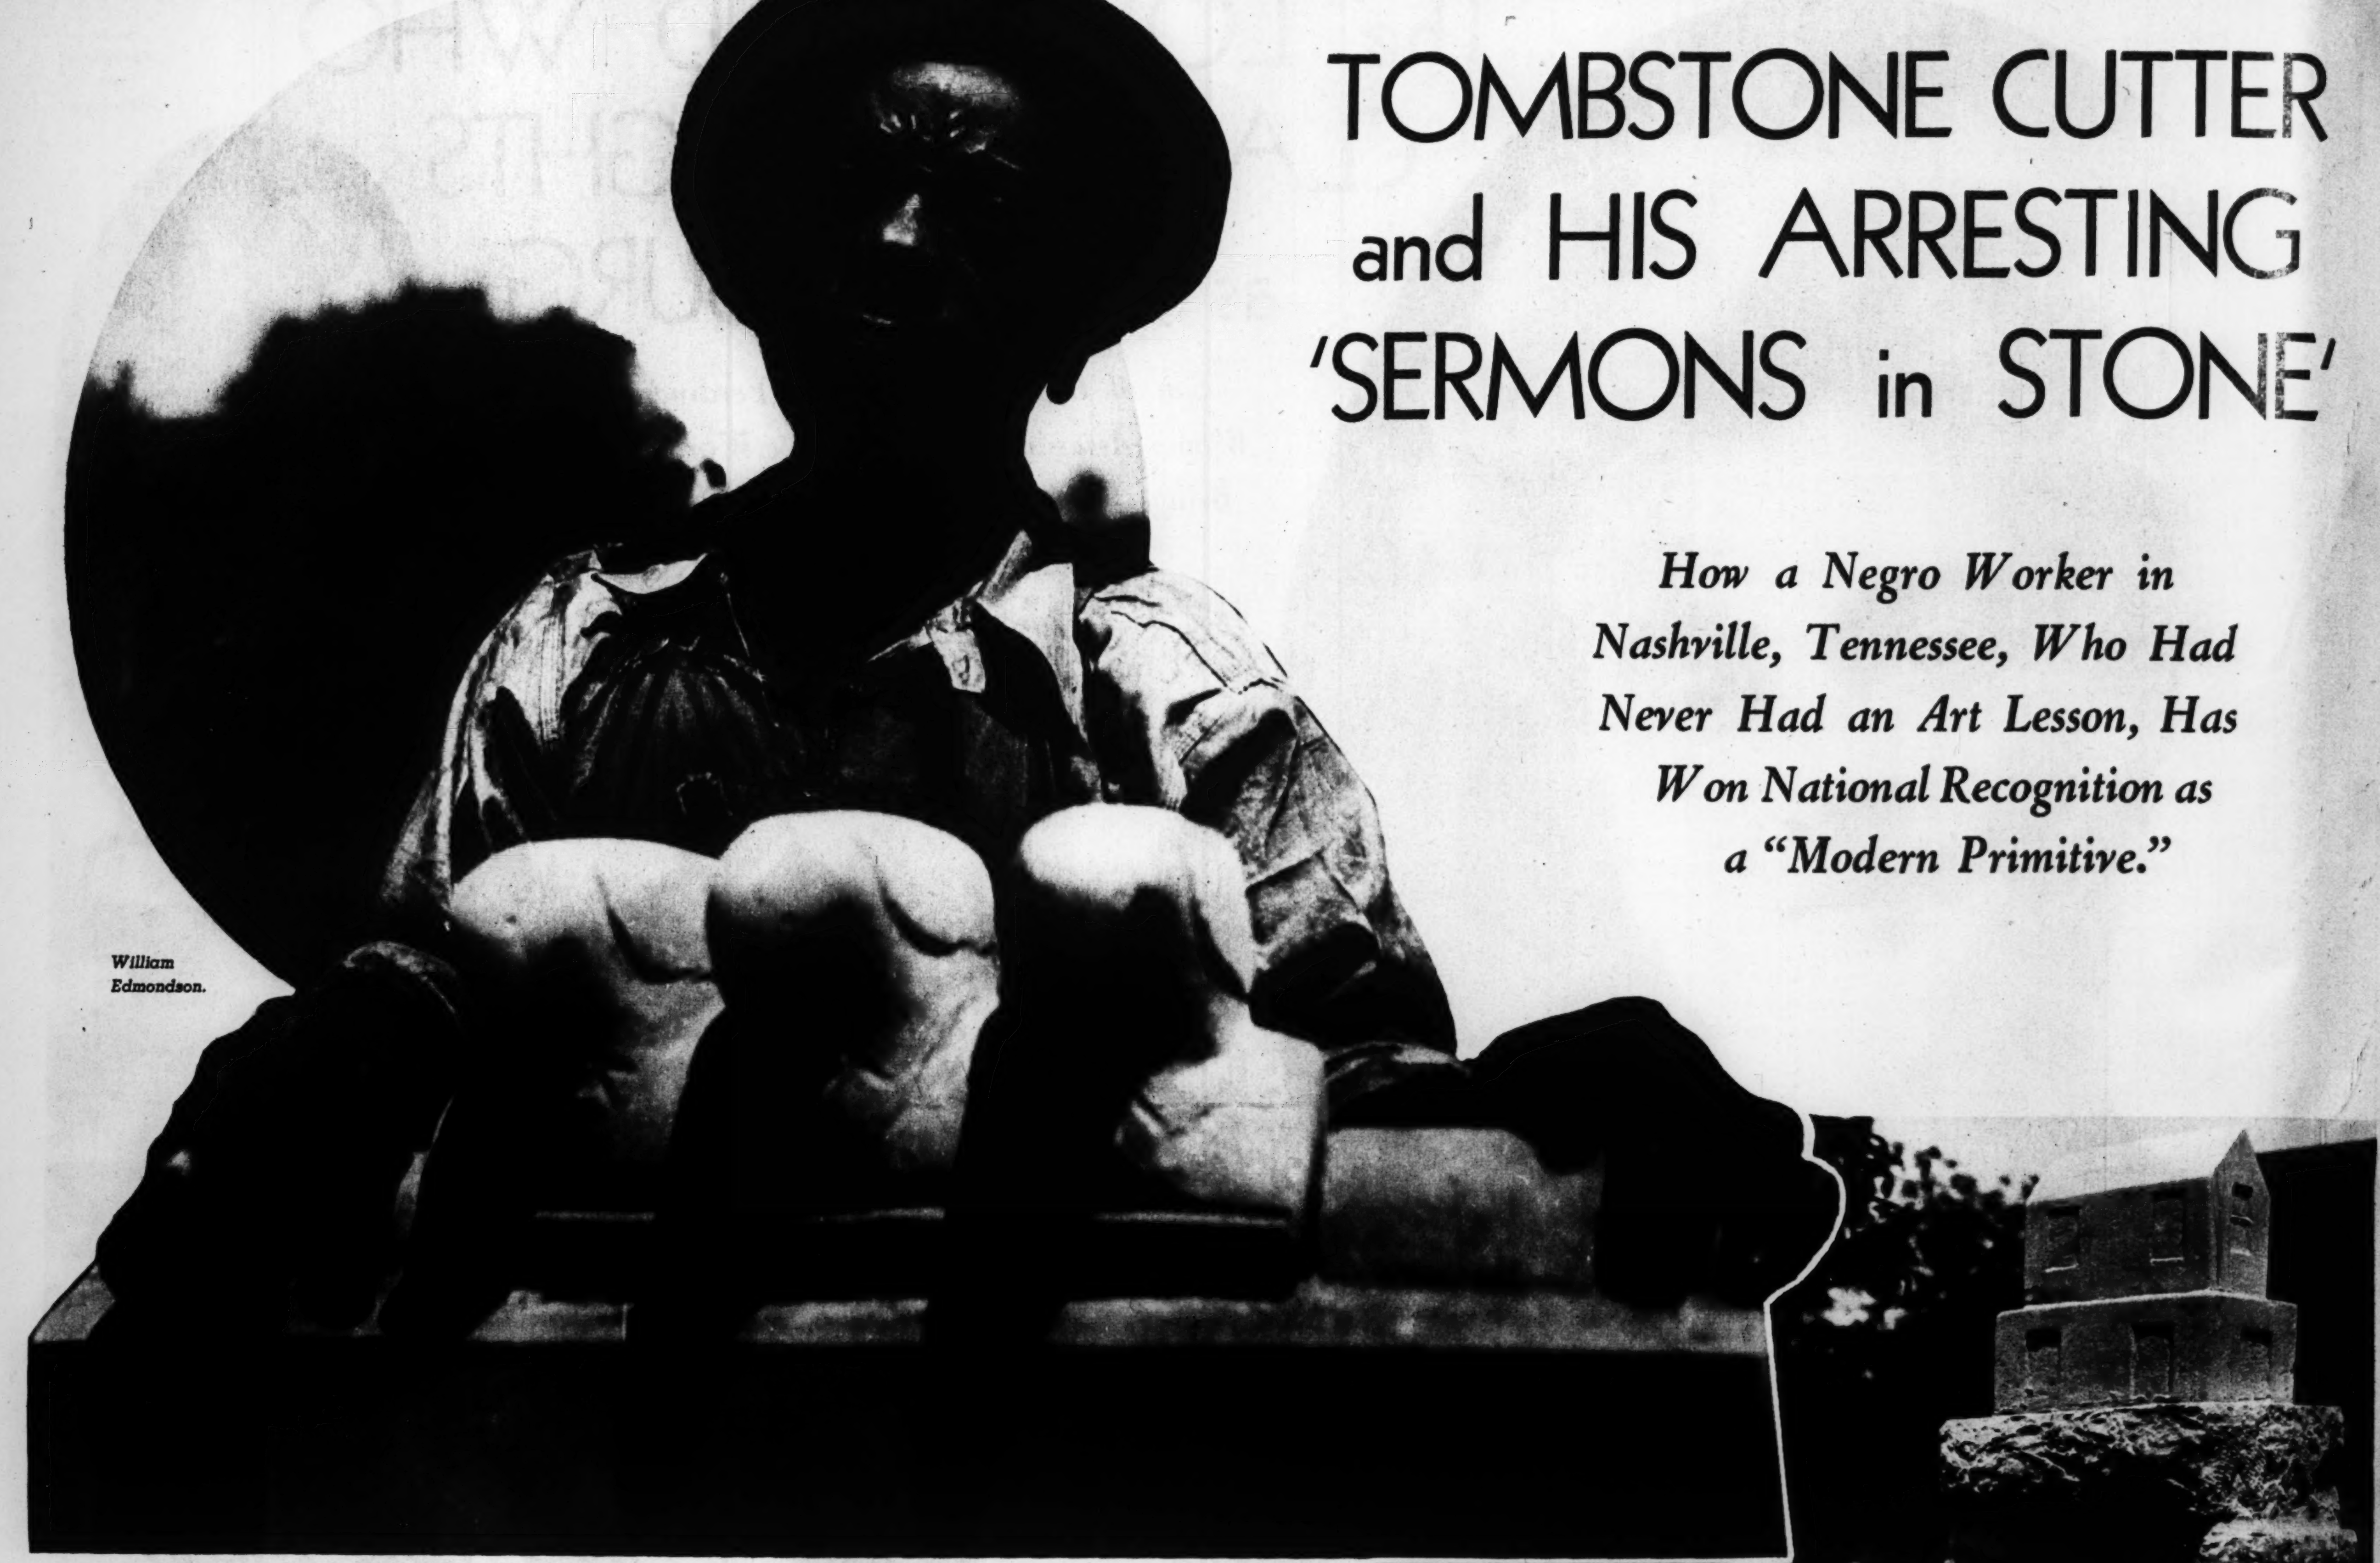
And now Kurt Hahn has added the crowning touch to his fight for a better place in the world. A recent Czech law provides that illegitimate children have the right to demand legalization of their name, once their fatherhood is established.

Armed with this, Kurt recently petitioned the International Court at Hague, Holland, for the right to the title "Archduke von Hapsburg." The Court has jursidiction under the peace settlement.

If he gets the title, who knows? Rival cliques to that around Archduke Otto have cast about before for rival claimants to the throne. Perhaps Kurt Hahn may yet make a mark in history.

TOMBSTONE CUTTER and HIS ARRESTING 'SERMONS in STONE'

How a Negro Worker in Nashville, Tennessee, Who Had Never Had an Art Lesson, Has Won National Recognition as a "Modern Primitive."



William Edmondson.

By a Member of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

WILLIAM EDMONDSON, Negro tombstone cutter of Nashville, Tennessee, who has never had an art lesson in his life, has just been awarded the distinction of a one man exhibition at New York's Museum of Modern Art. A New York photographer, Louise Dahl-Wolfe, discovered the work of this "modern primitive" about a year ago when it was called to her attention by a friend of her husband. Mrs. Dahl-Wolfe visited the sculptor's front yard, littered with tombstones, bought some pieces and made many photographs of Edmondson and his work. She later interested the Museum of Modern Art in the sculpture.

For years Edmondson was a hospital orderly. His life in Nashville was happy-go-lucky and simple. Four years ago the impulse came to him to preach. He became a tombstone cutter and with tools borrowed from the building trades began "at God's command" to carve "sermons in stone." He sees visions which his sculpture records. He believes his visions are not for the eyes of ordinary mortals, but are reserved for him alone. None the less, the subjects of his work are usually drawn from the Bible. His favorites are Mary and Martha, angels, doves and preachers.

Because his clients are rare and have little money to spend on his work, Edmondson has never been able to buy a large piece of limestone so that his sculpture, although robust in feeling, is small in size.

Alfred H. Barr Jr., director of the Museum of Modern Art, says, "Recognition of the discoveries of naive or self-taught artists is one of the achievements of contemporary taste. Usually the naive artist works in the easier medium of painting. Edmondson, however, has chosen to work in limestone, which he attacks with extraordinary courage and directness to carve out simple, emphatic forms. The spirit of his work does not betray the inspiration which he believes to be his active guide."

The New York Times critic writes: "He carves figures, now terrestial and now divine, that bear every one of them the insignia of a primitive who works with a song in his heart. Untaught, unskilled, he yet performs, in his own way, small, patient miracles. The forms, though crude, are often astonishingly full of character. This true folk artist may have scant knowledge of an angel's anatomy, but how well he knows his preacher, and with what seeing eyes he has observed how plump ladies sit upon a sofa. And in his guileless use of plastic symbol language he can comrade the ancients of Assyria or of Egypt."

RUSSIAN.

IT IS the ambition of every young Communist to be able to shoot as expertly as Klementy Efremovich Voroshilov, the Commissar of war and a close friend of Joseph Stalin. There isn't an officer in the Red Army or Navy who wouldn't trade his right eye in return for Voroshilov's genius for grasping military problems. Tall and handsome, he lacks a martial appearance, but when he gives a command there is no doubt—he is a soldier. And what is just as important, he has the gift of infusing his own enthusiasm into the staff officers and the rank and file of the army.

Yet this man who is prepared to defend a nation of 170,000,000 with an army of more than 1,600,000 men and a navy that is being rebuilt, became a soldier by chance. In fact he used to hate soldiers. Born in 1881, the son of a poor laborer, he was working in a mine at the age of 7, buried almost as deeply in the lower stratum of human society as the ore he dug. By the time he was his teens, Voroshilov was taking part in revolutionary activity. His first arrest was for refusing to take off his cap when he passed an army officer on the street. Shortly after this he took part in a labor disturbance at an iron foundry in Lugansk, his native town, and was beaten cruelly by police. His record of arrest, banishment, escape, and renewal of subversive activity rivals that of Stalin. He was 27 when he met Lenin at a secret conference and won the admiration of the older revolutionist. Lenin told him to return to Lugansk and secretly spread propaganda. The workers recognized him as a natural leader and secret military companies were formed for revolt against the Czar. They gave important service when the Bolsheviks overthrew the Kerensky government in 1917.

Voroshilov became one of the foremost self-taught commanders and his ability and courage were recognized with an assignment to form a Red cavalry army out of the unruly Cossacks who had been mutinying or indulging in wholesale looting and pogroms whenever they felt the urge. Most of the Cossacks were in sympathy with the Whites or aiding them so Voroshilov had no easy task. He had succeeded in his mission when his cavalry army proved its striking power against Denikin in the brief war with the Poles. Full recognition came in 1925 which signalized the decline of Trotsky. It also heralded the ascendancy of Voroshilov, who since has climbed steadily into prominence.

General
Vassily Blucher

RUSSIAN.

DESPITE his firm convictions as a revolutionist, Vassily Blucher was one of the first to enlist in the summer of 1914 to fight for Russia on the Austro-Hungarian front. His close companions were rather dubious; he was sure to get in trouble with the officers. Instead, he was made an officer. Promotion came rapidly. Then he fell, seriously wounded. He was told that he was a good soldier, but his fighting days were over. There was a job he could have in a factory. So he went back to his career as a laborer and to his study of the writings of Marx, Engels and Lenin. After his second arrest in 1916 he joined the Bolshevist party.

Born of a poor family 48 years ago, Blucher after little schooling spent some time agitating for social reform.

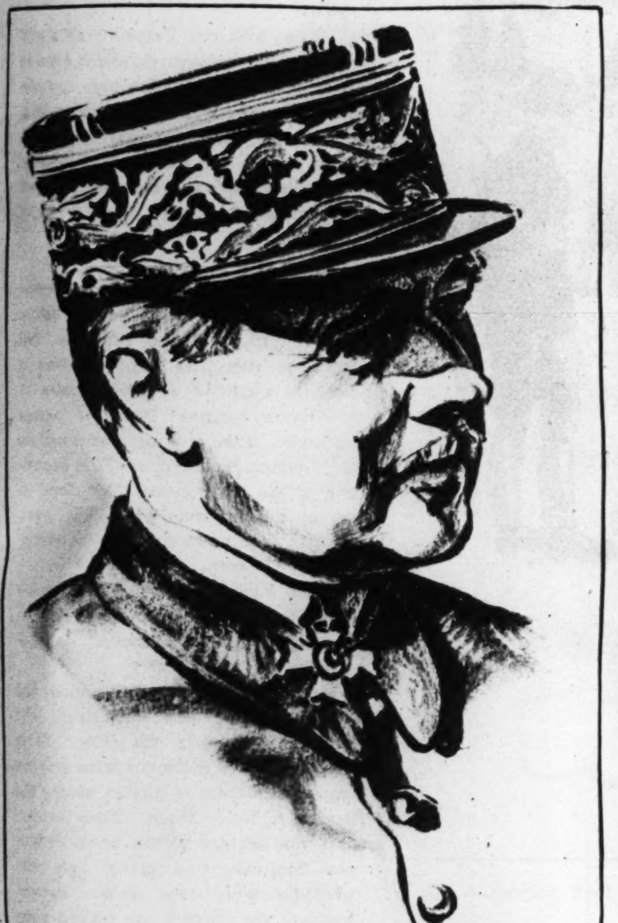
He was well prepared when he was selected, after the February revolution of 1917, to carry on propaganda work in the army. After the October revolution, which found him in Samara, he was recognized with membership in the committee of general safety, a political police organization which preceded the Cheka.

Later he marched into Siberia and played a major part in the defeat of Kolchak, the White leader. Without even a breathing spell, his army was rushed south to the Crimea where it met Wrangel's army of 300,000 men. Blucher defeated the White general at Kakhovka and then at Perekop. He received a decoration for each of these major victories. At the conclusion of the civil war, Blucher was sent to rout the Japanese interventionists out of Khabarovsk, Vladivostok and Spassk.

He next was sent to aid the Chinese Nationalists, but this assignment ended in disaster when the Chinese broke with the Russians and Blucher had to flee for his life. During the Manchurian crisis of 1929-30, he was in charge along the Soviet-Manchurian frontier and succeeded in getting the Chinese Eastern Railroad returned to Russia and China under the Khabarvosk protocol.

He now commands the Soviet Far Eastern Army which is said to be able to wage war for a year without aid from European Russia. It has been reported that he has directed the Chinese against the Japanese by long distance telephone.

Rough talking, rough fighting, he delights in proving himself a master of invective by denouncing "the imperialistic rascals treading on our socialistic soil with their dirty feet."



General
Maurice Gamelin

FRENCH.

IF STOCKY little General Maurice Gamelin couldn't pound his way through the Maginot line in the sham war of 1934, then nobody could. At least that is the way French military officials still feel about the campaign. The general, then 62, played the part of a German commander leading a superior force of invaders through the hills and woodlands of France. He made full use of his artillery in the theoretical fighting but failed miserably against the steel and concrete line so near the Rhine. All France was delighted that the extraordinary system of fortification, replete with gas defense, electric power, water, light, telephones, radio, and fire control, had resisted the "invasion" successfully. Shortly after this campaign, Gamelin, the chubby dandy with the microscopic mustache, took command of the French army.

Even in time of peace he may shape France's military organization to meet any emergency. Troops, army staffs, schools, curriculum and organization are all subordinate to Gamelin.

A German newspaper, commenting on his appointment and the increased authority going with it, said: "The new chief of staff knows that military principles in France are in a state of flux and therefore he does not cling to any fixed ideas. He is one of those leaders who are capable of developing new, more profound theories on the basis of experience. Not without purpose does he read books on philosophy, Bergon's works having been his favorite reading at one time. There is nothing rigid or doctrinaire about him. He believes in "creative development,' which in the continually changing theories of strategy, ultimately expresses the character of the nation. Therefore, one should not say that the emergence of this man at the head of the French army means that the mobile strategy of Foch and Weygand has been superseded. . . . Weygand is one of those Frenchmen who have not been able to distinguish between the greatness of the victory and the moral and spiritual despair that followed in France. That is what has made his attitude toward Germany so dictatorial. Gamelin, on the other hand, emerged from this conflict, which laid its mark on every Frenchman of the war generation, into the clear sphere of pure soldiery."

Patient and rather colorless, Gamelin is regarded as lacking in personal magnetism. However, he saw plenty of fighting in the World War, when he was on Marshal Joffre's staff, and in French colonial campaigns in Africa.

BRITISH.

OUTSIDE of service circles, the name of Field Marshal Sir Cyril John Deverell is almost unknown. Yet, at 63, he is one of Britain's great war leaders. Sir Cyril is notably close-mouthed. Not once did he appear openly in the British-Fascist-Belgium military staff conferences of last year, during which matters of high moment to the future course of peace in Europe were discussed.

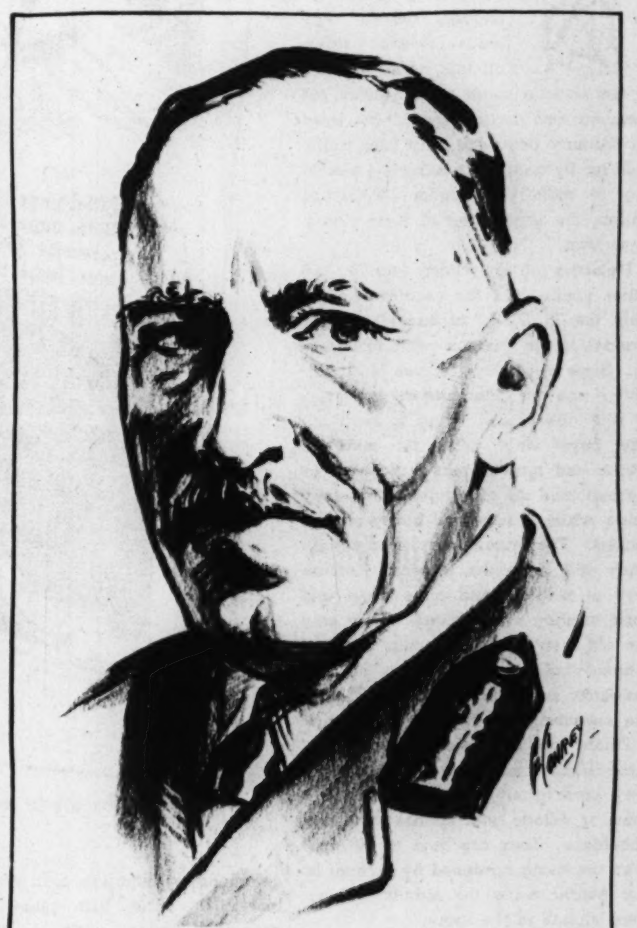
Only a few weeks before the conference Sir Cyril had been appointed chief of the imperial general staff in succession to Field Marshal Sir Archibald Armar Montgomery-Massingberg. This was the culmination of a career extending through half a dozen wars and marked by many citations for bravery on the field of battle all the way from India to the shell-pitted battlegrounds of France.

Nine times the dispatches of the World War mentioned the name of General Deverell for distinguished service. He was awarded the Croix de Guerre with palm and the Legion of Honor. Grateful Britain made him also a Knight Commander of the Order of the Bath, and a Knight of the British Empire. Sir Cyril, the typical handsome British army officer, wears his honors well. He stands well over six feet in height and is robust as an ox.

Born to the military tradition, the son of Major J. B. S. Deverell, he entered the army as a second lieutenant in 1895 with the West Yorkshire regiment after his matriculation at the Bedford School. He was made an Adjutant in 1904 and a Major in India four years later. Already a seasoned veteran of the frontier fights he was promoted to the general staff and when the World War broke out he was sent to France with the British Expeditionary Force.

His war record was extraordinary and he made rapid upward strides. He commanded a regiment, then a brigade, then a division and when the war ended he was stationed with the army of occupation on the Rhine. During this time he advanced through Major, Lieutenant-Colonel, Colonel and Major-General, the last for conspicuous gallantry.

He was given the command of the United Provinces District in India from 1921 to 1925 and made Quartermaster-General until 1930 when he was appointed Chief of the General Staff. He was promoted to Commander-in-Chief of the Eastern command and aid-de-camp to the King in 1934. This preceded his selection for the Field Marshal's baton.



Field Marshal
Sir John Deverell

ITALIAN.

RODOLFO GRAZIANI is one of those military men who would be recognized anywhere, whether he were in uniform or not, as a leader of soldiers. Had he lived in the time of Julius Caesar he probably would have fought by the side of Titus Labienus in the slaughter of the Treviri just as he did with Pietro Badoglio in the massacre which accompanied the Italian invasion of Ethiopia.

He is the ideal type of general to wage a war in which absolute ruthlessness must prevail; although his brown eyes are those of the Latin race, there is no warmth in them; they are cold and piercing. The wrinkles in the corners are all that betray he is in the fifties. His nose might better be called a beak. The stern, straight-lipped mouth goes well with the firm, lantern jaw. An inch over six feet tall, he carries himself stiffly erect and takes pride in the fact that he is one of those senior officers who does not pack a paunch. His dress is always snappy whether he is on the parade ground or in the field.

His ability attracted attention at the outset of his career when he went to Italy's African possessions as a lieutenant and got into the midst of rough and tumble warfare with the savage nomads of the wastes. This sporadic fighting kept him busy until he was recalled to fight the Austrians in 1914. Twice wounded, he was promoted from captain to major for bravery.

The armistice was scarcely signed before he was back in Libya. Four years later he was a brigadier-general. By 1930 he was Vice-Governor of Cyrenaica and in two years more he had been made commanding general of an army corps for merit displayed as a soldier and as an administrator.

Since roads and railways were inadequate in the interior, he hit on the plan of "flying tribunals" to hold court. Planes carried the officials to the most remote desert village and hangings were carried out with expediency. Many of the tribal chieftains fought with a pathetic bravery what they knew was a losing fight. They were hailed as patriots and martyrs in all Mohammedan lands.

But to Graziani they were, at best, "nothing but brigands." Death was their fate. Death is the fate of those natives who oppose him now in Ethiopia where he holds sway as viceroy. Death, he says, with characteristic terseness, will be the fate of all foes of Mussolini.

Werner von Blomberg

GERMAN.

JUDGING from what he has accomplished in transforming the German army from a small force of 100,000 men to a mighty machine of 700,000 and from his reputation as a master of strategy, General Werner von Blomberg, Hitler's Minister of War, is one of the foremost military men in the world today. A slim six-footer with sharp features, stern expression, stiff figure and cold temperament, this World War veteran of 58 could be mistaken for a schoolmaster. His success is said to be due to two things: First and foremost, he is not so young as to heed tradition too little nor so old as to heed it too much; second, he was the first regular army officer to take Adolf Hitler seriously.

The son of an army officer, he was born in a small town in Pomerania, famous as the home of so many of the epauletted goose steppers who thrilled Kaiser Wilhelm before he fled to Holland. He was a lieutenant at 18 and a captain in 1914 before Sarajevo got in the headlines. His ability as an organizer had won him a division staff post. In a few months he had risen to a corps staff and by 1917 he was on the staff of the Seventh Army. He could have remained a safe distance behind the front lines at all times. Instead, he went into the front lines at every possible opportunity. General von Reinhardt, grizzled old general who took a liking to young Von Blomberg, once told him to "see personally that this order is carried out." The opportunity was such a good one that he fell wounded near the Allies' trenches.

By 1925 he was a colonel.

Von Blomberg played a leading role behind the scenes in the bloody Nazi purge of June, 1934. He was not only among the regular army men opposed to Roehm's scheme to force the army to take in the Brown Shirts, but he was in the front rank of those who confronted Hitler and made the dictator turn against Roehm.

The War Minister's military creed, expressed in his book, "The Waging of Modern War and the Idea of Annihilating the Enemy," may be summed up as follows: A long conflict is to be avoided. Instant domination of the foe must be achieved by putting overwhelming force into the first blow. The effect of surprise must be so paralyzing as to prevent the opponent from even organizing a defense. Military surpemacy must be ensured and remain aloof to all humane pleas. Only one thing may delay the stroke—the risk, or fear, of failure.

BERLIN.

ONE thing that immediately strikes the visitor to Germany is the number of youths in uniform. On the numerous festival days, all that have uniforms of the various youth organizations put them on and parade about. But even on ordinary days one often sees traffic held up by bands of youngsters marching in military formation, trying to imitate the goose step of their elders-in-uniform.

Members of the Hitler Jugend—the Hitler youth—and the organization for girls, the "B. D. M." or Bund Deutscher Maedel, range from six years of age to 16. Some of the little fellows of kindergarten age are quite cute as they scurry after the others, trying to keep up. The boys wear blue ski suits in winter and brown shirts and shorts in summer, and the girls have blue jersey skirts, white middies and brown leather jackets. They march surprisingly well. They still have the inherent German love of singing, and often burst into song as they swing along. They sing the old lusty marching songs and traditional ballads, but with a military precision, and occasionally they chant the organization's own song.

Often, too, one sees the khaki-clad Arbeitsdienst, members of the compulsory labor group, marching through a town or village with spades over their shoulders. They are boys of 16 or 17 who are being hardened by manual labor before doing the mandatory two-year stretch in the army.

THESE are some of the outward evidences of the thorough drilling German youth is undergoing so that it may be poured as Spartan steel into the Nazi mold. The propaganda they are given starts in the picture books of the primary grades and continues through preparatory school, with a strong accent on anti-Semitism.

In the primers and picture books, there are still bits of ancient folk lore, abbreviated versions of the fairy tales of the Brothers Grimm and Hans Christian Andersen, and those simple folk songs by Schubert, Schumann and Mozart with verses by Goethe, Schiller and Heine. But new pages have been inserted.

The First Reader of the Friedrich Korn'schen Publishing Company in Nuremberg, in its fourth edition, charmingly illustrated, displays on page 8, after fragments of the Humperdinck opera, "Haensel und Gretel," the swastika flags of the Third Reich. On page 11 are three little tow-headed "Hitler boys" carrying pennants with the Nazi insignia. Two boys with a toy cannon and Nazi flags are seen shooting at a castle. In other illustrations, "Hitler-boys" are shown giving the Nazi salute.

The march of a corps of Hitler Youth into the country is related. The enemy is concealed in the woods; the leader sends out spies; and, in atrocious verse, the enemy is captured. The division marches back, victoriously singing an old marching song:

"I have pledged myself, my heart and hand
To you, oh land of life and love,
To you, my Fatherland."

Ein Führer — ein Volk

Druck R. Oldenbourg, München

First page of an elementary arithmetic book. Hitler receiving flowers from children.

In Italy and other Fascist nations where war is considered inevitable, children are prepared by propaganda at an early age. But the Nazis are determinedly thorough and systematic about it. The first page of an arithmetic primer used in Bavarian schools show Hitler in one of his favorite poses, a benevolent man receiving flowers from a little girl and a salute from a small boy while two of the Fuehrer's bodyguard stand smilingly by. And school children use rows of uniformed Nazis, in place of the abacus, to help them with their sums.

The most virulent propaganda among children is that against the Jews. No less a person than Julius Streicher, Nuremberg publisher and Number 1 Nazi Jew baiter, has produced the most striking example of that in a children's book, "A Picture Book for Big and Little," published by his firm.

It is profusely illustrated in color. The drawings are well done—strangely they are a little reminiscent of the style of Georg Grosz, one of the "degenerate" artists whose work is being held up as a horrible example in a Munich show—but they have the subtlety of a pile driver. To the average American they seem ridiculous and naive.

Jewish men are all caricatured as pot bellied, hairy individuals, obviously prosperous, with hairy dark faces, thick lips and hooked noses. Sometimes they are arrogant, sometimes they look like thugs, but always they look evil, in line with the opening gun of the book, "The father of the Jews is the Devil.'"

One picture shows one of them, in a top hat, leeringly offering a string of jewels to a flaxen-haired Nordic maid, who is turning away in obvious distaste, while little blond children stand aghast and a Jewish boy smirks in the background. All true "Aryans" are represented in German propaganda pictures as blond, and Jews as black-haired, although most Bavarians have black hair, as Hitler himself has.

Another illustration shows a Jew smoking a fat cigar, ordering a poor old man and a barefoot little girl away from his door. In another, a Jew is shown as a glutton. A picture on "why German children do not patronize Jewish stores," shows a cat eating some of the meats displayed by a Jewish butcher, a gross, bloody cigar-smoking fellow. "The eternal Jew" is delineated as a snarling man with wild unkempt hair and beard, carrying sacks on his back. The legend with it shows how the Nazis have replaced the big, bad wolf fable. "The Jew will get you if you don't keep your eyes open," it proclaims.

By way of contrast, an illustration shows Streicher himself, kindly and keen-eyed, in Nazi uniform receiving flowers from some happy blond children.

The narrative, of course, is one in which villification of Jews is interspersed with praise of the Aryan Germans, particularly the publisher himself. In verse that scarcely rises above doggerel, it tells how well-brought-up German children must have nothing to do with Jews, must take pains to insult them, and must not ask their mothers to buy toys from Jewish stores; it has a chapter on how Jews may be identified by their names, and several ascribing evil characteristics to them. It all ends with the familiar legend, "The Jews are our misfortune."

VERY frankly, the Nazis admit that physical training of youths is chiefly designed to make them good soldiers. The official handbook of the Reich Youth Directorate called, "Hitler Youth in Service," opens this way:

"Hitler-boy!

"Physical culture isn't merely designed to prepare you for future military usefulness. It is also basic to the National-Socialist world outlook. . . ."

More than 50 pages of the manual are devoted to drill, marksmanship, the care of rifles, and military strategy. Firing over sandbags is particularly emphasized.

The 100-page chapter on "Country Sports," opens:

"The crowning aim of physical training for Hitler youth is outdoor sport. Here the Hitler-boy must learn to be master of the country. Outdoor sports offer Hitler-boys the opportunity to become familiar with the countryside and prepare themselves for their later duties as soldiers."

The games described are designed to produce first-rate fighting men capable of making the most of cover, protecting themselves in open country, and discovering the weakness of enemy positions. They provide primary training for officers by using map making and reading, communications and similar fundamentals of strategy as their basis.

This martial spirit runs through Dr. Heinz Schramm's "Hitler Book for German Youth." One passage, selected at random, says:

"In your hands, German youths and maidens, is laid the destiny of the Fatherland. In times of deepest disgrace and degradation Divine Providence gave the German people one who would lead them to new greatness, to honor and freedom. But what would this all be worth if the coming generation were unable to preserve the leader's work and execute it with his spirit?

"It lies with you, German youths and maidens, to prepare yourselves even in your early years for this high commission, for only a powerful generation, one healthy in body and spirit, can hope to rule the world. To live is to battle, and in battle the strongest and most perservering are always victorious."

THE process of molding German youth is begun even before birth. At the elaborate civil marriage rites, the bride receives a book in which to write the names of her future children; there are places for eight. Then she receives a lecture on "German Race Hygiene," an exposition of the Nazi racial theory, and a list of names from which true born German parents must choose the names of their children.

About 6,000,000 boys belong to the Hitler Youth, and the State intends ultimately to make membership compulsory for all youths.

Writing in the New Statesman and Nation, D. C. Yalden-Thompson, who was an official in the Hitler Youth headquarters in Berlin for three months, reports that there is friction among the leaders of Hitler Youth. Many lieutenants are jealous of the head, Baldur von Schirach, and many hate him whole-heartedly, the writer asserts. Some of the officers are looked upon by others as "not real Nazis" because they are members of former rival organizations, such as the Catholic Youth groups, which were disbanded and taken into the Hitler Jugend. Rival leaders have tried to betray each other to the secret police, and some, the author says, informed him they were actively working against Hitler's policy.

But opponents to the policies of the Nazis are gloomy about their chances to halt the inculcating of German children with Nazi propaganda.

One of the parsons of the Evangelical Synod said to this writer: "I fought through all four years of the war, I was wounded four times. I've suffered every kind of surgical torture as a reward for my services to Germany. I have the Iron Cross and a hatful of other medals. Yet now they call me an enemy of the State—a traitor. But the only thing that worries me is our children. What they are taught in the schools we cannot unteach. For they are taught to despise us. . . ."

THANKSGIVING'S TURKEY

By WALTER DAHLGREN

Ah ha-a-a-a! That look in the farmer's eye bodes the turkey no good. Mr. Gobble is as good as stuffed and on the Thanksgiving table. But he is not to be taken unawares—he has heard about that November day fatal to his kind. The moment he relaxes his vigilance, why—WHACK, and the farmer will have him!

DIRECTIONS ● Mount the page upon thin carboard and cut out the several parts. Be sure also to cut the slits "A and B." Next insert (from the back) "A" into slot "A" and "B" into slot "B"—then knot a string and sew through both "Xs," and knot again at the back. This will be the pivot on which is the movement. Now paste the turkey's head to "A" and the farmer's head to "B." To make the whole stand, fold back side wings on dotted lines. To animate fold the orange tab backward on dotted lines and move up and down.

TERRIBLE TABBY—A wildcat, who has long sharp claws.

OLD MAN MOON—Who is very uncomfortable.

BEAM AND GLEAM—Two little moonbeams.

Old Man Moon often said that he was thankful that he didn't have to live in Hickory Hollow. "It's much more peaceful and quiet up here," he would say. Then one night without warning everything changed. The Witch who sweeps him off every Hallowe'en brought two folks from the Hollow with her—a bear cub and a wildcat. And she left them on the onetime happy old man's head when she returned to earth. How his head ached when they tramped around. And when he tried to blow them off his nose the wildcat got mad and scratched him while the frightened bear cub hid in his ear. So the miserable old fellow yelled for help, as loud as he could yell. Help finally came in the form of Moonbeams. And we see Old Man Moon shouting orders to them as

THE PLAY BEGINS

OLD MAN MOON—Get that confounded bear out of my ear—ouch—he's kicking me, and get that crazy cat off my head. Be careful of his C-L-A-W-S—he's got them dug into my head. Hurry!

GLEAM—Where do you want us to take them?

OLD MAN MOON—Take them back to their confounded Hickory Hollow—hurry—ouch!!—ouch!! That crazy cat is killing me. (And Beam and Gleam and a host of other moonbeams lose no time in taking Tiny Ted and Terrible Tabby off the old man's head and are soon on their way to Hickory Hollow with them.)

GLEAM—(Who has Ted by one of his hands)—Now don't be frightened, little bear, you will soon be back in Hickory Hollow. (But poor Ted is frightened. He is so badly frightened he can't say a word.)

BEAM—(Who has Terrible Tabby)—Mercy, you do have awfully sharp claws. Don't you? It will be a long time before Old Man Moon looks himself again.

TERRIBLE TABBY—Well, he didn't have to try and blow us off of his nose, did he? He ought to be thankful that I didn't scratch him more than I did. (They land safely in the Hollow.)

BEAM—I suppose Old Mister Moon is thankful and when Thanksgiving comes you'll have a lot to be thankful for, too. Good-by. (She and the other moonbeams fly away to bandage up poor Old Man Moon.)

TINY TED—I'm going to be thankful for I'm back in Hickory Hollow.

TERRIBLE TABBY—I'm going to be thankful that we're back in time for Thanksgiving dinner.

OLD MAN MOON—(All patched up)—Gosh, I'm thankful that they're gone. Battered—but awfully thankful.

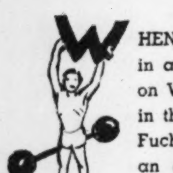
Strenuous History of the Fuchs Family Where One Strong Man Follows Another.

NEW YORK.



WHEN the doorbell rings in a modest apartment on Washington avenue in the Bronx, Mrs. Otto Fuchs answers it with an air of resignation. Like as not it is some indignant neighbor wanting to know, with many expressive gestures, why 8-year-old Charles Fuchs picked up her son and tossed him over his shoulder, or threw him petulantly into the gutter. Or why did 2-year-old Norbert Fuchs upset the heavy delivery cart with his chubby fingers or snatch away an older boy's solid iron toy engine and use it for the lifting routine "papa teached me."

Mrs. Fuchs, with a strange mixture of maternal pride and concern, soothes the neighbor's injured feelings and wonders what it will be next. Sometimes she even thinks how much easier —but less interesting—life would have been if Charles and Norbert had been normal children, like their sister Rosalind, instead of juvenile Sandows known the length and breadth of the borough as "The only original Baby Samsons."

But their strength is the breath of life to Papa Otto Fuchs, a physical director and masseur with a mission in life. Ever since Charles was old enough to stand erect and navigate with ease—and that was before he was 2 years old—Papa Fuchs has been plying him with dumbbells and other weights. Where other children were reaching gleefully for a baby rattle, Charles was crying for a bar bell and before he was 3 years old he was toddling around the living room dragging a 55-pound weight with him.

At 4 he used to rip away the wooden wall molding with his fingers. He astonished a dinner party by slipping under the table and joyfully picking it up by one leg, scattering food and dishes over unreceptive laps. All along Washington avenue children used to flee before him hardly knowing whether he would play gently or flip them from the sidewalk to the gutter. He used to do cart wheels all over the place.

At 5 he was giving wrestling exhibitions. That was the year, sighed Mrs. Fuchs, that he grabbed Sister Rosalind, who is several years older, and swung her into a closet with such force she almost shattered the door. He picked up 100 pounds that year, too, and Papa Otto was so elated he treated his friends to cigars.

A year later in the saga of the strong boy, he started school and teachers found him useful in moving big desks and the sliding doors of the auditorium. He almost broke Sister Rosalind's back with a bear hug to amuse some guests when he fell under the influence of Tarzan. "Big strong man," he would yell beating his chest and basking in the adulation of his playmates.

But there was another significant event that year. It was the birth of brother Norbert and Charles went blithely into Anno seven scarcely realizing that within his own home had been spawned the rival who is probably destined to surpass whatever marks he may make.

Just as he did with Charles, Papa Otto began to work Norbert's arms and legs in the cradle. He held the little tot up by his legs and then by the arms to strengthen them. Then he gave him tiny weights to play with, increasing the weight a minute amount every week. When Charles was 8 the other day Papa Otto brought Norbert out into the public gaze for the first time.

Even Charles joined in a tribute to his younger brother. Said Otto:

"He's gorgeous. He's stronger than I'll ever dream of being and stronger than Charlie is."

Charlie took this lying down but his mien was unusually subdued.

"He beats me up. He hurts me," he admitted.

Norbert, who finds a little trouble speaking for himself at this time, muttered a few disjointed phrases. His eyes lighted, however, when Otto produced two 10-pound dumbbells. Norbert, who weighs 35 pounds, snatched the dumbbells and pushed them sturdily up from his shoulders. He made a tentative effort to gnaw one of the bulbous ends of the dumbbell, failed and threw it away.

"He's milk and honey," exulted Otto.

Charles then went through his own routine. He lifted a 130-pound bar bell and pressed a 45-pound dumbbell overhead. Candidates for the Police and Fire departments have only to press a 60-pound dumbbell. Then Charles lay flat on his back, took a 15-pound dumbbell behind his neck and sat up with it. In this test police and fire candidates are required to use 35 pounds.

"If any other 8-year-old boy could do that I'd buy him the biggest dinner in the country," Otto said.

Charlie has chestnut hair, smooth, healthy skin and a set of teeth marred by a frontal gap. He insists he yanked two teeth by tying a rock to them and throwing the rock away. His thigh is 15¾ inches and he weighs 75 pounds. The most impressive of his measurements, however, is his neck which is 13 inches around. He got it that thick by doing wrestler's bridges.

Norbert has a chestnut fuzz on top of his head and Otto hasn't measured him yet for publication. He doesn't want to rush him into the spotlight too quickly, or at any rate while Charles is occupying it. But he believes that in another year or two Norbert will be making juvenile strength history.

Otto's mission in life is to make people "live right" and he is using Norbert and Charles to prove his theories. Charles gets a balanced diet, including cultured milk, regular baths and massages and carefully supervised exercise. Norbert is starting on the same path. Both have to go to sleep early since plenty of rest is a cardinal precept of the Fuchs method.

In the dim future he envisions a clinic in which he will impart his knowledge to the physically underdeveloped and make them all Charles and Norberts.

"You know," he confessed, "those kids wouldn't be unusual if we were more scientific with our children. They stand out now because other kids are subnormal."

Case of Mrs. Tortorice

Mrs. Schoarding said, "I never was so thunderstruck in all my life as when I read that Mrs. Tortorice was denying that she is the mother of the twins. I [illegible] her for almost a year before they were born. We were good friends. I looked after her when she wasn't feeling well. I know positively that she was approaching motherhood."

In view of all this, it was easy to see why lawyers and friends of the litigants expected Judge Wilson, totally unfamiliar with the case since he was to sit as visiting Judge from Butler County, to find himself confronted with a Gordian knot. And Judge Wilson certainly was an astonished jurist when he took his seat early this month and the case of the Bales "twins" was called. Attorneys for Mrs. Tortorice and for Bales spent many earnest minutes explaining just what the case was about. Mrs. Tortorice's lawyers argued that Bales was not entitled to custody unless he could show that he was the natural parent. Judge Wilson thereupon ruled that "since Mrs. Tortorice claims she is not the natural mother, she's in the same boat as Bales." He struck out all testimony concerning the birth of the children.

He then entered a court order with the following stipulations: While attending school, the boys are to live with Mrs. Tortorice. During vacations they are to move to the Bales home. Also, they are to spend every second week-end with Bales during school months. They will use the last name of their stepfather—Tortorice—except that there will be no objection to the use of the name Bales when they are in the Bales home. The "mother" will be permitted to visit the Bales home while the boys are there but the father may not visit the boys when they are in the Tortorice home.

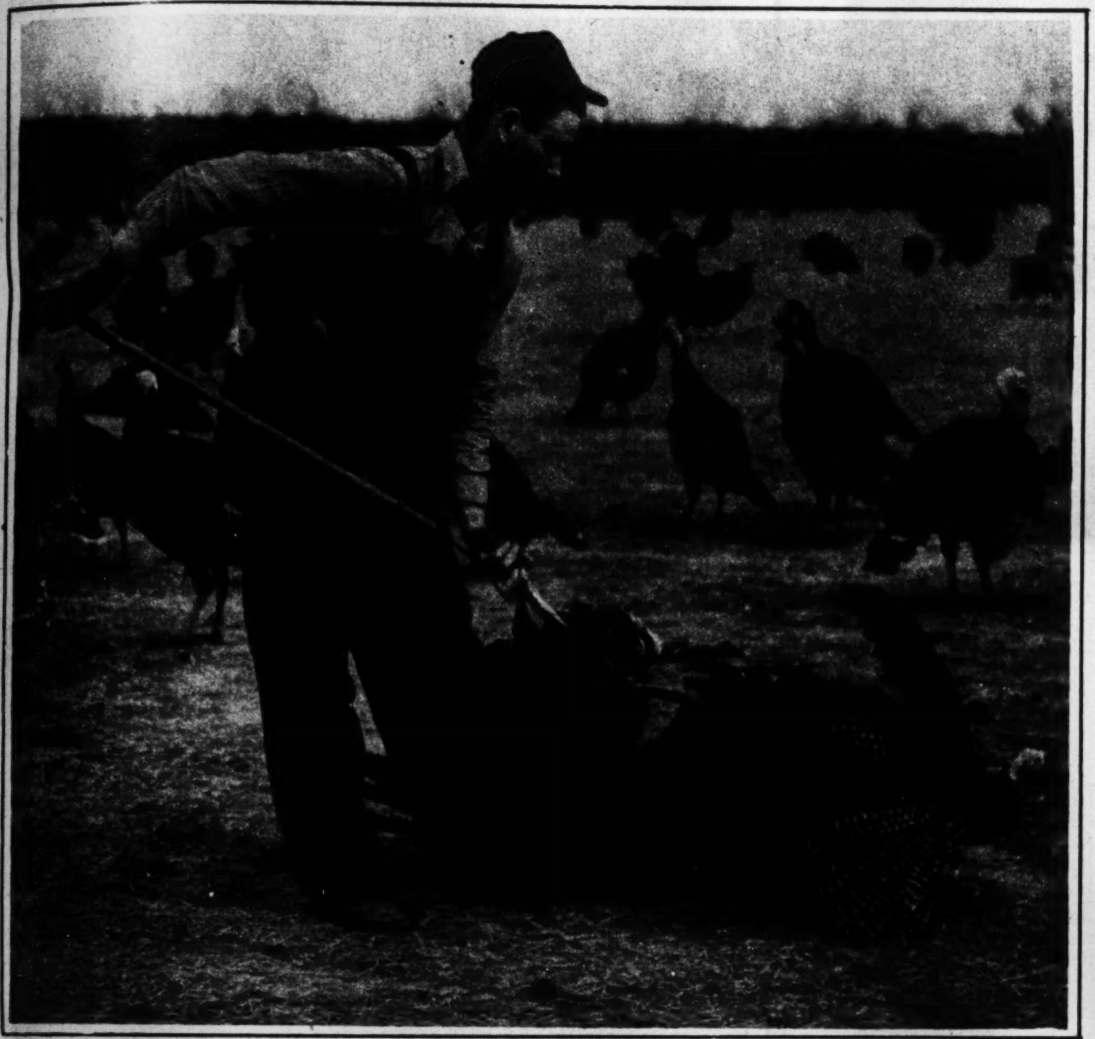
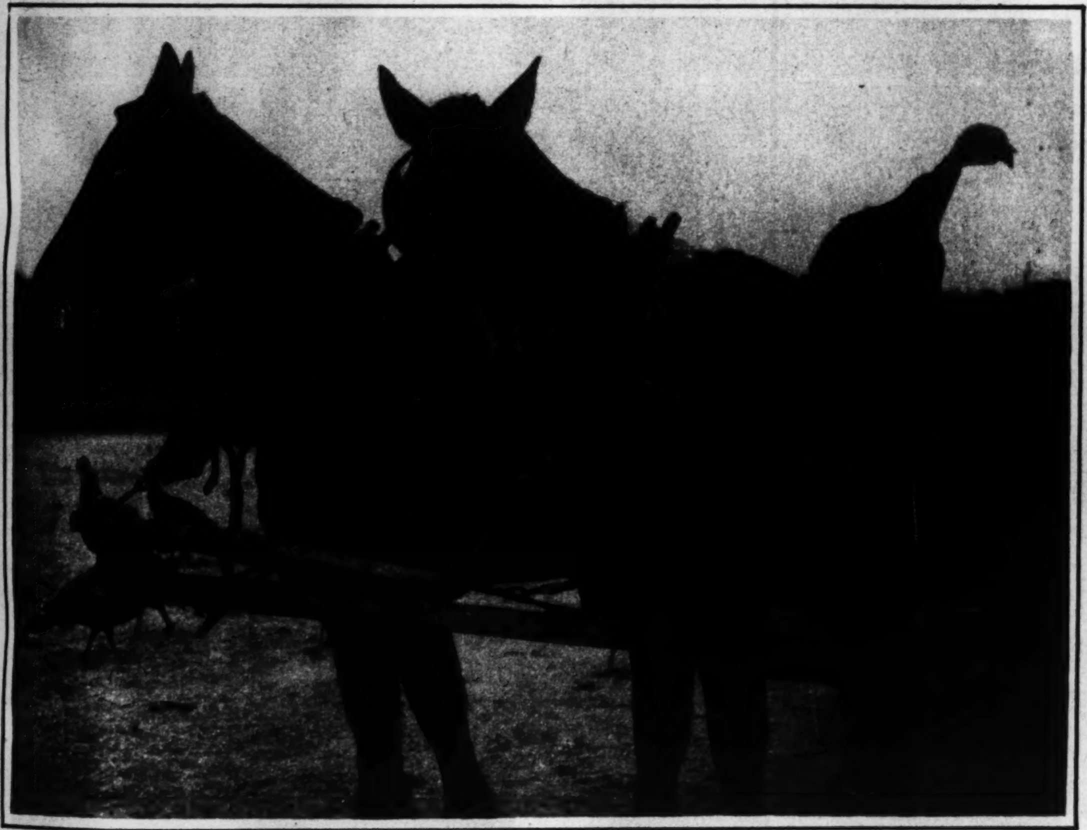
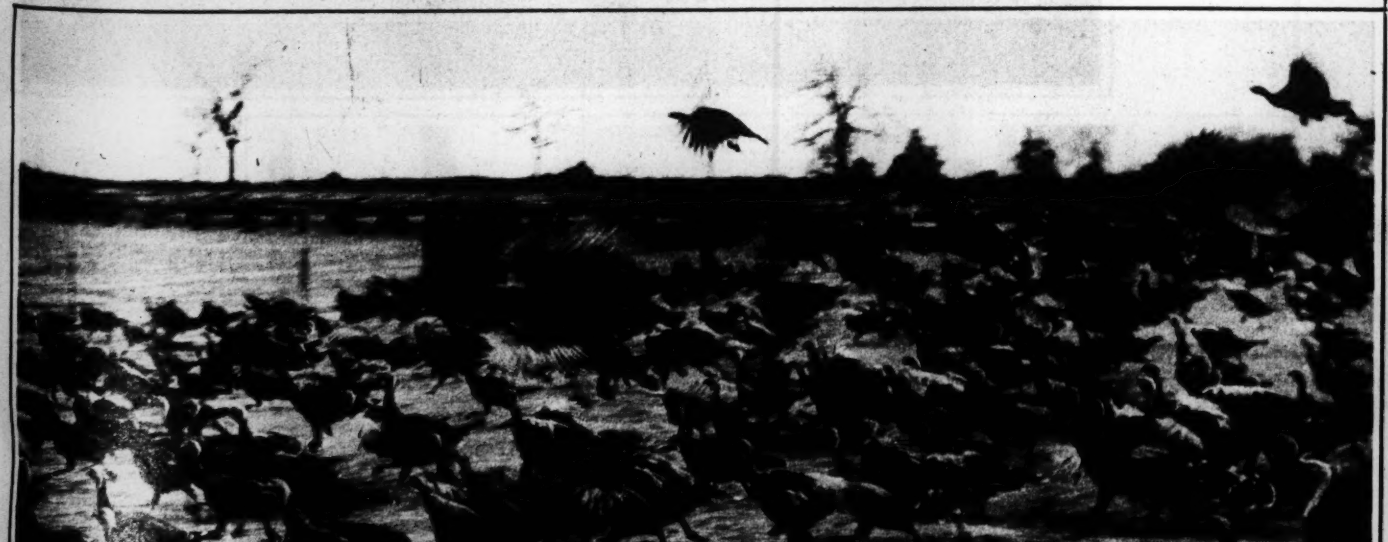
RAISING TURKEYS for THANKSGIVING



Hooking a bird on the turkey farm of Otto Hennecke near Owensville in Gasconade County, Mo. This is the manner in which the birds are captured. This farm ships about 10,000 turkeys yearly, the majority of them going to Thanksgiving and Christmas tables.



Turkeys will perch on almost anything. Here is one on the back of a farm horse.



The birds are easily stampeded. A passing airplane caused this rush.

Don't Wait to ALKALIZE

Get at the trouble the instant it begins

The longer you wait the more excess acid to neutralize. Take 1 or 2 small tablets you carry with you—that's the "Phillips" way

When you have "acid indigestion" the longer you let it go the worse it gets. That's why, for quick relief, many doctors advise you to alkalize the instant trouble starts, with Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

The only way to do this is carry your alkalizer with you. That's what thousands do now that genuine Phillips' comes in tiny, peppermint flavored tablets — in a flat tin for pocket or purse.

Then you are always ready. Use this way.

Take 2 Phillips' tablets — equal in "alkalizing" effect to 2 teaspoonfuls of liquid Phillips' from the bottle. At once you feel "gas," nausea, "over-crowding" from hyperacidity begin to ease. "Acid headaches," "acid breath," over-acid stomach are corrected at the source. This is the quick way to ease your own distress — avoid offense to others.

Try this method accepted by doctors generally — especially if you now are using less natural remedies. You'll think this way is marvelous—and it acts so quickly.

Be sure to ask for Phillips' — thus you get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia—either in tablet or liquid form — known throughout the world for its fast action.

CREAM OF WHEAT
1¢

"Gangway!"

America's most active burners of food energy are at it again!

Firemen? Better call them "incendiaries", the way little youngsters burn up precious food energy. They daily use up more of it for their size than grown-ups do. Each new morning finds them with their supply pretty well dwindled. That's what makes right breakfasts tremendously important for them . . . and Cream of Wheat so much in demand.

Muscle-building protein is supplied by hot Cream of Wheat. But far more important is the abundant quick food energy this cereal gives for play and work and growth. Your own doctor will undoubtedly tell you that. And as part of an adequate diet, Cream of Wheat also helps promote steady weight gains.

"Yum-m-m!" says young America . . . and downs 3½ million steaming bowls of Cream of Wheat daily. This grand cereal is digested rapidly, and leaves no logy feeling. Digestion begins in the mouth. That tempting flavor comes from the best hard wheat, sun-ripened in the most favored growing areas. It is then heat-treated and blended according to a formula proved by 42 years.

Low cost. Actually ½ cent pays for a generous serving of Cream of Wheat. This cereal cooks up to 6 times its original volume, so that each large package produces over 50 handsome helpings. Serve all the family Cream of Wheat—for quick food energy and for a balanced budget.

THEY'RE STILL TALKING

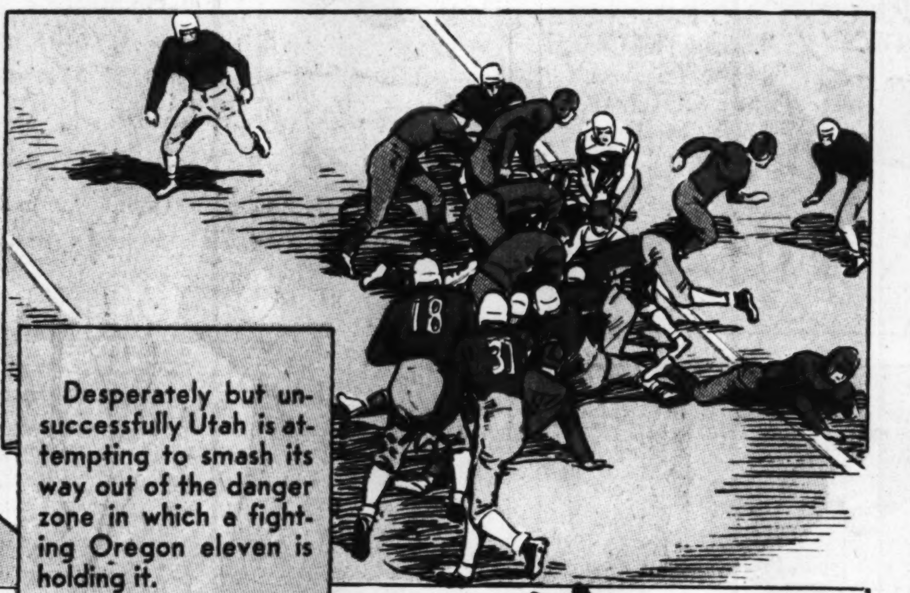
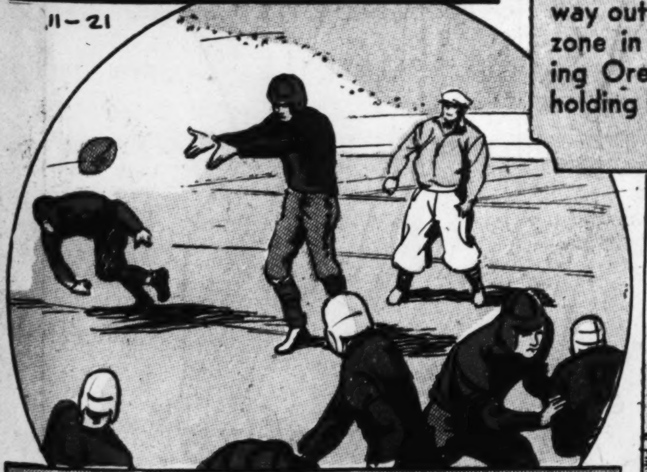
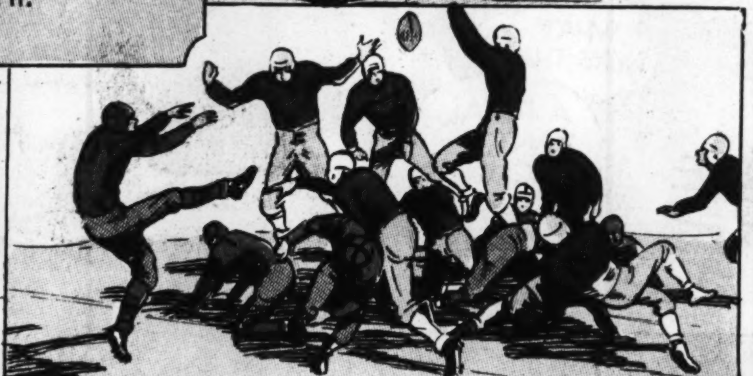
About That
Automatic Victory



Desperately but unsuccessfully Utah is attempting to smash its way out of the danger zone in which a fighting Oregon eleven is holding it.

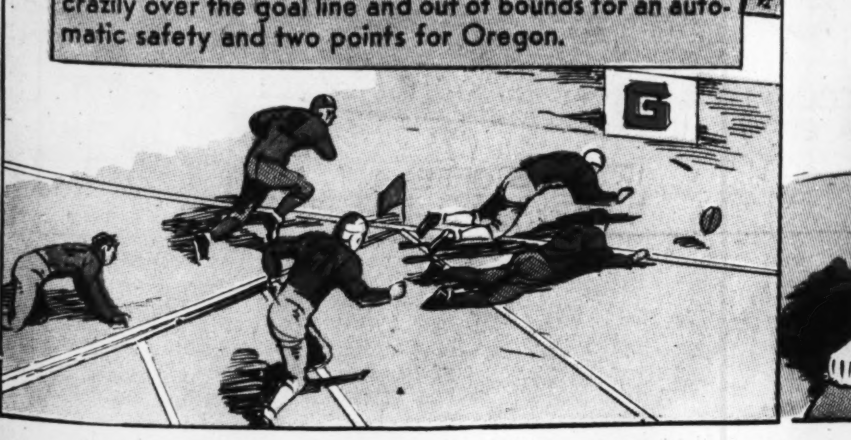


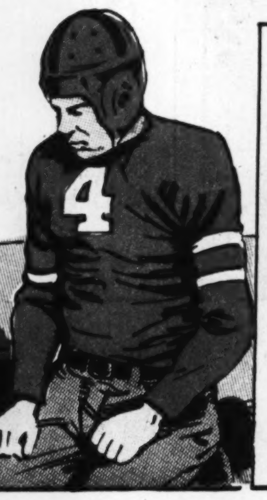
The score is tied, 6-6. There is but one thing to do. Boot the ball out of danger. So Arnett of Utah goes back to spiral one from Utah's 10-yard line.



But Oregon's forward surge that retuses to be stopped blocks that punt. The ball rolls toward the Oregon goal line.

Before any player can reach it, the ball bounces crazily over the goal line and out of bounds for an automatic safety and two points for Oregon.

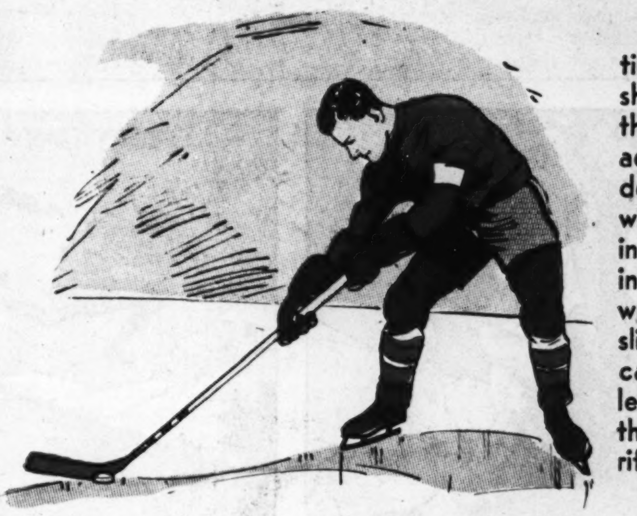




And this is Arnett, whose punt at Salt Lake City, Utah, that afternoon of Oct. 27, 1934, was turned by the whim of fate into a victory for Oregon before 22,000 excited fans.

Ice Hockey . . . . by NED BRANT

Technique



Here is a fine position for whipping a shot at the net. With the stick held flush against the puck, a sudden vigorous push with the right arm doing most of the pushing, sends the puck toward the objective. A slight lifting motion causes the puck to leave the ice and sail through the air at terrific speed.

While skating down the ice with the puck, a maneuver referred to as stick-handling, it is well to propel the rubber disc with this part of the hockey stick. Stick-handling is one of the prettiest maneuvers in ice hockey.

Helps People to SLEEP!

THOUSANDS of people are getting to sleep promptly at night and sleeping more restfully—thanks to Ovaltine.

These people are enjoying the more abundant energy which a good night's sleep brings. They enjoy life—to the full!

Ovaltine is not a drug. It doesn't dope you. It was originated as a food for convalescents and is still used for that purpose. But soon doctors discovered that, when taken at bedtime, it also helped people to secure sound sleep.

Now it is the world's favorite "nightcap." Here's what it does for you:—It helps you relax! It relieves that feeling of "Inner Tenseness" which prevents sleeping. Thus, you can get to sleep much more easily and sleep more restfully.

If you're not sleeping well, try this food-drink and see if you don't fall asleep more promptly. See if you haven't more "get-up-and-go" as a result.

Drink it regularly, every night, at bedtime—just mixing 3 or 4 teaspoonfuls in a cup of milk. Make it your regular "nightcap."

Don't endanger your health by failing to get proper, restful sleep. Don't impair your efficiency. Learn how much better you feel when you don't toss and turn half the night.

Give Ovaltine a really thorough trial. Get a can and begin tonight!

● OVALTINE is rich in vitamins, minerals and other important food elements. Over 1700 hospitals use it, in this country alone, and doctors approve it. . . . Thousands take it every night to help them to sleep . . . You can get it at grocery and drug stores wherever you may be.

WHAT GOOD'S A MOON LIKE THAT TO A GIRL WITH DISHWASHING HANDS?

I'M A HORRIBLE EXAMPLE OF WHAT DISHWASHING DOES TO HANDS ALL RIGHT, JUST LOOK!
BUT IT ISN'T DISHWASHING THAT MAKES HANDS RED AND ROUGH, MY DEAR!
YOUR HANDS SHOW THAT YOU'RE USING THE WRONG SOAP. I WASH DISHES, BUT I USE SUPER SUDS IN THE RED BOX. IT'S THE ONLY SOAP MADE SPECIALLY FOR WASHING DISHES--AND IT KEEPS HANDS MARVELOUSLY SOFT AND SMOOTH
YOU SEE, SUPER SUDS IS MADE DIFFERENTLY-- IN TINY HOLLOW BEADS THAT DISSOLVE INSTANTLY AND COMPLETELY. SO IT LEAVES NO UNDISSOLVED PARTICLES TO REDDEN AND ROUGHEN HANDS
THREE MONTHS LATER
YOUR RING IS LOVELY, DEAR--AND SO ARE YOUR HANDS!
YES, THANKS TO YOU! AND SINCE I'VE BEEN USING SUPER SUDS IN THE RED BOX I DO MY DISHES IN HALF THE TIME, TOO! IT GETS DISHES SO CLEAN THAT I JUST GIVE THEM A HOT RINSE AND THEY DRY SPARKLING-- WITHOUT WIPING!

OIL TRUST TRIAL EXTRAVAGANZA OF HIGH-POWERED LEGAL WARFARE

Seventy-five Lawyers Have Appeared for Defense in U. S. Court at Madison and Supporting Staff Runs Into Hundreds.

EIGHTEEN TONS OF PAPER EVIDENCE

Record Amounts to 6000 Typewritten Pages, 821 Exhibits — Government Attorneys Zealous, but Young.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 22.—A legal extravaganza, on a scale seldom equaled, went into its second act here today in the United States District Court. It is the trial of 19 oil corporations, including many of the largest, and 45 individuals, including some of the most prominent oil company officers, on charges of conspiring to increase the price of gasoline in 10 mid-Western states, including Missouri, in 1935 and 1936. Such a conspiracy is a violation of the Federal anti-trust laws.

The performance has now reached this stage:

The Government has presented all its direct evidence and has dismissed charges against four oil companies, three trade publications and one individual, which also were among the original defendants. Judge Patrick T. Stone, presiding at the trial today, directed a vote of acquittal in the cases of three defendant corporations and four individual defendants.

Judge Stone has refused to direct a general verdict of not guilty in the cases of all the remaining defendants, but is listening to arguments for dismissals in behalf of individual defendants. When those are concluded—probably this week—the defense will open its case.

Wide Scope of the Case.

Although this probably is the most important prosecution of its kind since the old trust-busting suits against the original Standard Oil Co., the "Beef Trust" and the "Tobacco Trust," its legal importance is not its most interesting aspect from a layman's standpoint. From that standpoint it is most extraordinary because of its scope and magnitude—the number of great concerns and wealthy individuals involved in it, and the incredible scale on which the prosecution and defense are organized.

This is not a lawsuit, but a legal war. A few of the more prosaic facts will serve to indicate the scope of operations.

The Government is represented on the ground by four special assistants to the Attorney-General and the local District Attorney, to whom presumably is available the machinery of the Department of Justice. In presenting the case to the grand jury, they subpenaed 18 tons of documents and called more than 100 witnesses. After the indictments had been returned, the legality of the grand jury was challenged, whereupon a new one was impaneled, the evidence resubmitted and another set of indictments returned.

Presentation of the Government's case to the trial jury occupied five weeks. It comprised more than 6000 typewritten pages of testimony and 821 exhibits.

Obviously, the foregoing comprises an attack on a large scale, but it sounds rather feeble when compared with the preparations made to meet it.

75 Defense Lawyers Appear.

Thus far, approximately 75 lawyers have appeared for the defense. That is, approximately 75 have actually appeared in the courtroom. The number engaged in writing briefs, interviewing witnesses, preparing evidence, and similar office work, undoubtedly runs into the hundreds—not counting clerks, shorthand reporters and typists.

Five law firms, representing defendants, have set up their own offices in Madison for the duration of the case. These are in addition to the "main office," or general headquarters, which occupy two floors of a building which formerly housed a large bank.

Although Madison, as capital of the State, is exceptionally well provided with hotels, they were quite inadequate to meet the incursion. Accordingly, to house defendants and lawyers who could not find
